Blum Offers French Labor 3-Point Plan To End Strike

40-Hour Week, Right to Deal Collectively Urged by Premier.

Spanish Walkout Involves 300,000

Belgium Sends Troops to Zones in Danger in Worker Unrest.

The European Situation.

With French strikers now numbering 600,000, Premier Leon Blum sped plans to appease labor, including a 40-hour week, in his efforts to end the industrial crisis. Belgium ordered troops to waterfront zones as shipping was paralyzed by a strike of 25,000 men. Rumors of a monarchist revolt were heard in Spain, as the nation's business was crippled by a strike of 300,000.

Labor Demands Met.

By the United Press.

Paris, June 5.—Premier Leon Blum today promised immediate legislation embodying some features of the American NRA to meet the demands of 600,000 strikers who have threatened the nation with industrial paralysis and a food shortage.

Meanwhile, strikes continued to spread wildly, gaining an additional 100,000 participants—many of them from the important coal mining district of Lille—after negotiations between owners and workers collapsed.

Industries now crippled by the nation-wide movement, some of them on the verge of ruin, include mining, metallurgical, armament, munitions, food stuffs, clothing, hotel, trucking, printing and cafe businesses.

To solve this situation, France's most difficult industrial problem since the World War, Blum outlined a three-point program which he will attempt to ride through Parliament in record time. It includes:

1. A 40-hour working week.
2. Vacations with pay.
3. The right of collective bargaining.

Blum's proposed legislation would take care of all but one demand made by the strikers. That is higher wages. Strike leaders have announced all four demands must be granted before the workers will return to their jobs.

Backs 40-Hour Week.

Speaking over a nation-wide hook-up, Blum, addressing the strikers, said, "Before I will allow the Chamber of Deputies to go on vacation, I will insist that a 40-hour working week, paid holidays and collective working contracts be voted."

Blum appealed for calm during the strike and warned against spreading false rumors. He urged employers to give "fair consideration" to the strikers' demands immediately.

"The government would deplore intransigeance on the part of the employers at this moment when a new cabinet is beginning to function," he said.

The strike and the assumption of power by the Popular Front government coincided with a steady growth in the flight of gold, most of which went to the United States.

$225,000,000 Shipped.

Approximately $225,000,000 in gold has been shipped to the United States in the last six weeks. The franc dropped to the theoretical gold point ten days ago and has remained there since, permitting American banks to buy at a profit.

The Bank of France gold reserve as of May 29 was $3,753,407,325, a reduction of $27,908,000 in less than

ARCHDUKE OTTO.

War Fears Rise As Otto Seeks Austrian Crown

Intensive Military Activity by Italians Reported; 2 Dictators Talk.

By the United Press.

Vienna, June 5.—Reports of intensive Italian military activity on the Austrian frontier tonight increased fears that restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty under protection of Italy's armed might is imminent.

These reports coincided with Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's lengthy conversation with Premier Benito Mussolini today at Il Duce's favorite retreat, Rocca Delle Caminate, Italy.

[The Archduke Otto was reported in Switzerland, near the Austrian border, awaiting the result of his appeal yesterday for the restoration of the Hapsburg throne, according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

Restoration of the Hapsburgs might result in a world conflagration. The Little Entente already has warned that it will oppose re-creation of the imperial house of Austria by force of arms. The French government has heard that Italy will assist in the restoration and protect Austria from any attempts to prevent it.

The South Tyrol News Agency reported that the Italian high command has ordered the evacuation of all schools in the Trentino District near the Austrian frontier by June 10.

Italy Builds Barracks.

The Italian general staff reportedly is making preparations for extensive summer maneuvers near the border and is building temporary barracks and sequestering land for construction of permanent barracks.

Hungary and Bulgaria reportedly are considering denunciation of the military clauses of the World War peace treaties at the insistence of Germany, further strengthening belief that an Italo-German-Austrian bloc in collaboration with several minor European states is in the making.

Political circles reported that one of Schuschnigg's first acts, following the recent coup d'etat in which he ousted Prince Ernst von Starhemberg as co-dictator, was to instruct foreign diplomats to inform their governments that "Austria intends to restore the Hapsburgs at her own pleasure—perhaps soon."

Otto Awaits Reaction.

Paris, June 5 (AP).—The Archduke Otto was reported in Switzerland near the Austrian border tonight awaiting the result of his appeal for the restoration of the Hapsburg throne, as a welter of guesses swelled along the diplomatic fronts.

Little Entente diplomats said the archduke, whose appeal to Austrians was made public in Vienna today, passed through France several days ago.

The Austrian legation insisted he was still in his Belgium exile, while French officials announced the Little Entente would be supported by France.

French officials were awaiting a report from the minister in Vienna and said France will uphold its Rumanian, Yugoslavian and Czechoslovakian allies in "whatever action" they decided upon "in the event Otto should return against their opposition."

Officials here saw the hand of Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhem-

30-Day Leave Is Approved By McCarl

But He Declares 5-Day Week Is Forbidden to U.S. Agencies.

7½ Days Off for Illness Also Available to Workers Now.

Controller General J. R. McCarl, whose authority covers working-time privileges of Government employes among other things, yesterday expressed himself on two questions submitted to him by the Civil Service Commission and the Works Progress Administration.

Answering the former, he ruled that 30 days annual leave and 7½ days sick leave are now available to Federal workers. The decision is applicable to virtually all of the hundreds of thousands of Uncle Sam's employes in Washington and in the field.

Turning to the query put by WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, who previously had distributed a questionnaire for an expression of his staff's opinion, McCarl held that existing law forbids a 5-day week in a Federal department or bureau.

Hopkins Changes Hours.

Shortly after receiving the controller's letter, Hopkins issued an order proclaiming new working hours for the clerical and administrative force here which will go into effect Monday. It provides for an 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. working day from Monday through Friday, with one hour for lunch, and an 8 to noon schedule on Saturdays.

The new routine will be in effect until September 26.

Hopkins had sought the opinion on his proposal to put the 2,200 WPA workers in the Capital on a 5-day basis without changing the present 39-hour per week output. A large majority of those answering the questionnaire, it was reported, favored this scheme, which was ruled out by McCarl as illegal.

Until now the WPA staff has been starting the day at 9 a. m. and quitting at 5 p. m., with one hour for lunch.

The new leave laws were enacted last March and were retroative to January 1, 1936, raising the question: How many days off on account of illness were Government workers entitled to between January 1 and March 14, when the new measure became law?

McCarl held that the law gives President Roosevelt discretionary power in disposing of this point, which might involve reimbursement of the Federal Government by employes who had overdrawn their leave.

Sick leave started from scratch on January 1 and it has been accumulating at the rate of 1¼ days a month, hence the total is now 7½ days, McCarl stated. Unlike annual leave, sick leave may not be taken in advance but only as it accrues, he added.

The new laws cut the sick-leave allowance from 30 days to 15 days per year but increased annual leave from 15 to 30 days.

The following classes of workers on Government pay rolls were held entitled neither to sick nor annual leave:

Per diem employes who are paid only when actually employed; per diem or per hour workers hired in an emergency; persons under contract whose service is not continuous; persons paid by the hour for non-construction work; employes paid on a fee basis, notably physicians and WPA workers on projects, but not including those doing clerical or administrative work.

So-called piece price personnel, meaning persons employed temporarily for a month or more, were held entitled to leave privileges. This phase of the ruling affects hundreds of workers, especially at the Treasury Department and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Speculative Deal Ban Is Ordered by Lloyds

London, June 5 (AP).—Lloyds ordered its agents today to henceforth refuse purely speculative business unless they were satisfied it was a legitimate interest covering risks.

The order was simultaneous with the decision of insurance brokers to accept a refund from Alfred Bates, advertising executive, and one of three men held guilty by a tribunal report in England's recent budget leak scandal. Bates had claimed the money in connection with insurances he placed against increased taxes, but explained he was returning the winnings made thereby in view of the tribunal report.

CAPT. JOHN MEADE.

Cannon, Planes Beat Ethiopia, Observer Says

U. S. Army Officer Who Accompanied Troops, Describes War.

In this interview with Capt. John Meade, the United States Army's official observer of the Italo - Ethiopian conflict, The Washington Post presents the first uncensored eye-witness account of the rout of the Negus.

By Samuel Lubell.

Shellfire, airplane bombing and the lack of organization on the part of the Ethiopians were given as the major reasons for the Italian victory in Abyssinia by Capt. John A. Meade, who was the United States observer in Ethiopia, in an interview yesterday.

For almost five months, from mid-December until early April when the Ethiopian armies collapsed, Meade flew, tramped and rode muleback through the northern provinces with Haile Selassie's soldiers as they strove desperately to check the invasion of Il Duce's legions.

He was at Lake Ashongi when the now-exiled King of Kings gathered all his remaining forces and made a futile gambler's bid for victory by hurling them against the artillery-bristling Italian lines. To cable the news of the rout, Meade drove more than 150 miles in a truck to Addis Ababa, for a time running a gauntlet of, and finally outdistancing, the defeat-crazed Ethiopians who later ran amok and attacked the British, French and American Legations in the Ethiopian capital.

Chieftains Rebelled.

The war, as described by Meade, who reported for duty to the War Department here this week, was a hopeless struggle of a backward, feudal country against a modern, industrial power; of single breech-loading rifles pitted against long-range artillery, machine guns and giant bombers.

Not only were there the overwhelmingly superior Italians to be overcome, but there were rebellious Ethiopian chieftains and their bands of marauding raiders to be fought off. Knowing no higher allegiance than loyalty to their tribal chiefs and eager to capture bullets and guns, which were virtually worth their weight in gold, thousands of the dusky-skinned savages harassed the movement of their "countrymen." More than once a retreat after a defeat at the hand of the Italians was turned into a rout by the buzzard-like swoops of the raiders, and bitter battles between the regular soldiers and those of hostile feudal chief were frequent.

"It seemed almost as if the Ethiopians did more fighting among themselves than with the Italians," remarked Meade.

Although Meade had made a previous visit to Ethiopia in 1930, it was not until his interpreter deserted him under fire, forcing him to learn Amharic, the language of the natives, that he came to appreciate how truly disorganized the former realm of the Conquering Lion of Judah was.

To sit around the Ethiopian campfire, listen to the talk of the soldiers recruited from different parts of the country and share in their crude foods meant constantly

Landon Camp Claims 400 First Ballots

Easy Victory Forecast by Hamilton, Manager of Campaign.

Most of Pennsylvanians Are Reported Ready to Back Kansan.

Political Developments.

The Landon forces at Cleveland last night asserted, for the first time, that Landon would have more than 400 votes on the first ballot for the Presidential nomination.

Opponents of the Kansas Governor called the estimate an "affront" to those who desire a "deliberative" convention.

There was increasing talk of Senator Arthur Vandenberg for the Vice Presidential nomination.

The National Committee granted two convention votes to the Philippine Islands, raising the total to 1,003.

Massachusetts Democrats, in State convention, indorsed Gov. James M. Curley for the United States Senate seat now held by Marcus Coolidge.

Maryland's delegation to the Cleveland convention prepared to depart today to boost Gov. Nice for the Presidential or Vice Presidential nomination.

Landon Claims Grow.

By Franklyn Waltman,
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, June 5.—John Hamilton, campaign manager for Gov. Alf M. Landon, replied to the sniping of anti-Landon forces tonight by predicting for the first time that the Kansan would receive "more than 400 votes on the first ballot" for the Republican Presidential nomination.

This claim on the part of the usually cautious and conservatively speaking Hamilton was tantamount to a prediction that his candidate would be nominated on the first ballot, which is the general opinion today among observers in and participants in the forthcoming convention.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, slated to be the Landon floor manager in the convention hall, earlier in the day asserted he did not see how the stampede to the Landon bandwagon could result in anything but a first-ballot nomination.

Attacked by Borah, Knox.

Hamilton, who until tonight had restricted his claim to the assertion that Landon would receive "more than 300 votes on the first ballot," spoke after managers for Senator William E. Borah and Col. Frank Knox had made attacks on the Kansan.

The Hamilton prediction chilled the Landon opposition, for they realized that if the Kansan passes 400 votes on the first ballot sufficient votes will be changed to make a majority before the result is announced. Former Senator George H. Moses, however, issued an indignant statement tonight, asserting that Landon's prediction was "an affront to those who desired a deliberative convention."

The youthful campaign manager for Landon earlier in the day asserted the charges emanating from the Borah and Knox headquarters "have brought some accretion in votes to Gov. Landon." He did not specify the additions but, later, dispatches from Harrisburg, Pa., reported that a majority of the Pennsylvania delegation, leaving for the convention city, were ready to vote for Landon on the first ballot.

It was the last-minute switch of the Pennsylvania delegation in 1928 that brought victory to Herbert Hoover that year. On that occasion the late William S. Vare delivered the delegation to Hoover, to the chagrin of Andrew Mellon, then Secretary of the Treasury.

It seemed today history was repeating itself. Former Senator David A. Reed, the titular head of Pennsylvania Republicans, is still sitting on the fence and appeared chagrined when informed of dispatches stating that his delegation had run away from him and hopped aboard the Landon bandwagon.

Nobody Authorized.

"There is nobody authorized to speak on behalf of the Pennsylvania delegation," asserted Reed. "I can't see how such a statement could be made. Surely nobody knows how I shall vote."

More surprising than this reported bolt of the Pennsylvanians to

Jobless Besiege Prison for Food

Kingston, Jamaica, June 5 (AP).—Envious of imprisoned criminals who were housed and decently fed, hundreds of unemployed men marched to Kingston Penitentiary today and asked the warden to take them in.

Declaring they were starving, a spokesman for the crowd said:

"We are willing to work for two meals a day you give your prisoners."

The warden, saying he was unable to feed them, advised them to await the opening of the public works office.

Police hurried to the scene, but there was no disorder.

The crowd moved to the Legislative Building, where members of the council informed a deputation that work on government projects would be started soon and the unemployed must be patient.

Davis Is Named Reserve Board 'Farm Member'

Tolley New Administrator of AAA; Schram, Illinois, Put on RFC Group.

Chester C. Davis, who piloted the Agricultural Adjustment Administration through its most difficult days, yesterday was nominated by President Roosevelt as the "farm member" of the new Federal Reserve Board.

Davis' nomination, sent to the Senate yesterday, and likely to be quickly confirmed, was for an eight-year term.

The President yesterday also appointed Emil Schram, of Illinois, to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board to succeed former Senator Hubert Stephens, of Mississippi, who resigned. The appointment is for the two-year term ending January 22, 1938.

Howard R. Tolley, the "soil wizard" who came from California to aid in formulating a new program to supplant the invalidated AAA last January, immediately was named by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace as AAA administrator.

2 Farm Planks Will Be Offered G. O. P. Session

Peek, Roosevelt's Ex-Aid, Helps McNary; Hope Also Drafts Plan.

Seeking a Republican platform alternative for the Administration's devitalized farm production control program, two independent farm planks were taking tentative form here yesterday, sponsored by minority farm leaders in both House and Senate.

In the background of these Republican farm studies moved the enigmatic form of George N. Peek, former trade adviser to President Roosevelt, who broke with the Administration over Secretary of State Cordell Hull's reciprocal tariff policies.

After numerous conferences with Peek and other farm leaders, Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary is expected to lay his three-way plan for meeting the farm problem before the Republican resolutions committee in Cleveland. It calls for cost of production for farmers through use of any one of three methods—domestic allotment, export debenture or the equalization fee.

A second Republican farm plank

President and National Leaders Join in House Rites for Byrns

By Sidney Olson.

Joseph Wellington Byrns, of Tennessee, lay in state yesterday before the assembled chieftains of the country he served for 28 years.

In a mahogany casket on a dais in the well of the House of Representatives, the Speaker lay, an American flag draping his coffin into bold relief against a solid bank of flowers.

On the stroke of noon, just 48 hours after Joe Byrns last convened the House, his gavel banged on its block, wielded by the hand of his friend of many years and successor as Speaker—William B. Bankhead, of Alabama.

The galleries were jammed to the doors, with admission by card only. Outside, in the June sunshine, hundreds stood, baring their heads as the council informed a deputation that work on government projects would be started soon and the unemployed must be patient.

Funebre," played by the United States Navy Band in the House lobby, swelled louder in the chamber as the casket was brought in and placed before the rostrum.

Members formed in a long line to file by the Speaker who overthrew all House traditions by being gentle where others had been harsh, by conciliating instead of dictating; who ruled with a smile as honest as it was benevolent.

All bowed their heads. Many wept.

At noon Speaker Bankhead cracked the yellow oak gavel and the House was convened in its first state funeral in history for a Speaker.

The Rev. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain, offered prayer "in praise of a statesman whose conscience was ever his pilot."

200,000 South China Soldiers Begin Trek Toward 'War' Zone

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Hongkong, (Saturday), June 6.—More than 200,000 South China troops, in half a dozen columns, were marching northward toward the Yangtse River Valley today to enforce an obscure war plan of the Canton and Kwangsi war lords which may lead to war between China and Japan.

The forces included the main armies of Gen. Pei Tsung-Hsi, ruler of Kwangsi Province, and Gen. Chen Chi-Tong, chief power in the southwest political council, with headquarters in Canton.

Ostensible motive for the movement was a decision of the council, which represents a coalition of the South China war lords, to force Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek and his Central China government in Nanking to join the southern forces in expelling the Japanese army from North China by force.

The southern leaders after a five-day conference in Canton, sent a circular telegram to all provincial leaders and to the Nanking government demanding a declaration of war against Japan unless Japanese forces are withdrawn immediately and announcing that a general mobilization of the armed forces of the southern provinces has been effected.

Chinese quoted Gen. Chen Chi-Tong as asserting that the only way China can prevent Japan from annexing the five North China provinces—Hopei, Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi and Shantung—is to expel the Japanese by force following a formal declaration. The southern leaders, however, will not declare war independently but will await a reply to their telegrams from Chiang Kai-Shek.

Boys Try to Hang 2 For Good Grades

Detroit, June 5 (AP).—Police broke into a barn today and rescued two boys who, they said, were about to be hanged by three other boys, for having good school records.

Lieut. Michael Larco said Raymond Buccellati, 9, a member of the lynching party told him: "We were going to do like the Black Legion does."

The lieutenant said that when the rescue party arrived Raymond Armando Serali, 14, and Joseph Angelo, 10, had knotted a rope around the neck of Albert Valenti, 11, and were about to push him from a second-story window. Joseph Ignogni, 9, lay bound on the floor and Lieut. Larco said he was to have been hanged next.

Police said school authorities told them the intended victims had excellent school records.

All of the boys and their parents were ordered to appear for questioning tomorrow.

Senate Votes Tax Bill Raising $829,000,000, Overriding Roosevelt

Way to Passage Cleared as Black, La Follette Drop Amendment.

Both Houses Move To Recess a Week

Couzens, Keyes Refuse to Act as Conferees; Ballot Is 38-24.

By Robert C. Albright.

Pruned of the President's corporate tax recommendations, the $829,000,000 "compromise" tax bill, carrying income tax increases and a 7 per cent surtax on undivided company profits, was swept to Senate passage last night by a 38 to 24 record vote.

The battle-scarred bill was sent immediately to conference, where the Administration will launch a new fight to restore steeply graduated rates on corporate earnings, sidetracked by the Senate.

Passage came at 9 p. m., after the Senate had been forced into a dreary night session by a last-minute deluge of individual amendments. The chamber had consumed just three days in consideration of the measure, setting a new speed record for revenue bill deliberation.

On the final vote, 36 Democrats joined with one Republican and one Progressive in support of the bill, while nine Democrats, 13 Republicans and two Farmer-Laborites voted "no." Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, was the lone Republican voting for the measure.

Two Conferees Withdraw.

New problems arose for the leadership, when two of the eight Senators named as tax conferees declined to serve on the conference committee — Senators James Couzens, of Michigan, and Henry W. Keyes, of New Hampshire (Republicans). Couzens said he was not in sympathy with either the House or Senate bill. Substitutes will be appointed today. The remaining six conferees are equally divided for and against the Administration's proposed corporate profits tax, embodied in the House bill.

The House is expected to appoint conferees on Monday, when both chambers will meet perfunctorily before a full week's recess is taken over the period of the Republican National Convention. A joint resolution was adopted by both houses authorizing the seven-day recess, in lieu of three-day recesses as previously planned. The House will not be in session today, but the Senate will return to consider non-controversial bills on the calendar.

Last night's drive for tax passage was designed to place the measure quickly in conference, where conferees will spend the entire convention period tussling with differences in the two measures. Majority Leader Robinson hopes it will be ready for final action when Congress returns on June 15.

Withdraw Substitute.

Way for approval was finally made when Senators Hugo L. Black (Democrat), Alabama, and Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, withdrew their Administration substitute applying stiff additional taxes on undivided corporate profits.

Black withdrew the Administration's corporate tax alternative at the suggestion of Senate Majority Leader Robinson after an informal poll indicated it would be badly defeated. Robinson pointed out that House and Senate conferees on the bill will have "wide latitude" and expressed the belief that a "satisfactory adjustment" can be worked out in conference.

Ostensibly designed to meet the Maryland Bloc Leaves Tonight For Cleveland

'Advance Guard' to Pave Way for Gov. Nice at G.O.P. Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 5.—The "advance guard" of the Maryland delegation to the Republican National Convention in Cleveland leaves here tomorrow night to pave the way for Gov. Harry W. Nice, the State's favorite-son candidate.

The majority of the delegation, including Gov. Nice, leaves Sunday night. O. E. Weller, national committeeman and a member of the party sub-committee drafting a platform, plans to leave tomorrow morning.

The advance delegation will carry with it batch of booklets presenting Gov. Nice to the convention as a candidate for the Presidential nomination. It actually bases any hopes it has on the Governor's aspirations for the Vice Presidency.

Talk of "Nice for Vice President" has been current in Republican circles for some months. Party leaders admit the aspirations, but will not be quoted directly.

Pledged to Gov. Nice.

The delegation is pledged to vote for Gov. Nice for President until released by him. The Governor has declined to say what action he will take or when he will release the delegation. He is waiting for developments.

Party leaders have not decided who will make the speech nominating Gov. Nice for the Presidency. The speech has been prepared, however.

Included in the advance guard leaving tomorrow night will be:

William P. Lawson, State chairman; Mrs. Lawson, Robert Irvin, executive secretary to the Governor; Miss Glayds Tarragano, secretary to the Governor; Mr. and Mrs. Harry O. Levin, Judge Marion Humphreys, Salisbury, and a party of newspapermen.

Sunday Night Group.

Included in the Sunday night delegation will be:

Gov. and Mrs. Nice, State Senator Wilmer F. Davis (Republican), Caroline; State Senator J. David Baile (Republican), Carroll, and Mrs. Baile; Roads Commissioner C. Nice Wilkerson, George R. Norris, Baltimore County leader; Mrs. Lulu Bowell, A. Stengle Marine, Cambridge, secretary to the delegation; Frederick H. Brown, Boxman, Md.; Mrs. Grace Hartnett, Walter A. McClean, Charles W. Main, Mrs. Mamie Howser, A. F. Muller and other newspapermen.

Platform

alternative attracting wide interest, because of the close relationship of the author with Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, will be submitted to the Republican resolutions committee by Representative Clifford R. Hope, of Kansas, ranking minority member of the House Agriculture Committee.

The Hope plank is designed to bolster farm prices by paying a direct subsidy to the farmer (on that portion of his crops consumed domestically) in an amount sufficient to equalize tariff charges on imported commodities the farmer has to buy. This tariff equivalent would be computed and paid directly to the farmer in addition to the price he receives for his goods on the market. Payments would be made out of the general funds of the Treasury.

Although this proposal sometimes has been referred to as the "Landon plan," Hope said yesterday the Kansas Governor never has "committed" himself to it. Hope added, however, that Landon is "interested" in the plan.

Divergence of Views.

A divergence of views, meanwhile, developed between Congressional Republicans over a G. O. P. relief plank said to be urged by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, aimed at turning back relief administration to the States, which would be aided by Federal relief grants. Neither Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, or Senate Minority Leader McNary, it is understood, would go along with any such plank, and there is some reason to doubt that Gov. Landon would accept it.

When the relief bill was before the Senate, Borah expressed himself as follows on the Vandenberg plan:

"I cannot believe that it is in the interest of economy or in the interest of better administration of the fund for one sovereignty to contribute the fund and for another sovereignty to administer it.

* * * I believe in holding those who ask for the money of taxpayers responsible for its economical distribution. I do not believe in this divided responsibility. It of itself begets waste and extravagance."

Bureau Drafts Plank.

As Republican farm plank proposals were whipped into form at the Capitol, for presentation at Cleveland, the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation met in Chicago to draft a farm plank of its own to be offered at both Republican and Democratic National Conventions.

Indications were that the Farm Bureau Federation proposals, not yet divulged, will be laid before the Republican resolutions group by a special committee on Monday.

Associated Press dispatches from Chicago said officials of the federation dropped a gentle hint to the two parties last night that the voting strength of the organization will be more powerful this fall than ever before.

W. R. Ogg, secretary-treasurer of the group, reported a "large increase" in the federation's paid membership above the 500,000 farm families in 37 States claimed last year.

Important Role.

Farm plank proposals emanating yesterday from Capitol Hill are sponsored by men who have long played an important role in formulating G. O. P. farm policies.

McNary, who early this session advanced his "three way" export debenture, equalization fee and domestic allotment plan, giving the Secretary of Agriculture the choice of one or all of the methods, is said by his friends to feel that his proposal not only would provide an adequate alternative to the Administration's "soil conservation" program, but would meet historic G. O. P. farm policies.

Colored Delegations Lose Contests; Brown's Dream of 'Lily-White' Parleys Near Realization.

By Franklyn Waltman

CLEVELAND, June 5.—Walter F. Brown's dream of 1928 of a "lily white" Republican Party in the South today is nearer realization than ever before in the party's history — even though Mr. Brown is hanging to his position as an influence within the party by a figurative fingernail.

WALTMAN

In the hearing of contests before the Republican National Committee during the last three days, the colored delegations from the South have been going down like tenpins before the roll of the ball. Some have managed to win approval for their delegations, but most have been rejected by the National Committee.

A "lily white" delegation—that is, all white persons—from Florida, headed by National Committeeman John F. Harris, was seated over the protest of a completely colored group. The "lily whites" from Louisiana won their contest. Those from South Carolina also won, although "Tieless" Joe Tolbert, the perennial convention goer, this time brought with him a mixed delegation—part white and part colored.

A notable exception to the apparent preference of the National Committee for the "lily whites" was seating the Mississippi delegation headed by Perry W. Howard, colored National Committeeman from that State. It also voted in favor of the suave "Bob" Church, Negro leader of Memphis, Tenn., over John E. McCall, a white man, who claimed he was kept from the Republican convention by armed deputy sheriffs.

This does not mean that the colored man is missing from the Republican National Convention this year. There are Negroes on some delegations which were not contested—and the colored voters will be represented by one or two members on other delegations, such as that from the District of Columbia. But there will be fewer Negroes in this year's convention than ever before.

Former President Herbert Hoover and his Postmaster General, Walter F. Brown, started the movement to reorganize the Republican Party in the South and to place in its leadership white men and women of responsibility. Both are now feeble figures within the party. Mr. Hoover has been asked to address the convention on Wednesday, but he does not intend to hang around unless he is asked, his secretary, Lawrence Ritchie, announced today.

Mr. Brown, once a mighty figure and the dispenser of Federal patronage, is now faced by a sharp contest within the Ohio delegation to retain his place as national committeeman. The best informed political observers here think he will pull through, but it will be by the skin of his teeth, it is asserted. He, too, missed the boat on the Landon candidacy.

One of the most humorous incidents which has occurred here during the preconvention activities was the publication by the Cleveland News of a photograph of "Tieless" Joe Tolbert, of South Carolina, with a black tie hanging from his collar. Since 1896 "Tieless" Joe has been a figure at Republican conventions and nobody has ever seen him with a tie. In fact, he never wore a tie—not even when he went to White House receptions back in the days of Republican Administrations.

So everyone who saw the newspaper picture was amazed. Indeed, times had changed if Joe was wearing a tie, some mused. But it was all a mistake. An artist who had never heard of "Tieless" Joe, took pity on the elderly old man without a tie—thought his family might not like it if it were published showing him without a tie. So he painted a nice broad four-in-hand under Joe's stubby gray chin. And it made "Tieless Joe" spitting mad when he saw it.

Everyone has heard politicians called dead. And in some places, so 'tis said, the names of voters are taken from tombstones for registration purposes. But this is believed to be the first time that any political convention has listed a delegate from a cemetery. He is Hughie Culbertson, "Highland Lawn Cemetery." Terre Haute, Ind. He is an alternate delegate from the Sixth Indiana District.

400 Votes for Landon Claimed

the Landon bandwagon was the appearance at Landon headquarters late today of emissaries from the Oregon delegation, with the suggestion that that delegation might bolt Senator Borah, to whom it is committed, and also indorse Gov. Landon. But they were told that the time had not yet come when they should desert Borah and declare for Landon—all of which left National Committeeman Ralph E. Williams, an Old Guard member, in a state of jitters tonight.

Charles D. Hilles, regarded as the chief of the "Old Guard" and national committeeman from New York, likewise is sitting on the fence, although word comes here from reliable sources that 60 to 70 of his delegation of 90 already have made up their minds to vote for Landon on the first ballot.

Hilles Not Informed.

Incidentally, it is reliably reported that although Connecticut's national committeeman, J. Henry Roraback, had announced before leaving Hartford, Tuesday, that his entire delegation would support Landon, he did not tell Hilles, who came out here on the train with him. The New Yorker read the announcement in the newspapers the next morning.

"Those fellows are pretty confidential with each other when they get together," one wag observed on hearing of this incident.

Meanwhile, talk of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg for Vice President on the Republican ticket continues. More attention now is being paid to the platform, with widespread and serious discussion of the proposal to commit the party to seek a constitutional amendment to strengthen the authority of States in dealing with acute economic problems. The movement is finding favor in high Landon quarters.

Certainly the Landon people do not feel antagonistic to the idea, as was reported around hotel lobbies last night. It was then reported that William Allen White's espousal of the idea had chilled some of the Landonites and that as a result he might not be the Kansas—and therefore Gov. Landon's—representative on the resolutions committee. White's statement that he did not want the place gave color to these stories.

White Is Elected.

But when the Kansas delegation met to organize today it quickly elected White as their representative on the resolutions committee, named former Governor and Senator J. Henry Allen as the chairman of the group and re-elected John Hamilton as national committeeman from the State. Mrs. Ralph A. Harris was selected as national committeewaman.

There is a general tendency here to leave the framing of the platform to the Landon managers and, while general discussions are in progress regarding farm, monetary, State rights, tariff, relief and balanced budget planks, they are not being hammered into final shape until the approval of the Kansans is obtained.

Former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, did not send the draft of a farm plank to the leaders here as was expected yesterday. Instead, he sent a memorandum outlining his ideas and copies of statements and speeches he had made on the subject to arrison Spangler, of Iowa. Noticeable opposition is developing, incidentally, to including in the farm plank schemes for subsidies, such as the export debenture, to be paid to farmers.

Meanwhile, the size of the convention grew by two votes when the Republican National Committee, after first displaying hostility to the proposal, voted, on motion of Committeeman R. B. Creager, of Texas, Landon spokesman in the contest hearings, to seat two delegates from the Philippine Islands. The convention now numbers 1,003, with 502 votes constituting a majority instead of 501 as previously.

Action Is Protested.

As the committee concluded its hearings of the contests, in which it decided to seat the Landon instructed Colladay delegation from the District of Columbia, C. M. Cotterman, committeeman from the Philippines, protested against the committee's action last winter in barring any delegation from the Pacific Islands because of the establishment of the commonwealth government there.

Cotterman argued that the Filipinos would not achieve independence from this country until 1945 and that furthermore, the committee had no right to refuse to seat a Philippine delegation inasmuch as the last convention had included the islands in the allocation of delegates.

At first Chairman Fletcher and other committee members appeared hostile to the idea, but when Creager—who has been making all motions in the contested cases for the Landon forces—espoused the cause of the Philippines the atmosphere quickly changed. Not only did Chairman Fletcher capitulate by pointing out that perhaps the committee had exceeded its authority, but when he put the motion to a vote there was only a sprinkling of "noes."

Other Pleas Rejected.

The committee, however, turned down all other pleas that would have resulted in adding to the size of the convention, even though they did not increase the total of votes. The committee completed its task of making up the temporary roll of the convention tonight. Contestants remaining unsatisfied with the committee's decision may carry their cases to the credentials committee next week and subsequently to the floor of the convention if they wish.

Hamilton started the day's activities with a statement at his press conference replying to the charge of Carl G. Bachmann, Borah campaign manager, that Landon was a New Dealer and that the Republicans for that reason should not nominate him.

"You could take the Bible and with a lot of asterisks and excerpts you could make the Devil out to be a saint," asserted Hamilton, referring to Bachmann's citation of excerpts from Landon statements.

"But that is not the point. During the first two years of the Roosevelt Administration, the Republican Party and Congressmen went through a period of self-abnegation in a spirit of patriotism and cooperation.

"It is to the credit of the Republican Congressmen—including Senators—that they did that. But a few hoped that the Roosevelt program would be unsuccessful. Of course, after we got to the point where the relief program was used for partisan political purposes there was a breaking away."

Asked at this press conference if he thought the "stop Landon" movement could become effective, Hamilton replied that "Landon's opponents do not seem to have a common interest or a common candidate."

Later in the day anonymous circulars were distributed in front of the principal hotels repeating Bachmann's contention that Landon was a "New Dealer" and asserting that "we can elect the right man, but not Landon—and you know it." The Borah headquarters denied any knowledge of the circulars.

Subsequently, former Senator George H. Moses, chief of the Knox strategy board, issued another blast at Hamilton, asserting that the Landon manager in his morning statement had made "an astounding confession."

First to Attack New Deal.

"He admits," asserted Moses, "that his candidate for the Presidency gave aid and comfort to the New Deal and participated in its benefits—until he became a candidate for the Presidency. That cannot be said of our candidate. Col. Frank Knox was one of the first to expose the fallacies and attack the hypocricies of the New Deal."

He added that "if the Republican Party intends to make the campaign—and to win it must—upon unrelenting opposition to President Roosevelt and the New Deal, it cannot start the fight with an apology." He asserted that "a campaign of apology" is a campaign of "defeatism" and that a "defensive campaign is a losing campaign." He called for a "fighting campaign" and asserted that "the record of the candidate must be such that he can lead the fight."

"It must be a champion who does not pull his punches," concluded Moses. "Knox is a two-fisted, hard-knuckled fighter. That is what the party needs."

Delegates who arrived here do not appear exercised over the Borah-Knox charges that Landon said a kind word about the New Deal relief projects in 1934. Indeed, some think that is a point in his favor and indicated he is not a political obstructionist.

"Won't Be Landon."

Wichita, Kans., June 5 (AP).—If Gov. Alf M. Landon becomes the Republican Presidential nominee at Cleveland next week, Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War and Landon's predecessor as Kansas chief executive, will be host to 60 guests at dinner.

"I made that bet with Joe Byrns (late Speaker of the House', and another friend the other day," Woodring said.

Woodring confided he expected the nomination to go to a man who has been little mentioned. He declined to say who he thought the "dark horse" would be.

"If I told you, you would think I'm crazy," he said.

But he added emphatically, "the nominee will not be Landon."

Utah May Shift Votes.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 5 (AP).—Alan S. Tingey, Utah Republican State chairman, said today the State's uninstructed delegation at Cleveland may throw its eight votes to Gov. Alf M. Landon if it appears the Kansan can win the Presidential nomination on the first ballot.

Tingey, pausing here en route to Cleveland, said he would "not be surprised to see a complimentary vote for Senator William E. Borah, circumstances permitting."

Liquor Power Rules Parties, Colvin Asserts

Dry Presidential Nominee Calls on Voters to End 'Rum' Domination.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 5.—Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, Presidential nominee of the Prohibition Party, declared in his acceptance speech tonight the Democratic and Republican parties "are more subservient to the liquor power than ever before."

"It is time to revolt," he declared. "Conditions have gotten bad enough—far too bad. We must not wait until they get still worse. Another four years and millions will have been wrecked body and soul. It is time to attack. I sound the bugle call to charge."

The only way to overcome present conditions and to bring back prohibition, Dr. Colvin, said, is for the "decent, patriotic, humanity-loving citizens of America to unite in a political party to obtain control of the Government from precinct to Nation."

The party slogan, he said, should be "Pulverize the Rum Power."

Domination Complete.

Speaking over an N. B. C. network, Dr. Colvin asserted:

"So complete is the domination by the liquor power, that in the last three years practically every vestige of Federal antiliquor legislation has been wiped out and nearly all of that in the States."

"Since both old parties have gone dripping wet they have demonstrated themselves unworthy of our support," he declared, "the abandon with which both old parties have embraced the liquor policy should cause every good citizen to renounce and scorn them.

"We must marshal the good citizens of this country in a united party devoted to the saving of America. Long study of this problem as well as the other social, economic and political problems confronting America has convinced me that there is no method short of building a triumphant Prohibition Party which can overcome the liquor power."

Victory Possible.

He declared the party could win in November "if the people can be made to realize the seriousness of the tremendous issues at stake." The Probhibition Party, he said, pursues a middle course," it is not reactionary, neither is it socialistic."

Dr. Colvin was nominated at the party's national convention at Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 7.

Other speakers at the notification ceremonies were Edward E. Blake, of Chicago, chairman of the party's national committee; William F. Varney, of Rockville Centre, Long Island, a former Presidential nominee of the party; and J. Raymond Schmidt, of Washington, D. C.

A Vice Presidential nominee has not yet been named.

Colladay Slate Seated

without any argument within the committee. Each side had consumed 20 minutes in presenting the case, which revolved around the true residence of Francis Wells, a colored delegate to the District convention last month, as well as one of the delegates on the Colladay slate to the Cleveland convention.

The Colladay forces made a last minute surprise move when they produced an affidavit from a Washington clergyman asserting he had received $5 for a previous affidavit which he had given to the Rover faction asserting that Wells lived at an address different from that claimed for him.

Going into executive session after hearing the District of Columbia contest, the national committee first voted on a contest from Alaska. This seemed to give the committee some trouble for they deliberated over it some time.

But the District of Columbia contest appeared to be an easy problem for the National Committee. No sooner had the Alaska contest been decided than Mrs. Sidney C. Brown, National Committeewoman from Florida moved that the Colladay group be seated. Mrs. Brown, after making her motion, offered to make an argument in its behalf, but was shut off by cries of "Vote, vote." Chairman Henry P. Fletcher immediately called for a standing vote. The division reliably was reported to have been 50 to 31.

Those whose names were placed on the temporary roll by the committee's action were James C. Wilkes, Miss Mildred Reeves and Wells, delegates, and Charles H. Galliher, Mrs. Cooper Rhodes and J. Franklin Wilson, the last three alternates.

If the National Committee's action is sustained next week, Colladay and Mrs. Virginia White Speel will continue for four more years as the National Committeeman and Committeewoman, respectively, from the District of Columbia.

Seating of the Colladay delegation added three more votes to the column of Gov. Alf M. Landon. This delegation was instructed for Landon, while the Rover group came as an uninstructed delegation, professing friendliness for all candidates and determined to vote for the man with the best chance of being nominated.

William P. MacCracken, secretary of the American Bar Association and former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, presented the arguments on behalf of the Rover delegation. This group included Joshua Evans, jr., Miss M. Pearl McCall and Dr. C. Herbert Marshall, as delegates, and Paul E. Shorb, Mrs. Edmund H. Parry, jr., and West A. Hamilton, as alternates.

D. C. Methods Explained.

MacCracken, after explaining how the Republican Party functions in the District of Columbia, declared that his group came to the convention "representing majority and regularity."

In substantiation of his claim that the Rover-Evans delegation represented the "regular" Republican organization of the District, he pointed out at his table and as supporters of this contention Rover, as the chairman of the State committee; Claude W. Owen, as the vice chairman, and Evans as the secretary.

He also asked to arise Samuel J. Prescott, whom he termed "the father of the Republican Party in the District and its counselor for life." Prescott's appearance with the Rover group was construed to mean that he had concluded that faction was right in its claims.

MacCracken further explained that the difficulty among the District Republicans grew out of the unseating of Francis Wells, a delegate to the April 30 meeting of the 43 delegates-elect. By unseating Wells the Rover-Evans forces were given control of the selection of the delegation to the national convention.

The former Assistant Commerce Secretary maintained that Wells was justly unseated, since he did not live in the section from which he was elected. He contended that Wells claimed to live on Fourth street northwest, but that documentary evidence showed he lived on Sherman avenue. In substantiation of this claim he presented photostatic copies of applications for an automobile registration and affidavits from various persons.

Asserts Colladay Walked Out.

Consequently, he claimed, when Colladay and his friends left the District convention he was "not strong-armed out, but walked out," because he realized that his forces were outnumbered.

"If you stand for regularity and for majority rule and if you think that the Republicans of the District of Columbia should have the right to handle their own affairs, you will seat this delegation," asserted McCracken, pointing to the Rover-Evans group.

Paul E. Lesh commenced the argument on behalf of the Colladay group. He said the "case against us is one of stealthy surprise, sprung on us at the last minute, plus the barring of the doors to us of the meeting held on May 7." He said that the contest against Wells was not brought until a few hours before the April 30 meeting.

He explained that Wells was separated from his wife, but was on friendly terms with her. She lived at the Sherman avenue address and Wells frequently visited her there. But Wells, he argued, had lived for many years on Fourth street.

Colladay made the closing argument for his side. He insisted that Wells, to his personal knowledge, lived on Fourth street and then pulled the surprise of the meeting. He read an affidavit from a Washington clergyman asserting he "received $5" for an affidavit to the Rover group saying Wells lived on Sherman avenue.

"Well, this man has made four affidavits," asserted McCracken. "He swore in April that Wells lived on Sherman avenue. Then on May 4 he recanted that affidavit in one to the other side. On May 14 he recanted his second affidavit in one to us, and now it seems he again recants. He is on both sides of the fence twice."

"Did he get $5 for each affidavit?" asked Mrs. Worthington Scranton, national committeewoman from Pennsylvania, as the committee burst into a roar of laughter.

"I don't know," replied McCracken. "He did not get any money from me."

Both sides presented printed briefs to the committee, the Colladay brief being much more voluminous than that of their opponents. The Colladay brief contained copies of a number of affidavits averring that Wells lived on Fourth street. Associated with Lesh in the preparation of this brief was Joseph C. McGarraghy.

Curley Is Given Rally Support In Senate Race

Control of Massachusetts Democratic Convention Denied by Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Mass., June 5.—Gov. James M. Curley won indorsement by acclamation tonight of the Democratic State convention for the party's nomination for United States Senator.

No candidates were presented to the convention in opposition to Curley, although earlier Mayor Robert Greenwood had announced he would vote for United States Senator Marcus Coolidge, whose seat Curley seeks.

Greenwood, however, did not nominate Coolidge. As the crowd burst into cheers for the convention indorsement of Curley, Greenwood leaned over to the press table and said: "You can quote me as saying they (the delegates) didn't dare vote."

Curley, in accepting the nomination, declared: "At no time have I attempted to dictate or control this convention. At no time have I solicited the vote of a single delegate, personally, for this office to which I am a candidate.

"In common with all other candidates I learned the futility two years ago of a controlled convention. I want to see a nomination by this convention of some value. It is valueless if dictated."

Two years ago Curley lost the pre-primary convention indorsement for Governor to Gen. Charles H. Cole, but ignored the convention result and defeated Cole in the fall primary.

Coolidge has not announced whether he would seek re-election or ignore the convention's indorsement and fight for the party nomination in the September primaries. He is not attending the convention.

Conferees Vote Ban on 'Unfair' Chain Practices

Also Indorse Amendment Permitting Suits in Any U. S. Court.

Legislation designed to protect independent retail merchants from "unfair" chain-store competition was agreed upon yesterday by Senate and House conferees, and the conference report embodying a compromise between the Robinson-Borah-Van Nuys bill, passed by the Senate and the Patman bill passed by the House probably will be taken to the Senate today, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, announced yesterday.

The conferees agreed to accept the enforcement provisions of both bills. The Borah-Van Nuys amendment provides that suits charging unfair trade practices may be brought in any Federal district court and individual Federal judges are empowered to make findings and issue injunctions to prevent such practices. The original Robinson-Patman bill vested all authority in the Federal Trade Commission, and the conferees agreed that the commission shall have concurrent jurisdiction with the courts. Thus the injured party may take his choice on where he will go for redress.

Prohibitions against price reductions to chain stores because of the large size of orders are contained in the final agreement, as are fake brokers' rebates and advertising allowances. No anti-basing point provisions are included, and manufacturers are permitted to continue present price-fixing methods, using price-plus-freight-rate from various strategic points in the country.

Senator Van Nuys, one of the authors of the bill, was jubilant over adoption of his and Senator Borah's amendment. "It will save the independent merchants of the West, and others far removed from Washington, hundreds of thousands of dollars a year," he declared, "because they can go directly to court without the expense of a preceeding before the Federal Trade Commission. I believe this provision will aid greatly in enforcing the fair-trade provisions of the bill."

Van Nuys said he expected the final report to be ready late today.

300,000 Out, Royalists' Coup Feared in Spain

Leftist Regime Is Reported Ready to Take Over Country's Railways.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, June 5.—Strikes, fighting and rumors of a monarchist revolt shook a harassed Leftist government tonight in Spain.

Despite the government's outlawing of strikes as a labor weapon, industry in many parts of the country remained paralyzed with nearly 300,000 workers out.

Added to labor troubles was a new problem—a report that arms for royal revolutionists were being smuggled into Spain from France.

Alfonso Mallol, director of public safety, and three platoons of police hurried to Pamplona, where the report originated. A house-to-house search began, and one man, Lieut. Col. Alejandro Utrilla, prominent in monarchist activities, was arrested immediately. He retired recently from active military service.

The government of Premier Santiago Casares, fulfilling threats to use firm measures to restore normalcy, ordered workers' centers closed in Lebrija, in Sevilla Province, and arrested members of the strike committee, meanwhile declaring a general strike "illegal."

May Take Over Roads.

The government was reported seriously contemplating assumption of control over all Spanish railways to bring an end to recurring interruptions of service caused by strikes and other labor difficulties.

The cabinet was understood to have agreed to draft a general proposal to this end, to be discussed in its session next Tuesday.

The government's position was given that inasmuch as its intervention was made necessary in almost every case involving rail labor troubles it would be advisable to take over direct control.

Approximately 30,000 workers joined the strike movement when coal miners in the Asturian Basin laid down their tools and demanded back pay of 12,000,000 pesetas ($2,460,000), plus bonuses.

Five hundred miners still were entombed in a coal mine near Antolin, in Pennarroya Province, where they have been since May 26, protesting against working conditions.

Other Sevilla towns were in the grip of a general strike, but employers were hopeful of a compromise. Fascists and Communists clashed in scattered sections and a number were injured.

Luciano Malumbres, editor of the Socialist newspaper La Region, died today from wounds received yesterday. Several alleged Fascists were arrested at Santander and charged with the shooting.

Two persons were injured in a Madrid cafe when a bomb exploded.

Parliamentary troubles also were on hand. Rightist opposition members withdrew following a dispute over a project to substitute priests with laymen in schools and colleges run by religious orders. Bitter attacks were made in the debate preceding the walk-out.

Rumors that a cabinet crisis might be precipitated continued to circulate, but official sources vigorously denied their foundation.

Ethiopian War

new revelations of the depth of the native's primitiveness and backwardness.

There was virtually no military organization, the armies being recruited according to feudal tradition. Each "ras," or provincial chief, was expected to muster a certain number of soldiers for the Emperor's army, the "ras" in turn setting quotas for the lesser chieftains and tribal leaders. Food was plentiful, but the military equipment of the soldiers was pitiful, most of the natives being armed with pre-Spanish-American War single, breech-loading rifles with a maximum range of about 200 yards.

Trained in hand-to-hand fighting, the natives knew nothing of maneuvering and were impatient at the attempted strategies of their more competent military leaders. The way to fight was to get up close to the enemy and use rifle and knife, they felt. It was this impetuous clamor for battle that forced Selassie to take his gambler's chance on the banks of Lake Ashongi.

For all their pitiful military equipment, the Ethiopians felt themselves superior to white men. Probably it was because of the memory of the Italian defeat at Adowa. Not until Meade had demonstrated his "manhood" by marching uncomplainingly alongside of the natives, and by holding his own with them in drinking and eating, did they grudgingly accept him as an equal. But always there was a latent hostility to the white man—a hostility which Meade found shown repeatedly in the duplicities of the natives—and which, after the defeat, boiled over into a frenzied hatred that was vented against all foreigners in the country.

In battles with their own kind the Ethiopians fought bravely and skilfully, but with the Italians the natives never had a chance. The constant bombardment of the artillery guns and airplanes was more than their primitive nerves could stand and the natives seemed constantly on the run.

There were several days, Meade recalled, when three giant bombers soared continuously over Dessye, dropping their loads of 4,000 pounds of bombs, all through the day and into the night, forcing the trembling natives to scurry under trees and rocks, quivering each time a bomb shook the ground.

Surprised by Rapid Victory.

"Airplane bombing and artillery fire won the war for the Italians," declared Meade.

Despite the superiority of the Italians, the swiftness with which they marched to victory was surprising to Meade. Considering the rough character of the region and the difficult climate, the Ethiopians should have been able to hold out at least a year or two and possibly three. In the Danakil desert the sun sent the temperature up to 140 degrees while in the relatively cool mountains the mercury hovered around the 90 degree mark. At night the temperature in the mountains would fall to 60 degrees.

So rough was the terrain and so hot the sun that Italian tanks proved worthless and were discarded by Marshal Badoglio when he succeeded to the command of the Italian army. Meade recalled seeing one Italian tank crew taken prisoner, the soles of whose shoes had been burned by the terrific heat in the tank.

All water and vegetables had to be boiled, and dysentery was a common ailment even among the Ethiopian troops. The swamps were thick with mosquitos—Meade himself was stricken with a slight malarial fever but recovered after using a special mixture of quinine prepared by the Army doctors in this country—and the rest of Ethiopia was overrun with fleas.

Meade started out with a pack train of 17 mules, 12 servants, 1 interpreter and provisions for 60 days. He never moved out of a city without provisions for at least 30 days. For fresh food, he shot game on his way, ducks, guinea fowl, wild boars and gazelles being plentiful. Occasionally when eating with natives, he had to partake of raw meat to be sociable.

Haile Selasse impressed Meade as an intelligent monarch, who from the outset appreciated the worth of the defenses given the country by nature. Through the early months he managed to curb the impetuosity of his soldiers, but finally his leaders forced him into gathering his forces for a pitched battle—an error that proved fatal. His army was routed by artillery, the natives fleeing in straggling groups.

When Meade was sent to Ethiopia he was given a list of questions by the War Department that were to be answered in his report. Among the questions were such as, How many trucks did the army use? How did they distribute ammunition? What maneuvers did they employ? How did they distribute their men? All questio... highly appropriate to war as waged by modern countries, but which, as Meade pointed out laughingly, in the case of the Ethiopian army could be answered with a single zero.

"I'm afraid my report will be a bit different," he smiled. "But then it was that kind of a war."

dicated that Pei Tsung-Hsi, former military governor of Peiping, where he gained the sobriquet "The Communist Killer," was the real instigator of the Northern expedition and that Chen Chi-Tong was lukewarm toward the plan but agreed to join the expedition in fear Pei might occupy Nanking, oust Chiang Kai-Shek, and seize the rich revenues which the Nanking regime controls in the central and lower Yangtse valleys.

The position of Chiang Kai-Shek was believed to be precarious. He will not dare to refuse to join in an anti-Japanese expedition, because of the violent anti-Japanese feeling throughout China, and equally he dares not attack the Japanese because of the certainty he would be defeated, leaving the way clear for establishment of pro-Japanese regimes throughout China.

The next few weeks, observers believed, will be occupied with political and military maneuverings between the various Chinese factions. The possibility that Chiang Kai-Shek may be forced to resign, as he did after the split in the Kuomintang government at Hankow nine years ago, was foreseen in some quarters. If he does resign, it was santicipated he will establish headquarters in one of the treaty ports or in some nearby foreign country and await a chance to return to power after reaching some agreement with Japan.

Anti-Japanese agitation in Canton was increasing and Japanese nationals there were reported ready to flee the city. Japanese destroyers were anchored in the Pearl River off the Canton bund.

British and Japanese agents throughout China were watching developments carefully, the British fearing Japan may take advantage of the situation to extend her influence in the Yangtse Valley and South China, where Britain long has been dominant, and the Japanese fearing Britain will give indirect support to a Chinese attack on Japan in the north, in an effort to regain lost British markets in the North China provinces and Manchukuo.

It was anticipated the United States will avoid any indication of sympathy or opposition to any of the Chinese factions. The United States Embassy in Peiping professed to be without information about press reports that two American bluejackets, from the U. S. S. Blackhawk, had been detained near Shanaikwan for photographing Japanese troop movements. The sailors, members of a party of nine headed by Lieut. Raymond A. McLellan, were released after explanations. Their camera films were destroyed.

A British military court in Peiping, following repeated Japanese representations, agreed today to investigate charges a Japanese soldier, killed in a street fight late last month, met his death at the hands of members of the British Embassy guard.

Austrian Monarchy Crisis

berg in Otto's appeal which was made in the form of a letter. They expressed the belief the ousted vice chancellor was seeking to create difficulties for Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's government in the hope of regaining power for himself and his Heimwehr followers.

"Agreement" Discounted.

Reports of an agreement between Premier Mussolini of Italy and Schuschnigg for the restoration of the Hapsburgs were discounted by officials. They said both statesmen "fully understand" that the Little Entente would go to war if the Austrian throne is restored.

In Vienna Baron von Wiesner, legitimist leader, made public as an "imperial letter," a communication which Otto wrote from Belgium.

"It is high time for decisive action," it read. "I am ready at any hour to return to the fatherland and give Austria its old unity, power and happiness."

The letter further confused the political situation.

Chancellery officials in Vienna termed the reports of the imminence of restoration of the scholarly Otto as "ridiculous." Another pointed out, however, that Mussolini and Schuschnigg might discuss the question of a plebiscite to determine the people's desire in the matter.

Germany's views about such an important concession as a people's vote were unknown, but it was understood that the Reich, in return, would insist on amnesty and a return of the 35,000 Austrian Nazi fugitivies now living in German exile.

Two Dictators Confer.

Venice, June 5 (AP).—The dictators of Italy and Austria talked over today what they will do if Italy quits the League of Nations because of sanctions.

Immediately after being closeted for two hours with Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, Premier Mussolini returned to Rome. He will review a huge military parade Sunday.

If Italy leaves the League, a reliable source indicated, Il Duce will try to form a new European front, bringing Germany into an accord with Italy and Austria.

Schuschnigg is understood to have asked Il Duce what his own and Austria's status would be in case of an Italo-German affiliation. Thus far Austria has sternly combated Nazism with the aid of Il Duce, Austria's "protector."

Mussolini, it was reported, assured the Austrian leader that Italy is as strong in Europe from a military standpoint as she was before the war in Ethiopia began.

Schuschnigg started back for Vienna tonight. His trip here had been officially described as one for his "health."

Mussolini, well-informed circles said, is prepared for war or peace as clouds of distrust and rivalry hang over Europe and the Mediterranean.

Sanctions Up June 30.

Geneva, June 5 (AP).—The League of Nations fixed June 30 as the day to air the danger-laden Italo-Ethiopion problem as Geneva sources expressed concern today over reports Italy would hold army maneuvers soon.

These exercises will be held far in advance of the usual autumn maneuvers, it was understood.

This step was regarded here as a warning by Premier Mussolini that sanctions must be lifted.

Observers are closely watching the relations between Italy and Great Britain and are especially eager to learn what steps Britain will take here June 30.

Parents Join in Hunt For Wife of Veteran

A hunt was under way yesterday for Mrs. Sara Righter, 18, who has been missing since Wednesday night. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gamble, parents of the girl, arrived here yesterday from Tarentum, Pa., to aid in the search.

Mrs. Righter is the wife of Garret Righter, Wrld War veteran. Righter has been confined to Walter Reed Hospital for the last three weeks and his wife has been working at the quarters of an officer at the hospital in order to be near her husband. She was last seen when she left the officers' quarters Wednesday night.

Belgium Sends Guard to Zones Of Strike Peril

Harbor at Antwerp Closed to Inward Sea Traffic; Deadlock Likely.

By the Associated Press.

Antwerp, Belgium, June 5.—Fixed bayonets were added to the strike picture here tonight as troops were rushed to danger zones, where unrest was growing.

The gendarmerie patroled the water front, the authorities exerted efforts to prevent the spread of strikes in the Communist centers of Liege and Charleroi.

Inward traffic in Antwerp Harbor was suspended, and new strikers joined the dock workers in walkouts.

The situation now has assumed a political status, and a deadlock was threatened in view of the strikers' refusal to return to work after authorities had promised a revision of wage increases if there was an immediate cancellation of the strike.

Bus and trolley workers joined the dock workers in sympathy. Walkouts of the dock hands held up three American steamers in port. Freight movements were completely paralyzed.

With fixed bayonets, police guarded key areas, and arrested two men identified as Dutch Communist agitators.

Strikers' bicycle patrols scurried through the water-front districts to prevent handling of goods. It was estimated 25,000 were on strike and walkouts were spreading rapidly.

Delegations visited factories to arouse sympathy.

President Sacasa To Quit Nicaragua

Managua, Nicaragua, June 5 (AP).—Cesar Miranda, dean of the diplomatic corps, said tonight that it was a certainty that President Juan B. Sacasa would leave his country tomorrow in deference to pressure exerted by the National Guards.

The Salvadorean Minister, who has been attempting to patch up troubles between Sacasa and the troops under Gen. Anastacio Somoza, said the mediation efforts had ended.

He said the president would be accompanied on the plane trip by his brother, and their destination would be El Salvador.

It was reported yesterday in the newspaper La Nueva Prensa that the president planned to resign Saturday and flee the country. He has been a virtual prisoner in his palace on Tiscapa Hill since Sunday. He was quoted as saying he did not want to evoke any bloodshed by remaining in the presidency any longer.

Woman Teacher Repels Rebels, Kills 2, Hurts 4

Mexico City, June 5 (AP).—From atop her home a courageous school teacher fought off a band of ten rebels today in Puebla state, killing two and wounding four, reports reaching here said.

Senorita Maria Hernandez, the teacher assigned to Tepeixco, grabbed her rifle when other residents ducked for cover at the approach of the shooting rebels.

They burned her schoolhouse before she engaged them in battle. One of the raider's shots struck her in the arm, but she continued firing until residents, heartened by the sight, joined in.

Critics Defied, Hoare Rejoins British Cabinet

Easing of Mediterranean Dispute With Italy First Problem.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 5.—Great Britain called back into its cabinet fold tonight Sir Samuel Hoare, scapegoat of the much maligned plan to end the Ethiopian War by giving Benito Mussolini only part of Ethiopia.

Since then, Il Duce has taken it all.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin openly defied critics and made the well-groomed Sir Samuel first lord of the admiralty. He succeeded Viscount Monsell, who for some time has desired to retire.

The new minister, who boldly and unapologetically faced a hostile House of Commons in mid-December and defended his part in the Anglo-French peace plan, first will face the task of liquidating British-Italian fleet difficulties in the Mediterranean.

His appointment, some thought, might even be followed by a reduction of the number of warships in that sea.

Selassie Receives Eden.

Sir Samuel came back to the cabinet even as Emperor Haile Selassie, the African king without a country, received Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and thanked him for Great Britain's efforts to stem Italian aggression.

A spokesman for the Negus said it was "most improbable" he would go to Geneva for the League of Nations Council and Assembly sessions this month, although he does intend to visit Switzerland.

Sir Samuel resigned from the post of foreign secretary last December to save Prime Minister Baldwin from further embarrassment because of the Anglo-French plan to stop the war.

The plan would have given Il Duce large spheres of economic influence in Ethiopia. It raised a tempest of liberal protest. Sir Samuel, however, declared the scheme was an effort to avert European chaos.

Some observers believed his new appointment might even now cause a public outcry. Some newspapers today criticized the prime minister for announcing the change while Selassie was in London and while Italy and the League of Nations still were at odds.

Restoration to Supremacy.

Of greater importance even than the Mediterranean question will be another job for Sir Samuel—restoration of the British navy to its pre-disarmament position of unchallenged supremacy and prestige.

In six months, when the Washington and London naval treaties expire, he will have a free hand at this task. Then Britain may embark on a giant program of replacement of battleships and increases in cruiser, destroyer and submarine strength.

There will be no restriction on the number of the men o'war which Britain can build after December 31—under the Anglo-French-American treaty just effected, they are limited only by size.

Despite anticipated criticism, today's appointment was regarded generally as greatly strengthening the cabinet.

Sir Samuel is a powerful politician and a potential future premier. He has had wide experience in several cabinet posts, and his advice is highly prized by Baldwin.

PigeonInspired Plane Designed As Spin-Proof

Chiropractor Is Ready to Fly Back Home After Safety Invention.

Dr. W. E. Mephvin, a Tennessee chiropractor who turned to airplane invention after watching a pigeon fly along the roadside one day, rejoiced last night that he has completed the job he came to the Capital to do.

He has produced a plane that is as "spin-proof," he says, as that pigeon he once saw fly over the Tennessee countryside. And now after two years of work the doctor-inventor, who left the little town of Lawrenceburg two years ago with only his ideas, is going back there in his plane.

Mephvin, who has been living at 712 Seventh street southwest, discussed this new aircraft as he returned from an afternoon of trial flights yesterday at Congressional airport.

"For one whole hour," he said, "we tried to force that plane into a spin, and we couldn't do it. It won't spin."

The craft has several radical features, he said, but the most important one—the "spin-proof" feature—is the slots in the wings. Inserted at just the right place and at a critical angle on either wing of the monoplane, the slots permit air to pass through the wing. This has a beneficial effect on the lifting capacities of the wings, and prevents them from throwing the plane into the dreaded spins.

The innovation enables the plane, which has only 90 horsepower, to take off the ground in 100 feet, and to rise at the rate of 1,000 feet a minute.

Mephvin, who isn't a flier, has worked here with a mechanic and engineer. He contributed the ideas; they designed and built the plane.

All the tests so far have been private—but now, before he flies his "spin-proof" machine back home, the inventor is going to show it to the public. This week-end, he said, he expects air officials of the Department of Commerce to watch it perform over Congressional Airport.

He will make the trip to Lawrenceburg in a week or ten days.

Jane Todd Will Head Clubs Unit in Cleveland

Jane Todd, of Tarrytown, N. Y., will head the steering committee of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Cleveland next week, it was announced at national headquarters here yesterday.

The committee will ask for a hearing before the platform commitee of the Republican convention next week on the question of a proviso in the Republican platform defining the status of business and professional women.

The proposed plank for the Republican platform opposes section 213 of the national economy act which the business women charge is discriminatory in its application.

243 at Howard Get Diplomas, Hear Dr. Zook

Johnson Confers Degrees; 20 Commissioned in Officers' Reserve.

Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council of Education, spoke yesterday at the sixty-seventh commencement exercises at Howard University. Degrees were conferred by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, on 243 candidates in college, graduate and professional schools. Commissions were awarded 20 in the Officers' Reserve Corps, while 18 were granted interneships in medical and dental schools.

Discussing educational frontiers, Dr. Zook traced the economic changes since the World War which have produced a radical change in educational policies. He indicated that the time had passed when the student could gain experience in the field of labor to fit him for life work, so that it is now necessary for the school to provide apprenticeships and other work conditions.

"Must Teach Realities."

"Formerly," he said, "schools and colleges were set down in the midst of life but, relatively speaking, were not a part of it, nor was there reason for them to be. We are now confronted with an entirely different situation. The educational system of this country, from the elementary schools to the university, has had thrust upon it the responsibility of producing, as far as possible, the actual conditions of vocational and civic life that young people may learn the realities through personal participation.

"It has been necessary to set up co-operative arrangements with industry, agriculture, the professions and community whereby young people still in school may secure those personal revelations and values which come only out of actual work experience. The apprenticeship system in medicine, law and dentistry was commonly regarded as a poor substitute for formal instruction. But what was once spurned has become the very center of the modern curriculum."

Get Honorary Degrees.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on Edward H. Morris, Chicago attorney, and William Stuart Nelson, president of Shaw University, Raleigh, N. C., and president-elect of Dillard University, New Orleans.

The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on the Rev. Richard H. Bowling, pastor of the Bute Street Baptist Church, Norfolk, Va.

Degrees were conferred on the following candidates:

Georgetown's Seniors in Law Hold Services

Class Presents Portraits of Maurer and Laskey to University.

Class Day exercises opening Georgetown University's 147th commencement program, when nearly 500 seniors will receive their degrees were conducted last night at the the School of Law. Included among the alumni attendnig were members of the Class of 1916 who are holding a special reunion.

Featuring the law exercises, the senior class presented the school with oil portraits of two of their professors, Robert A. Maurer, a member of the Board of Education and John E. Laskey, a former United States attorney. In connection with the exercises, announcement was made of the election of E. Barrett Prettyman, former Corporation Counsel as president of the Georgetown Law School Alumni Club of the District for the ensuing year. Dean George E. Haw School, oldest living alumnus, was re-elected president emeritis of the Club. He graduated from the Law School 62 years ogi.

Other local alumni officers are: Vice Presidents, Joseph A. Cantrel, P. H. Marshal, James Blaine Fitzgeraladand Richmond B. Keech, member of the Public Utilities Commission; secretary, Joseph F. Gahgan, treasurer; Thomas G. Walch, executive committee; John J. Orlas, Guida Callen and James Toomey with the Rev. Frances E. Lucey, S. J. and S. P., regent of the school as exofficio member.

The portrait of Prof. Maurer was presented by Thomas Marr Waddoups, president of the morning section of the senior class. Maurer, who teache courses in Constitutional law, Municipal corporation and public utilities, joined the faculty in 1913 and was made a full time professor in 1923.

Raphael Higgins O'Malley, president of the evening section of the senior class, presented the portrait of Laskey, professor of criminal law and procedure. He has been a member of the faculty for 26 year. Dean Hamilton, in a brief address, accepted the portraits on behalf of the faculty.

The class day exercises featured the bachelor's oration by Leonard A. Thomas, of California, and the class valedictory by John William Ahern, of Arkansas, editor in chief of the Georgetown Law Journal, who has been the honor student of his class the past two years.

The claas prophecies were given by Elmer Edward Tirpak and Philip Thomas Roche. The class histories were given by Edouard Felix Hebert and Ralph Francis Koebel. Father Lucey, the regent, made the concluding address. The past year, he reminded, has been one of a notable progress in the law school. It was marked by the decision to require a full college degree for admission next fall, and the first summer session, opening next week, in the history of the school.

The senior marshals for the exercises, chosen for excellent scholastic tanding, were Thoma M. Waddoups, Raphael Higgins O'Malley, Joseph Felix Gallagher, Edouard Felix Hebert, Joseph Francis Meglen, captain of the varsity football team; Arthur Bernard Focke, Claude Newton Ballenger and Charles Vincent Shannon.

Last night at the Manor Country Club, the Washington Club of Georgetown, composed chiefly of local collgee students, were hosts at a commencement dance. Joseph Dawson, president of the club, Thomas McMahon and Paul Mehren were in charge of arrangements. They had local alumni and their wives as guests.

Service for Speaker Byrns

that the Senate had accepted the invitation to be present. The gavel banged again, the members and the galleries stood, and the Senators, two by two, tentered, to march down the aisle to front row seats around the chamber. Vice President Garner, at the column's head, went to the Speaker's chair to sit beside Bankhead.

The only sound in the House for five minutes was the crack of Joe Byrns' gavel, as each group of dignitaries entered and was seated. Again it sounded, the Senate and House stood, and the Diplomatic Corps entered, 44 men in cutaway coats, pencil-striped trousers and wing collars, led by tall, broad-shouldered Sir Ronald Lindsay, Ambassador of Great Britain.

Again the gavel, and the Cabinet members appeared, with the gold-braided white uniforms of Maj. Gen. Malin Craig, Acting Secretary of War, and Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Naval Secretary, in brilliant contrast to the sober dress of the department heads.

Roosevelt Enters.

Once more the gavel, and President Roosevelt entered on the arm of an aid. Again, and Mrs. Byrns and the immediate family came in.

Then, as two blue-uniformed Capitol policemen stood guard, Dr. Montgomery invoked Divine peace for the 66-year-old Speaker whose unflagging efforts to drive through the Administration's legislative program overtaxed his strength.

Representative Louis C. Rabault, of Michigan, sang a song, "Absent," in a clear tenor voice.

Speaker Bankhead spoke briefly of his friend, reminding the assembly, where many openly cried into their handkerchiefs, of the lank Tennessean's "limitless patience, tolerance and sympathy." In high tribute he said:

"There was no littleness in this man."

He related that Mrs. Byrns had told him that in 35 years "never under any circumstances had her husband failed to kneel at his bedside every night to pay his devotion to his Maker and to invoke upon himself the blessings that always come to an humble and contrite heart."

He said:

"His portrait will be hung in the lobby of the House of Representatives along with those of other great Americans who have presided throughout the years over the destinies of Federal legislation, and his portrait well deserves to be placed alongside of those other great Americans. He earned his distinction. It was in no wise a gratuity."

Then Bankhead, his lean jaw set tight, stepped back from the rostrum to his seat in the Speaker's chair, and Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, the House minority leader, set forth the esteem in which he held Byrns.

Dauntless Friend.

He said:

"I was not in political accord with all that was done, and often took issue with him, but it is only fair to say that no worthier nor more dauntless friend or foe than Joe Byrns ever smiled across yonder dividing aisle.

"No President ever had a more loyal, dependable and faithful ally. In good report and ill, Joe Byrns stood steadfast, and it was his intense loyalty to the Chief Executive and his adroit and skillful leadership that piloted Administration measures through the shoals and over the rocks of legislative processes."

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. ZeBarney Thorne Phillips, chaplain of the Senate.

Then Mrs. Byrns clasped the hand of President Roosevelt for a moment and left the chamber. Group by group the dignitaries filed out, until the House alone was left with its late leader.

Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, acting majority leader, was recognized by Speaker Bankhead. He moved to have the House stand in recess until Monday.

The galleries and the floor cleared swiftly. Members and spectators, moved by the ceremonies, which had been in simple keeping with the quiet sincerity of Byrns in life, strolled out into the bright June day.

On the steps were still scores who had been unable to gain entrance to the crowded House. Many lingered on until the pages carried out the huge wreaths of flowers. Women souvenir seekers hurried to pick up fallen rosebuds, broken sprays of fern, and even single petals, as mementoes of the occasion.

Late in the afternoon the body of Joseph Byrns was taken to a special train for Nashville, Tenn. Sixty Representatives and a score of Senators rode along as a special committee of honor. On a later train went President Roosevelt and his aids, to pay final homage when the kindly old legislator will be laid to rest in the hills of Tennessee today.

Son Is Named.

Nashville, Tenn., June 5 (AP).—Friends of Joseph W. Byrns, jr., today qualified him as a candidate for the Democratic nomination to his father's seat in Congress from the Fifth District.

The qualifying petition was filed with Elkin Garfinkle, secretary of the primary board here.

Young Byrns, only son of the late Speaker, has not indicated whether he plans to make the race in the August primary.

Cecelia Prizes Go to Youngest Girl Graduate

Doris Vensel Gains Law Scholarship, Pearl Pin; 26 Get Diplomas.

Doris Mariejune Vensel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vensel, of 1613 E street northeast, the youngest member of the graduating class of St. Cecelia's Academy, took two prizes at last night's commencement ceremony at the school auditorium.

Miss Vensel won a scholarship in law to Columbus University and was awarded a pearl pin for taking second prize in a Nation-wide contest of the Catholic High School Association.

Lenore Catherine Hemelt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hemelt of 340 Decatur street northwest, was announced as winner of a two-year scholarship to Dumbarton College.

Lack of altruism in modern youth was deplored by the Right Rev. E. J. Connolly, who delivered the commencement address to the 26 graduates. Margaret Maloy, valedictorian, spoke against communism.

The list of graduates follows:

Gertrude Catherine Betts, Florence Leona Bosworth, Jacqueline Roberta Crossingham, Mildred Marie Darbie, Rose Ellen Dobbyn, Mary Margaret Fay, Mary Delphine Flynn, Georgianna Therese Foley, Lillian Frances Hall, Adele Veronica Harhoe, Hermie Frances Healy, Lenore Catherine Hemelt, Celeste Mary Howe, Mildred Louise Keegan, Jane Elizabeth Keller, Emma Helene Koennel, Daisy Loretto Loveless, Margaret Mary Maloy, Jane Beatrice Milovich, Mary Ann Schwartz, Ruth Angela Shankle, Angela Teresa Simone, Genevieve Frances Sullivan, Doris Mariejune Vensel, Cecelia Mary Walshe, Dorothy Carol Wise.

Emmitsburg, Md., June 5.—The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., V. G., of Washington, will officiate at the ordination of five young men to the priesthood at Mount St. Mary's College Chapel here Sunday.

Junior College At Chevy Chase Holds Program

Marjorie Bear Leads Class Day Exercises; Daisy March Held.

Class Day services at Chevy Chase Junior College were led by Marjorie Bear, of New York; Mary Carey, Jean McConnell, and Jane Goodwin. Miss Bear, as president of the graduating class, planted the class tree and presented the spade used in the ceremony, to Miss Carey, president of the freshman class, for safe keeping.

The honor of raising the flag on the lawn was awarded to Miss McConnell, a freshman, as the honor student of the entire college. Miss Goodwin, the honor student in the high school, assisted in the flag raising.

The program began in the school auditorium, with the march of the members of the senior class, each white-clad girl carrying an old-fashioned nosegay. Mildred Elliott, of Washington, D. C., gave the class prophesy and Mary Alice Goshorn, of Missouri, the class will. The class history was in the form of a skit entitled "Romeo Reminisces" with each member of the class participating. At the end of the program, the graduates were escorted to the lawn by the members of the freshman class, carrying a daisy chain.

Dr. Philip Milo Bail, president of the college, announced the presentation of a book to Mary Holmes, of Keene, N. H., for proficiency in French, given by the French government through the French Embassy.

Cleric Advises Academy Girls At Graduation

Dr. Motry, in Holy Cross Address, Stresses Needs for Success.

Success in life can be measured only in terms of sacrifice, the Rev. Dr. Louis Motry advised 22 young women graduates of the Academy of Holy Cross when he addressed them at a combined baccalaureate and commencement service yesterday morning.

The ceremony took place in the academy chapel, to which the seniors marched in their white caps and gowns. Delivering his address after he had celebrated the mass of thansgiving, Dr. Motry said "it is most fitting for a graduation ceremony to take place at the holy sacrifice of mass."

"This mass is the greatest possible act of thanksgiving," he said. "Again we have a student graduation that represents the results of sacrifice on the part of friends, relatives an dteachers. Now, when the graduates go forth, they in turn will achieve success in life only in terms of sacrifice."

The Rt. Rev. John O'Grady, who delivered the class night address Thursday, presented several scholarship awards, and the 22 diplomas.

Rosemary Dermody received a scholarship to Dumbarton College; Elizabeth Cremen was awarded a scholarship to Temple Business School. Margaret Viehmann, a Post scholarship winner, also received a scholarship to Columbus University. Marcia Creecy was announced as first place winner of the essay contest conducted by the ladies' auxiliary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and winner of eighth place in the national competition.

Other graduates were Magdaline Aires, Charlotte Cook, Doris Batson, Agnes Doherty, Agnes Drew, Jane Egan, Elizabeth Klein, Dorothy Lansdale, Elizabeth Maloney, Patricia Mullaly, Margaret McCaw, Mary McManus, Virginia McReynolds, Aloise Payne, Alice Phillips, Jane Smith, Rita Speiss, Mary Estelle Wright.

St. Gertrude's Guild Has Luncheon Meeting

The June luncheon meeting of the Guild of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts was held at the school on Sargent road Thursday, and a favorable report of the card party held at the Wardman Park Hotel to aid the school was read.

Guest of honor was Lord Abbot Wulston Knowles, of the Benedictine Order, of Scotland. Among those present were Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Milton Ailes, Mrs. B. Francis Saul, Mrs. Joseph Tumulty, Mrs. Raymond Garrity, Mrs. Augustus Giegengack, Mrs. Mary Hancock Tighe, Mrs. James Edward Duke, Mrs. Corrill Bridges, Mrs. James Haskell, Mrs. Francis Callahan, the Rev. Lawrence J. Sheehan, the Rev. Francis Montgomery and Dr. Thomas Verner Moore.

Convicted in Attack.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., June 5.—Marvin Mundy, proprietor of a hotel near Elkton, was fined $500 and costs here today by a jury in circuit court which found him guilty of assault and battery upon a young Page County girl. The trial occupied two days and the jury deliberated four hours.

2 Gravely Hurt In Triple Crash At Alexandria

Eight Others Cut, Bruised, as Car, Truck and Taxi Are in Collision.

A triple automobile collision on the Washington-Richmond highway, just south of Hunting Creek, last night resulted in the serious injury of two persons, and cut and bruised eight others.

Daniel J. Hagen, 38, of Groveton, Va., suffered a fractured skull and internal hurts when his car struck a northbound truck operated by Samuel Tuttle, of 225 First street northeast. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital, where slight hope was held for his recovery.

Tuttle's helper, James Smith, 62, of Short's court, was severely cut and remained in the hospital. Tuttle's son, Samuel Tuttle, jr., and a companion, Clyde Sawyer, of the 600 block of Sixth street northeast, were shaken and slightly cut.

After the first crash, the truck turned over and struck a taxi, driven by James Branch, colored, whose address police did not learn. Branch and his four colored passengers escaped with minor injuries.

Fairfax County police held Tuttle pending the outcome of Hagen's injuries.

Power Program Of PWA Ruled Legal in Test

Wheat Dismisses Injunction on $200,000,000 Projects; Appeal Planned.

By the Associated Press.

Upholding the constitutionality of the Public Works Administration's $200,000,000 power program, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, yesterday dismissed an injunction suit attacking ten municipal electric projects in four States.

Dean Acheson, attorney for four private utility companies which brought the suit, said he would carry the case immediately to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

Wheat's decision was the second legal victory for PWA in defense of its far-reaching electrification scheme. The Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals recently gave a similar ruling on the Buzzards Roost, S. C., project. The Duke Power Co. already has taken this case to the Supreme Court.

Jerome Frank, PWA counsel, said he hoped to get final decisions from the high tribunal early next fall in both the Duke Power Co. suit and yesterday's case.

Held Constitutional.

In a lengthy opinion, Wheat said all parts of the 1935 emergency relief act and the 1933 national industrial recovery act which concerned the power program were constitutional. The Public Works Administration was set up under a section of the recovery act, not ruled on by the Supreme Court's NRA decision.

"I am unable to see," he said, "how any reserved power of a State is infringed."

He held that the electrical projects were not covered by a recent court of appeals ruling which invalidated the Resettlement Administration's housing program.

His decision followed more than a month of hearings, during which Acheson and Newton D. Baker, representing the utility firms, had attacked the PWA power program as an illegal attempt to control intrastate electric production.

Wheat said that it was "easy to find" a "well beaten path" for grants and loans to municipalities to carry out public works projects, and added "it has not been argued an unconstitutional use of funds of the United States."

Attacked on Two Grounds.

Constitutionality of the statutes was attacked on two grounds, he said—that they invaded States' rights and that they were an illegal delegation of powers to the President.

"It cannot be said to invade the reserved powers of a State," he declared, "to make loans or grants of money to municipal corporations which the State continues to control and which are at liberty to reject the loans and grants if they see fit to do so."

He said that the Nation-wide character of the Public Works program was proved by Secretary Ickes, "who said that it extended to every county in the United States except three, and that there were 200 electric projects, though but 85 of them were in places where there were privately owned facilities."

Quoting from the Circuit Court's opinion in the Duke Power Co. case, Wheat said, "It was out of the question for Congress to prescribe the details of an extended program of public works. It appropriated the money for the purpose, laid down the principles which were to guide the President and the Administrator of Public Works in its expenditure, and left to them the working out of the details.

Given Wide Discretion.

"The making of loans and grants in carrying out the policy thus laid down by Congress is the exercise of administrative, not legislative, discretion."

The relief program was "a reasonable, practical and substantial compliance with the statute," he ruled.

"It is undoubtedly true," he continued, "that in a literal sense no definite program was at first formulated. The program was worked out slowly and progressively, and considerable time was occupied in effecting an organization and in the examination of many projects."

In conclusion, Wheat said that the statutes gave the President and the Secretary of Interior "a very wide discretion," and that "their decisions upon matters of detail are not subject to judicial review."

The ten projects involved in the suit have been allotted a total of $2,444,000 in loans and grants. They are located at Florence, Decatur, Tuscumbia, Sheffield, Russellville, Guntersville and Hartselle, all in Alabama; Plainview, Tex.; Hominy, Okla., and Iowa City, Iowa.

Five suits, later consolidated into one, were brought by the Alabama Power Co., the Texas Utilities Co., the Oklahoma Utilities Co. and the Iowa Light & Power Co.

Gorky Is Ill of Grippe; Moscow Fears for Life

Moscow, June 5 (AP).—Serious concern was felt here tonight for the life of the famous Russian writer, Maxim Gorky, who is suffering from grippe and lung complications.

Gorky is 74 years old and Soviet Russia's leading contemporary novelist and propagandist. A revolutionary from youth, the name which he adopted to replace his real name, Alexis Maximovitch Pyeshkoff, means "The Bitter One."

The fortieth anniversary of the start of his literary activity was commemorated September 25, 1932, when construction of the giant airship bearing his name was begun. It later crashed with a loss of 49 lives. Gorky is director of the Institute of Russian Literature of the Soviet Academy of Sciences.

WPA Bill-Dogglers Save Woman's Rent Money

New York, June 5 (AP).—A crew of WPA workers did a bit of "bill-doggling" today to the great delight of Mrs. Rose Goldschlager, a Bronx housewife.

Mrs. Goldschlager's rent money—$32—blew out of a window in her fifth floor apartment while she was airing her bedclothing. Mrs. Goldschlager stood at the window and yelled.

The WPA men, working nearby, threw down their tools and cavorted up the street until they had retrieved every one of the errant bills.

Mrs. Goldschlager thanked them profusely.

Fiorenza Sentenced To Die at Sing Sing

New York, June 5 (AP).—An hour after the sentence of death had been passed upon him for the murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton, John Fiorenza was taken today to Sing Sing prison.

The judgment of the court, which Fiorenza stood with wooden-faced calm to hear, was that the execution should be carried out during the week beginning Monday, July 13. Counsel for the condemned former upholsterer's assistant said, however, he probably would not die in any event before next October, since an appeal could not be taken before the Court of Appeals adjourns next Tuesday for the summer.

Mrs. Titterton, a writer and wife of a broadcasting company official, was strangled to death in her smart Beekman place apartment on Good Friday. Fiorenza had gone there in connection with his work as an upholsterer—and had returned to kill.

A 13-inch piece of cord he left behind him led to Fiorenza's arrest.

In the trial the defense vainly offered the appeal of mental irresponsibility.

Bloc Demands House Change Discharge Rule

Progressives Organize to Seek Return to Old Plan Next Year.

By the Associated Press.

Members of a group of Progressives yesterday revealed plans for a drive intended to block organization of the next House until it meets demands for a modification of the existing rule under which bills pigeonholed by committees can be forced onto the floor.

In quarters informed of the movement it was stated that a formal statement of aims and issues and possibly a disclosure of leaders in the drive would be forthcoming within a few days.

The group, which met secretly in the office of a House member from the Middle West, was described as composed of self-styled Progressives from all political factions.

"I would break faith with my colleagues," one member said, "if I were to reveal at this time either their names or the steps we are planning. But, we are convinced we will have enough strength to change the rule of 218 votes necessary to discharge a committee back to the previous 145. I expect to prepare a statement within the next few days."

O'Connor Critical.

Representative O'Connor (Democrat), New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, on the other hand, contended the group could not muster more than 50 votes and that its efforts to change the rule would be futile. After sharply criticizing the intentions of the group, he declared:

"They will find the House ready to operate without a rule at all rather than go back to the 145-vote procedure.

"It is the sentiment of the House that unless a majority of its members wishes a certain piece of legislation it is a waste of time to discharge the committee and drag the bill on the floor."

Predict Surprise.

Spokesmen for the group nevertheless maintained that O'Connor had a "big surprise" coming if he believed its number would not exceed 50.

"There has been many a member on both sides of the aisle dissatisfied since the rule was changed," they said. "It defeated the Black-Connery 30-hour bill, the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage measure and other legislation in which some of us were highly interested.

"We do not wish to change the rule to permit passage of everything that comes along, but we do feel that the minority is completely gagged when it requires a majority vote to get a measure on the floor. We want our constituents to know how we are voting, and we believe it the right of every member to be allowed to make a fight for his convictions."

100 Families Routed By Canadian Flood

Vancouver, June 5 (AP).—One hundred families vacated homes today at Dewdney, B. C., on the Fraser River, 50 miles east of Vancouver. Flood waters covered streets four feet deep.

Several miles up river, the Nicomen Island dyke was weakening and help was asked to save it.

Harrison village was under one to two feet of water. Five thousand acres of farm land in the Harrison and Agassiz districts were under water and scores of families had to move to higher ground.

Admits Slaying Child.

Augusta, Me., June 5 (AP).—James H. Folsom, 35, of Skowhegan, pleaded guilty today to the murder of 7-year-old Mary Proulx, of Waterville whose ravished body was found last month in bushes a mile and a half from her home. Justice Albert Beliveau said he would sentence Folsom to life imprisonment next week.

Assault Warrants Name Zioncheck

Warrants charging assault were sworn out yesterday by Mrs. Benjamin Scott Young against Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, of Seattle, and his wife, the former Rubye L. Nix. Mrs. Young, lessee of the Harvard Hall apartment from which she sought to eject the Zionchecks, walked into the Police Court Building on crutches. Shortly afterward, she was joined by Assistant District Attorneys Karl Kindleberger and George McNeil and two reporters, Irving Lash and Bob Erwin, summoned as witnesses for the warrant hearing.

Kindleberger then announced that warrants signed by Judge John P. McMahon, naming Mrs. Young as complainant, were issued for assault. Mrs. Zioncheck was charged in one for an attack on Mrs. Young at 10:30 p. m. May 29. Her husband was named for an attack at 8:30 a. m. May 30.

"Although the warrants have been issued," Kindleberger said, "I have instructed Warrant Clerk R. E. Gott to withhold service on them until Representative Zioncheck is released from Gallinger Hospital.

Equalizing Federal Work.

Few reforms will be more welcome to Government employes than the move of the Civil Service Commission to regularize hours of work. The Committee on Hours of Duty and Overtime found "wide variation in the number of hours worked throughout the country, apparently depending in large part upon the class or kind of employment." Especially in some of the emergency organizations, employes have frequently been forced to keep demoralizingly long hours. On the other hand, groups in certain agencies sometimes find it difficult to occupy their time constructively on a 39-hour week basis.

The Government employs all types of workers from ditch diggers to highly expert technicians and administrators. Yet the committee concludes that, with few exceptions, all these groups can and should adhere to one of three standardized schedules. It is now the duty of department heads to apply these schedules to their own personnel with a view to increasing efficiency and eliminating inequities.

Fortunately, the act under which this study was made also calls for a detailed report to Congress on overtime work in Government offices. It is not to be supposed that overtime can be entirely avoided. When an emergency arises, Government employes, in particular, should be glad to meet it regardless of self-sacrifice. But as a general practice, working beyond regular hours in the Government service is open to suspicion. If such overtime is a result of inefficiency, better management or more competent employes are needed; if it arises from a demonstrable shortage of personnel, Congress will have no reasonable alternative to provision of a larger pay roll.

The movement to regularize hours is especially interesting because it suggests the passing of emergency conditions. By the same token a retreat from the spoils system of making appointments is overdue. The substitution of "political clearance" for competitive examinations was never justified, even allowing for all the shortcomings of the present Civil Service system. Fortunately, some legislators are pressing actively for extension of the merit system, as indicated by the introduction of the La Follette-O'Mahoney bill in the Senate. Though largely a gesture at this moment, it is one which an increasing number of harassed patronage dispensers are coming to approve.

No Nicaraguan Adventure.

The rebellion now running its course in Nicaragua is further proof, if any were needed, of the futility of the interventionist policy once favored by the United States, and of the wisdom of our present hands-off attitude.

Intervention in the affairs of disturbed Caribbean republics used to be justified by two arguments. Such action, it was said, was necessary to safeguard American lives and property, and the lives and property of other foreigners whose governments it was feared might intervene if we did not. In addition the point was made that occupation by American troops made possible the holding of orderly elections and the establishment of a competent constitutional regime.

Even when these arguments seemed valid they did not of themselves justify intervention. But, in the first place, there is evidence that revolutionary disturbances in Central America have rarely endangered the lives and property of foreigners. And, secondly, it is now clear, from the Nicaraguan record alone, that a period of American tutelage rarely if ever has accomplished any permanent good in any Central American nation. Those countries can achieve real political stability only by slowly learning to govern themselves. While American occupation may vouchsafe a period of quiet, reversion to type is likely to occur once the Marines have been withdrawn.

On December 28, 1933, President Roosevelt declared that "the definite policy of the United States from now on is one opposed to armed intervention. The maintenance of constitutional governments in other nations is not a sacred obligation devolving upon the United States alone."

This was no banquet phrase. It represented a real retreat from imperialism as attested by many corroborative developments, among them the withdrawal of Marines from Nicaragua and Haiti, the abrogation of the Platt amendment, and the recent treaty with Panama.

Under the circumstances Secretary Hull was only stating an obvious fact when in reply to the "friendly warning" of Peru, and the equally unnecessary representations of Chile, he declared that this nation has no intention whatever of intervening in the Nicaraguan situation.

When the United States goes to Buenos Aires, to take part in the scheduled inter-American peace conference, its Latin-American record promises to be above legitimate suspicion or reproach.

Cleveland Jitters.

There is something pathetic about the controversy in which Senator Borah has been involved by his campaign manager, Carl G. Bachmann. During the last four months the Idaho solon has tried desperately to win the leadership of the Republican Party. When it became evident that he could not be nominated he continued to campaign vigorously, apparently in the hope of influencing the G. O. P. platform. But on the eve of the Cleveland convention he has there been put in a most embarrassing position by his own campaign manager.

Mr. Bachmann and his co-workers have been trying to find a convincing argument against the nomination of Gov. Landon ever since it became apparent that the Kansan has the inside track in the G. O. P. race. Through indirect charges they have sedulously attempted to link the Governor with the oil interests, with Wall Street and the Old Guard. But the Landon snowball has continued to roll on, steadily accumulating substance and velocity. Now with a really ridiculous change of tactics, Mr. Borah's managers rush into print with another statement, again reflecting far more upon the Senator than upon Gov. Landon.

The present complaint of Mr. Bachmann is that Gov. Landon has supported certain aspects of the New Deal and has praised the President for some of his undertakings. In language devoid of political bias, this means that the Kansas Governor has been intelligent enough to discriminate between the highly desirable objectives of some New Deal measures and the many blunders of the Administration in pursuing those objectives. Only excited politicians trying to further their own purposes could possibly assume that everything the Administration has attempted is wrong.

Particularly unfortunate for the argument is the fact that Senator Borah stands closer to the New Deal in the public mind than any other major candidate for the G. O. P. nomination. He has followed the President in some of his most questionable demands. Included in the list of bills which the Senator helped to enact, to mention only one instance, is the scandal-breeding work relief act of 1935, giving the President $4,880,000,000 to spend without system, oversight or really constructive results.

In the light of Senator Borah's record, his manager's strictures against candidates "not in a position to wage a vigorous campaign against the fundamental principles of the New Deal" have the ring both of recklessness and insincerity. They unfortunately put Mr. Borah in the position of seeming to sanction any attitude which may momentarily promote his cause, whatever that may be.

A Vicious Circle.

Countervailing duties are to be imposed upon a very large percentage of our imports from Germany as an offset to the direct and indirect subsidies enjoyed by exporters of that country. Such duties are not technically retaliatory and they seem to be entirely legitimate under the anti-dumping provisions of our tariff laws. Nevertheless, the action taken is an unpleasant reminder that many obstacles impede that freer interchange of goods which the State Department is seeking through the negotiation of reciprocal trade agreements.

Our export trade to Germany has already suffered severely because of that nation's lack of foreign exchange with which to pay for her purchases. This shrunken trade will no doubt be further curtailed by the new restrictions. And those restrictions will, in turn, put additional pressure upon Germany to subsidize exports. In short, Germany is involved in a vicious circle. She is pushed by her creditors, and by her need of funds with which to pay for imports, to adopt policies that inevitably lead to reprisals.

German trade with the United States is already seriously handicapped by numerous clearing agreements forcing the Reich to purchase goods from countries in which she has acquired export balances. Hampered by this system of forced barter, and compelled to institute a drastic system of exchange control, Germany is unable, even if she were willing, to enter into reciprocal agreements that would improve her trade with this country. Satisfactory commercial relations cannot be expected until order is introduced into Germany's disorderly and heterogeneous currency and exchange system. And that requires domestic reforms and international adjustments of a far-reaching character.

The action taken by the Treasury Department may have a salutary effect in warning not only Berlin, but other capitals relying upon export subsidies, that a change of policy is essential if they wish to enjoy a larger market in the United States. That assumes, however, that we ourselves are prepared to abandon the policy of subsidizing exports instead of yielding to pressure to enlarge the market for our farm products by such means.

Otherwise, there is grave danger that the treatment accorded to Germany will eventually be applied to other countries, with disastrous effects upon our import trade and, inevitably, upon the export trade dependent upon imports.

Gain For Industrial Unionism.

In deciding to affiliate with the Committee for Industrial Organization, the steel workers' union has indorsed the position taken by John L. Lewis in his fight to secure greater recognition for the principle of industrial unionism.

It has long been evident to unprejudiced observers that if the issues raised by Mr. Lewis were not squarely faced by the A. F. of L., a new organization, better adapted to the requirements of modern industry, might be anticipated. If the ambitious and energetic head of the United Mine Workers had not led the fight for industrial unionism someone else would have grasped the opportunity he has seized. In other words, the conflict which has split the ranks of organized labor is not a battle between individuals, but a clash of issues.

By this time the leading spirits in the A. F. of L. should understand that they cannot check a movement that has its origin in economic conditions, not in personal ambition or political wire-pulling on the part of a seditious minority. They can either accept the inevitable or else forego extension of their organizing activities to the mass-production industries, like steel, which offer such inviting opportunities for the spread of unionism on the basis of industry rather than craft.

The foundation for future work has already been laid in the organization of company unions, following industrial rather than craft lines. It is somewhat surprising, indeed, that employers in the steel industry, who have offered such stubborn opposition to the spread of trade unions, have themselves fostered a type of organization that can easily be converted into a powerful collective bargaining agency.

The labor leaders who undertake the work of detaching these groups from their company-inspired origins are now taking upon themselves an important and highly responsible task. Whether their work is to be of a constructive or a destructive nature depends to a great extent upon the wisdom and tolerance which they bring to their task.

Souvenirs.

No one, so far as is known, made off with the Queen Mary's gyro compass while she was docked in New York. But, along with the anchors, it appears to have been one of the few items overlooked by the 25,000 visitors who, locust-like, swarmed over the ship during its four-day rest here. With American enthusiasm for the newest and biggest they jumped at an opportunity to tread the vast decks and alleyways of the Atlantic's latest pleasantess. And with American college-boy delight in souvenirs, they practically stripped the ship of everything easily purloinable. Coming but to scuff, as it were, they remained to pry.

As a result, the chief steward was in tears as the return voyage began yesterday. Spoons, knives, forks, salt and pepper shakers, clocks, calendars, ash trays, glasses, china, signs and even whole potted plants were included in his long list of pilfered objects. Had he only had the wisdom of Stephen J. Pigott, an American by birth and now managing director of the shipbuilding concern which constructed the Queen Mary, he might not have been so grievously shocked, however.

While the ship was still being outfitted for its maiden voyage, Lord Burghley, the famous English sprinter and president of the A. A. U., was induced to run the circuit of the promenade deck, a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile. This he accomplished in 58 seconds and a brass plate was ordered to commemorate the event, noting modestly that he ran "untrained and unchanged." The plate was merely screwed to the deck house close to Lord Burghley's starting point until Mr. Pigott came along.

Then the American-born shipbuilder ordered the screws replaced by heavy bolts, attached to nuts on the under side of the deck housing so that a man "would have to lift the whole outside of the ship to get it off."

"I know my countrymen," Mr. Pigott explained sardonically. And it seems that he does.

Haile Selassie's personal holdings are worth about $5,000,000, according to report. He lived in an excellent country for practicing how to save for rainy days.

A dentist advertises that he will pull 32 teeth for a dollar. If we needed a dollar that bad, we'd do without it.

Too often the scales of justice are thrown out of balance by a heavy pocketbook.

The Fourth Estate

Earl E. Muntz in The South Atlantic Quarterly.

Far outranking all other sources of informal education stands the modern newspaper. Bringing news from everywhere, and placing it within reach of every literate person, the newspaper deserves recognition as one of the keystones of modern culture.

In many respects the press is both servitor and master. Its service to society is of incalculable value; its power is far reaching, and, in a country like the United States, where freedom of the press is sanctioned by the Constitution and zealously protected, the press is in the position of censor of the Government and defender of the people's liberty. Its unique position was clearly evidenced when it was proposed to bring the newspaper business, with all its functions and activities, under a governmental code, subject to approval and subsequent change by the President, pursuant to the now defunct national industrial recovery act of 1933. The half-veiled opportunities for gagging the press through general legislation of this type were quickly exposed by the press of the country and brought forth loud protests and public disapproval of such control.

'Tobacco Road' Propriety.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent magazine article, captioned "Dirt For Dough's Sake," Mr. George M. Cohan, easily one of the best authorities in America in his specialty, has told some wholesome truths regarding present day indecencies of the stage. He dives into theatrical history and recalls many of the putrid performances of the past, most of which, however, were mild and almost respectable compared with the carrion offered today's play goers.

Curiously enough, as Mr. Cohan points out, while some of the filthy productions were big money makers, the most profitable offerings were free of dirty lines, not even suggestive of loathsome acts and portraying only the clean aspects of life. A play doesn't have to ooze goodness to be enjoyable; on the other hand it need not reek with slime.

Just the other day a play came to Washington that was so superlatively foul it could not be justified even on the ground of being realistic. No such monstrous caricatures of humans ever existed in any part of the United States as were portrayed in "Tobacco Road." Now, I ask, what was this ponderous thing but an example of offering "Dirt For Dough's Sake." Many of our greatest actors of other days would have faced starvation rather than have taken the roles of such abnormal characters and, maybe, those who do now go through a course of fumigation after the curtain falls. The 'Green Apples.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The mention of a disagreement between Johnnie and Annie by James F. Warburg in his article, "Still Hell Bent," in The Post of May 25 is a very naive deception, to say the least, and is apt to make the money question more confusing to the average layman. He says because Johnnie got sick when he and Annie ate some "green apples" and he had to take castor oil he did not like her any more and did not want to see her.

Mr. Warburg presumably contrasts this incident with the so-called 1913 Federal Reserve system, mentioning the "green apples," or rather mistakes in carrying out the system. The "green apples" in this case was the privately owned Reserve banking system itself which gave the banking interests the power to deflate loans to the extent of nearly $40,000,000,000, sending the 62-cent dollar up in 1926 when there was no unemployment and the country prosperous, to $1.68 in 1933, following the crash in 1929, resulting in the unemployment of 15,000,000 people with 24,000,000 on the relief rolls through no fault of their own.

If the proper money and banking and currency system had been enacted in 1913, in brief a Government-owned central bank, the board of governors of which, irrespective of political parties, was appointed by the President, as is the United States Supreme Court, with the power to inflate and deflate credit currency and fix the rate of interest at, say, 3 per cent, thereby creating an honest dollar in debt paying and purchasing power, there would not have been any "green apples" for Johnnie to eat.

Nor would the country have been taking castor oil for the past seven years and appropriating billions of dollars to cure the worst depression in the history of the country in order to avert an internal revolution. But $4,000,000,000 cannot take the place of $40,000,000,000 which was deflated and restore prosperity.

WILLIAM J. DWYER.

"A Good Man, But——"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "You can't beat anybody with nobody," said a smart political commentator a while back, railing at the tedium of the G. O. P.'s dark lantern hunt for a Presidential candidate, dragging for months its slow length along; hampering by delay, plans for organizing on him when found, and building a platform he could and would stand on.

Not that the clever writer meant to imply that the present incumbent was "just anybody" or that the Governor of the single State of Kansas, prominent even then, was "nobody." Not at all! Like that of Diogenes of old, the lantern search located an honest man, assuming Landon wins the nomination, and if they don't give him an honest platform he will think it is, or probably just say "thank you" and step aside. The party leaders also made a shrewd selection of a temporary chairman. Steiwer had probably for the country been the wiser choice to head the ticket, just as Coolidge was better than Harding.

Both standard bearer and keynoter being from the Middle West battleground, the Republicans made a good bold start toward a courageous fight in an apparently hopeless campaign. But the old guard will rally around. The G. O. P. will keep in trim (they have to) and reflect that 1940 is another year. Mr. Landon is a good man, but even against lesser odds, he does not, in the minds of many, seem to stature up for the job of President of these 48 States. GEORGE E. GARY.

Abolish Industry Tax?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Governmental extravagance at Washington makes necessary excessive taxation, and this in turn leads to new ways of wasting public revenue. Thus a vicious circle is established. Those who assume that their only taxes are paid annually by assessment are greatly mistaken. A tax is paid with every purchase made. This frequently exceeds the value of the thing purchased. It is estimated that the taxes upon the average daily distribution of merchandise by a mail order house amount to $25,000, a department store to $10,000. Also that taxes paid by the American people amount to $20,000,000 daily.

The income tax has already collected over $60,000,000,000, and this is largely responsible for lavish waste in governmental expenditures. It has been demonstrated that all normal expenses of government may be easily met by a single tax upon ground rent, the only legitimate source of public revenue. By taking this revenue all other taxes upon capital and labor and their products could be abolished. The abolition of taxation upon industry would constitute the greatest reform ever made in statecraft, and beside which the abolition of slavery in the United States is inconsequential.

Feed 'Em Often.

Two Yale physiologists have discovered that eating three meals a day is merely a habit and that men and women are much more efficient when they eat four, five and even six meals a day.

Dr. Howard W. Haggard and Dr. Leon A. Greenberg have tried out their theory on 213 persons, from pre-school age through college and into office and factory. Their discoveries are set forth in the June Review of Reviews by Albert Edward Wiggam.

Nearly half of their human guinea pigs were employes of a factory in Connecticut, where it was easy to trace the effect of a light extra meal during the morning or afternoon, or both, on the productivity of the workers.

"The operation selected for study," says Dr. Haggard, "was that of sewing together the canvas tops of tennis shoes, because it showed the typical falling in output during the latter half of the morning and afternoon. The decline had always been attributed to industrial fatigue. Production charts at once showed that the two-mealers produce an average of 172 shoes hourly, the three-mealers 183, and the five-mealers 191.

"Forty workers were divided into two equal groups and studied over a period of 10 weeks.

"Three notable results emerged from the experiment. First, the lowest number produced by the experimental group on any one day when five meals were eaten was decidedly greater than the highest number when three meals were eaten. Second, when the five-meal schedule was discontinued the production immediately fell back to that of the three-meal schedule."

The third and perhaps happiest result was that during the five-meal schedule the workers reported an improved feeling of general well-being, more zest for the work, less general discomfort, blues, and irritability in the late morning and afternoon. The records also showed fewer mistakes and less spoiled work.

Liquor In Virginia.

Virginia, two years ago, adopted the plan of distributing liquor through the State's own stores and today is taking stock on the results. It is estimated that the public, during those two years, has spent about $45,000,000 for alcoholic beverages. Profit to the State and localities is placed at $6,417,402. While there is no way to know how much bootleg traffic exists, it is said that where State stores have been established moonshining virtually has vanished.

Members of the State board do not believe any more liquor is consumed today than during the prohibition era, that drinking is on a saner basis and that the revenues accruing from legalizing liquor represent a gain over the days when the bootleggers and racketeers made the profit. Improvement in law enforcement also has been seen, and even further advances are expected.

Virginia's liquor plan must be satisfactory, for we have seen no dispatches telling of any organized demand for repeal of the law. By keeping prices low, by rigidly enforcing the law governing purchase and sale of alcoholic beverages, Virginia apparently has hit upon a plan that is workable.

The Times And The Constitution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On a bright summer afternoon in 1787 some of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention, headed by Benjamin Franklin, went down to the Schuylkill River and from the shore witnessed a remarkable demonstration. They saw a small craft go upstream propelled by steam. Thus the dawn of the machine age was contemporaneous with the birth of our Federal charter of government.

At about the same period, up in New England, manufactories were advertising for women and children, enticing them from farms and urban homes to labor as "hands" for a wage, but much smaller than that paid to male workmen. This system has obtained ever since, and the continued exploitation of women and minors in industrial occupations is a concomitant of modern civilization.

Therefore it is the duty of the State to impose restrictions on employers of such labor and to forbid unscrupulous wage cutting through the exercise of the police power. The enlightened Legislature of the State of New York sought to establish the conditions under which women and children might work in certain occupations and penalized employers refusing to pay wages fixed upon inquiry as to what should constitute the minimum wage in a particular industry.

Despite copious factual data and the briefs submitted by several States and organizations as amici curiae, five justices of the Supreme Court have held the New York minimum wage law unconstitutional. But the Chief Justice and three of his colleagues placed the welfare of millions of human beings, who at best suffer from economic disadvantages in the workaday world, above a strict construction of the Fourteenth Amendment.

This writer has no intention of advocating any infringement of the citizen's constitutional bulwarks which guarantee his freedom; but when the economic warp and woof of an industrialized community accentuate the need for adopting a wise public policy, which cannot receive judicial support for want of inherent power in the Constitution to legislate on such matters, is it not high time the people were given an opportunity to express themselves. The Post Impressionist

'Au Revoir To Arms.

Post Office, Saturday.

WE don't commonly like to repeat ourselves, but this time we'll risk it. Hurrying out to keep an engagement of long standing, we receive a request, from the Column's most ardent supporter, to reprint what we said on a similar occasion last year. Solely because this request is from the Column's most ardent supporter, we comply.

Have you noticed how, for the last week or so, everybody in your office has been below working-par? The boy forgot to put a fresh blotter on your desk. Miss Jones is somewhat slower than usual with the letters. Uncommon as such a thing is, you have once or twice suspected that you yourself were lessening speed—even if ever so little.

And, worst of all—oh, it does sound incredible!—there were mornings when, grabbing your clean copy of The Post and turning immediately to its Editorial-page and to this Column thereof, it really did seem (yes, let's be honest with each other, now: it really did seem) that a minuscular portion of the accustomed Attic salt was missing from the breakfast-food served by the Post-Impressionist!

Truth to tell, Washington is entering the season when Washington too frequently becomes "seasonable."

The Post-Impressionist has himself noticed most of the indicated symptoms—even the slight slipping of the Post-Impressionist.

And he is going to do something about it for you.

Soon you'll be saying you can't stand this weather a day longer, and why should a city that is really a tropical enclave in summer try to act as if it were a climatic part of the temperate zone?

Well, the Post-Impressionist won't care.

Soon you'll be sighing that you didn't do a stroke of work all day. And we'll be laughing: "Neither did we!"

Soon you'll be declaring you couldn't sleep a wink last night—it was so hot. And we'll be chortling: "We slept 9 hours last night—under blankets!"

Soon you'll be wishing you were in Maine, just loafing and inviting your soul—with your oldest clothes on (and not many of them) and sneakers and no hat. And that's just what we'll be doing—and that's just where we'll be.

We have already bought the picture-postcards—by post—and written, addressed and stamped them, so we won't have to bother after we've handed them, on our arrival there, to Postmaster James Gilman and said:

"Jimmie, please mail three of these things every day, till they've all been mailed."

One will be sent to each member of the whole company of the Column's courteous contributors:

Picture of a lovely lady in a pink dress, whose eyebrows have all gone into eyelashes, with "By the seaside I am thinking of you" printed on it.

Picture of a muscle-bound youth holding such a string of fish as only Ernest Hemingway could catch or Joe Louis carry, the whole bearing the legend: "This is less than we got today."

Picture of the surf pounding the shore, with the forest along the water-line and Mount Merritt in the background: "Come to Sebasco."

Yes, we break it to you gently, because we realize it's bad news for you: "Our vacation begins tomorrow!

"Ah, well," you'll whisper when we are gone, "he has his faults—but who's faultless? . . . He nods sometimes—but he nods like Homer . . . Though I still get the news—though I still get Elderman and Waltman—though I still get the pungent push of the editorials—how I do miss my daily dozen of chances to find fault with the Post-Impressionist!"

NOTICE.

During our all too brief (Ed. Query: For whom?) absence, a miscellany of other matter will occupy, although it cannot truly fill, this part of the paper. The Post-Impressionist disclaims all responsibility for any views expressed by these tenants, because he is sure to disagree with whatever they may say. He does, however, ask you to give the little gals and boys a hand, for they will be doing their best.

There you are!

That is substantially what we said last year, and we must admit that it does go quite well for the eve of our 1936 vacation. Nevertheless, we repeat that we shouldn't have considered republication if the request therefor had not come from the Column's most ardent supporter.

He now begs to subscribe himself

Almost always
Yours to command,
THE POST-IMPRESSIONIST.

Campaign Songs.

Alfred M. Landon's campaign song might be appropriate if he were running for the glee club, but for a man who wants to be President of the United States "Oh, Susannah," seems an unfortunate selection. This is a song reminiscent of the covered wagon, which antedates even the horse-and-buggy days that Mr. Roosevelt had in mind the time he flung his glove in the air and pulled a petulant snoot at the umpire because the Supreme Court ruled against him on a close one at the plate. It is a mandolin or guitar song, moreover, and is associated with iced tea and gingersnaps on the old front stoop. Surely someone in the Landon party should have realized that this is an age of saxophones and swingy stuff and whisky sours at the Lido Carbondale Supper Club or the Dallas Deauville Dine and Dance.

Mr. Landon ought to get hot.

But, then, is it really necessary for a candidate to have a campaign song at all in running for the highest office in the greatest self-governing Nation in the world?

Mr. Landon seems anything but a tuneful man, and if it takes a crooner or a tenor to get the vote he might as well save his entry fee, for he cannot hope to compete with the seductive mooing of Mr. Vallee, the housemaid's Caruso, or the sandpaper murmur of the inveterate invalid Mr. Tommy Lyman.

* * * *

So far as my recollection goes, no campaign song ever contributed much to the success of any candidate for the job of all-American target which the Governor of a typical prairie State approaches with his banjo on his knee. Champ Clark's houn' dog number was a plaintive and rather defensive bit which didn't sing well and grew monotonous before the ink was dry on the sheet music. Mr. Wilson, in his turn, was more embarrassed than assisted by the well-meant but somehow inappropriate lyric of "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier." And "The Sidewalks of New York" was more a challenge than a lure to the overall trade outside New York on two occasions. In the long convention at the old Madison Square Garden each repetition of the anthem of Manhattan increased the sectional and religious fury of the Ku Klux Klan delegates, and in 1928 the constant blare of Charlie Lawlor's masterpiece reminded the farmers of gangsters, the Five Points and a broken heart for every light on Broadway.

This was natural, for Mr. Lawlor had put his soul into this work, and he was plastered when he wrote it. He was walking home from a beefsteak dinner at the late Charlie Murphy's Anawanda Club that night, coming down hard on his heels and weaving his way when the impacts naturally reminded him of the sidewalks of New York. East Side, West Side, all around the town, he thought, were the sidewalks of New York, and before he was home he was humming it over. It was a work of inspiration, and it interpreted Mr. Lawlor's New York so accurately that the song never could appeal to the country vote.

In Kanas City they had a song called "Who But Hoover?" which was pretty bad and might have beaten the engineer in a fairly even fight. But, then, Mr. Smith's song was worse and his brown derby worse than the song, and his religion proved a greater handicap than the song and the hat combined. After the convention in Kansas City the Hoover people realized that no campaign song at all was better than the one they had and dropped it, so comparatively few people ever heard it. Perhaps if Hoover had used it more he would have driven some music lovers into the Communist column, for "Pie in the Sky" had something.

Roosevelt made good use of "Happy Days Are Here Again," but nobody will claim that it made any votes for him or that anyone was kidded into a belief that happy days were back. Those were prohibition days, remember, when people loved to hate the drys, banks were exploding all over the country, and every time a Republican opened his mouth to apologize for Mr. Hoover everyone in sound of that one's voice was converted to the long shot from Albany, who might not know the answers but wasn't afraid to guess.

I don't think it a privilege to write the nation's songs. They are too easily turned to derisive purposes. The British used to mock the fury of Germans by shouting their solemn hymn of hate back at them, and the Frenchmen sometimes burned the Americans by murmuring little sarcastic snatches of "The Yanks Are Coming." And once, in Boston, when the Rev. Billy Sunday was smothering a Shubert "Passing Show," Mr. Ben Atwell, the Shubert press agent, topped Mr. Sunday by sending a bevy of chorus girls down his sawdust trail doing the shimmy, a very daring dance at that time, and singing "Brighten the Corner Where You Are."

If the Republican Party must have a campaign song a happier suggestion would be "Just One More Chance."

But there is risk in all such appeals, including mottoes and symbols. During the Coolidge campaign the publicity department put out a picture of the strong, silent man carrying a Vermont sap bucket, and there was some thought of turning out great numbers of miniature sap buckets as lapel ornaments until some Democrat inquired, "What does the sap use the bucket for?"

Man Killed by Plane.

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—James Gorman, 70-year-old WPA worker, was killed today when he walked into a whirling propellor of an American Airline, Inc., test plane at the Municipal Airport. Police said Gorman, who was deaf, apparently did not hear or see the plane moving toward him.

Democracy At Bay

Observer Returning From Czechoslovakia Reports Nation Torn By Economic Difficulties Which Strike At Constitution.

By Mary G. Cary,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

TODAY there is no country in all Europe that is more worried than Czechoslovakia. She was able until 1933 to manage her own economic and political problems, and through her skillful diplomacy at Geneva, she formed a ring of alliances and pacts that seemed to make her secure from any possible foreign attack.

Czechoslovakia is a country of 15,000,000 people, of whom 55 per cent are agriculturalists in the eastern end of the country, Slovakia. The Czechs live in the old kingdom of Bohemia and have built up their capital, Prague, from a city of 650,000 to a modern, bustling metropolis of 1,000,000 inhabitants. In the mountains around the western frontiers that touch Germany are 3,500,000 German-speaking inhabitants, descendants of small industrial workers who migrated through the valleys from Germany during the past 400 years. These people have been very seriously hit by the depression since 1933, and in the autumn of that year a political party arose, inspired by German National Socialist doctrines, that has finally assumed such menacing proportions that the government expects some sort of civil war or "putsch" at any time. This is the cause of real "jitters" today among the Czechs.

Disciplined Democracy Reported Wavering.

AS ONE comes to know the Czechs one discovers the best democracy that post-war Europe has produced. To be sure, this democracy must be called a disciplined one, for today with the fears of political insecurity coupled with growing economic difficulties and a menacing international situation, the Czechoslovak state has had to take strenuous measures to assure internal peace.

The economic troubles are due mostly to the fact that Bohemia formerly supplied manufactured goods to the entire Austro-Hungarian empire. Today this region has lost its market and depends for its customers on the agricultural part of the country, Slovakia, which cannot hope to purchase all that the formel Balkan lands once could absorb.

In her efforts to export her goods, Czechoslovakia has been hindered by the fact that most of her neighbors have only agricultural products to sell, which she cannot afford to accept without ruining her own farmers, who have a higher standard of living and demand higher prices for their wheat and livestock. She is further hindered from trading with many countries by the contingent system and the difficulties in securing credits. The application of sanctions against Italy has ruined her glass and jewelry trade, which is chiefly concentrated in the German-speaking districts. She has recently been cultivating the Russian markets, but although many industries show rising sales and increased production, the unemployment problem is as serious as ever.

Nazi Propaganda Spreads From Germany.

TAKING advantage of the unrest and smoldering resentment of the German-speaking citizens near the frontier, Nazi propaganda has built up a powerful party in these districts called the Sudeten German Party. A former school teacher, Konrad Henlein, succeeded in arousing the German-speaking element to such an extent that in the parliamentary election in May, 1935, the party won 44 seats in Parliament in the lower house and 23 in the Senate. Henlein did not run, but got young men from the other three German parties to stand as candidates.

The former German bloc in the government was broken and the German Peasant Party was tempted to join the Sudeten Party, until they asked where all the money to finance the elaborately prepared campaign could have come from. The workers' incomes in that district had dropped since 1933 by 40 per cent in contrast to a fall of 16 per cent in the rest of Czechoslovakia. So it was generally believed that the Henlein Party could have been financed only from Berlin, where there is an industrious association collecting money for the use of Germans in foreign countries.

At any rate all the German-speaking parties finally refused to co-operate with the Henlen group. Although his party represented 70 per cent of the German-speaking voters in Czechoslovakia, they were not invited to have a voice in the government, and since the first of March, they have been declared unconstitutional, and are suspected of openly advocating secession.

Henlein tries to assure Czech audiences that he is a loyal member of the state, that he would not want to change the present frontiers of the country, which were made by nature and if altered would only cause more trouble. He merely demands equal rights for the German-speaking minority. By this he wishes to control the radio, bookshops and theaters, which would be organs to further the totalitarian and racial theories of National Socialism. He is opposed to Benes' foreign policy of friendship with France and Russia and the Little Entente. He demands a policy that is not anti-German and asks that Czechoslovakia remain an independent unit, without any foreign connections. This is, of course, entirely taken as Nazi doctrine and the Czechs shiver as they see themselves in the eyes of the Sudeten Party as the docile handmaiden of a triumphant, undemocratic Germany.

Benes Government Defies Sudeten Group.

THE CZECH government has taken stringent measures against the Sudeten Party, but some of their policies may have been in the long run unwise for a democratic state. Naturally, after the 400-years of domination by the Hapsburgs, the Czechs have developed a deep resentment to everything German. In the past nine years they have systematically laid off or retired 33 per cent of their German-speaking officials, teachers, railroad employes and postoffice workers. At the same time they have put into office in similar places 41 per cent Czech and Slovak citizens.

During the depression, they have in the Sudeten regions given jobs only to Czechs in public works. They have appointed only Czechs on all frontier posts, like railways and customs. They have refused to undertake road-building for the unemployed in those regions, for fear "that Hitler might march in on the new highways." Worst of all, they have begun in many places a systematic boycott of German goods, or goods produced by German-speaking firms, thus ruining the already weakened community buying-power in these regions.

Workers Of Prague Show Nation's Temper.

ON MAY DAY, the workers of Prague celebrated. Not a vehicle moved, but early that day the burly police in their long, black broadcloth overcoats, trimmed with garnet facings, and topped by their squat, black, metal-rimmed helmets, came out by the hundreds to the huge rectangular square of St. Wenceslaus. Promptly at 9 o'clock the Black Shirts of an extreme Fascist workers' group marched quickly past the thick crowds of spectators. They were followed by the Benes workers, Moderate Democrats. Then came the Socialists carrying a huge picture of the imprisoned German pacifist, Ossietsky. Enormous cheers greeted them from the onlookers.

Last to come were the Communists, who, like the rest, marched six abreast at a rapid pace. They were composed of old and young men, old women being helped along by grandchildren, mothers and fathers carrying children or babies. Young girls in the home-made red blouses and bandanas. Each one carried a little stick from the top of which fluttered red cut paper and a Soviet star with hammer and sickle.

Two days later, a peace meeting was held in Gablonz, one of the jewelry and glass manufacturing towns in the Sudeten Mountains. Twenty-four hundred people sat full of enthusiasm for over three hours to hear women of various countries. As the cheers rose when the French lady spoke, appealing to the Czechs as the defenders of liberty and democracy in central Europe, it was my turn next to bring a message from America.

Wild enthusiasm greeted the first mention of the United States and my short talk was cheered to the echo. But in my heart I wondered what peace there could be for these people, threatened not only by disloyalty within, but with an economic situation about which they could do nothing. In that beautiful town, lying in the pine-covered mountains, 400 men alone had been laid off because Czechoslovakia had applied sanctions on Italy.

American Argument.

I.

There is friction excessive at our house—
There are arguments heavy and hot;
Once contentment and happiness reigned there
But of late they have certainly not;
The disturbance is wild and unending
As all hands their opinions intone;
Popper sides with McReynolds and Butler—
Mommer stands with Cardozo and Stone!

II.

Through the day and the night there is turmoil—
For a week at a stretch it will last;
Gone's the tranquil accord and the quiet
That made happy our home in the past.
Things now fly through the air with a clatter—
Ev'ry head in the house has a bruise;
Brother Egbert defends Justice Roberts—
Brother Charlie's for Brandeis and Hughes!

III.

Busted furniture litters our cottage,
There is hardly a dish still intact,
There's a hole in the side of the building
And the panes in each window are cracked.
In the thick of the fight are our sisters
As they shout their opinions in vain;
Van Devanter-McReynolds win Ella,
It is Brandeis-Cardozo with Jane!

IV.

If the battle were something like private
There might not be the terrible din.
But the butcher and mailman get in it—
Anybody in town can get in!
Van Devanter, McReynolds and Roberts
Are a bust, says the grocery man,
While Cardozo, Stone, Brandeis and and Hughes are
The ones that our milkman will pan!

V.

On a bus or a train or a trolley
There is not much escape from the war;
Even tombs and far cloisters are noisy
Since those justices went 5 to 4.
There is hardly a prospect of order
And I think to the hills I shall flee
'Til that day when the court stirs the planet
By deciding a case six to three!

Hanging On.

"Emergency Taxes Continued."—headline. This has been one of the best emergencies the politicians ever had, and they are not going to give it up willingly.

Bandits who had just stuck up a car and stolen $50,000 were stopped by a New York motorcycle policeman and given a ticket for passing a red light. They were darned lucky not to be charged with parking near a hydrant, too.

President Roosevelt says the Supreme Court has created a "No Man's Land." The Democratic war cry is evidently going to be "Over the stop!"

Jim Thomas, former British Cabinet officer, has been found guilty of releasing government secrets. Every Thomas, Dick and Harold knew what was going on, it seems.

Slang Origins

By William Lyon Phelps.

"Sundae" In Ithaca.

When I was crossing the ocean in 1935, a steward, who was a foreigner, asked me for the origin and etymology of the name of the famous confection called in America "sundae." I told him I did not know; but when I reached home I made many inquiries. The best evidence seems to indicate that the word originated in Ithaca about 1897.

* * * *

Another expression, the origin of which was unknown to me, is "running like Sam Hill."

Accordingly, I am grateful to Mr. A. H. Stevens, jr., Yale, 1928, for the following interesting letter. I ought to have known but I was totally ignorant of this historical episode.

* * * *

If Sundae came from Ithaca, you may be pardoned. But if the authentic Sam Hill came from Guilford and sat in the Colonial Assembly at New Haven (and alternately at Hartford) before either you or I went to Yale, perhaps you should be fore-armed against future stumping.

"In the History of Guilford, Connecticut, by Ralph D. Smith (J. Munsell, 1877), you may find:

"On pages 165, 6, 7, and 8 that Sam Hill was sent from Guilford to the General Assembly of the combined colonies of New Haven and Connecticut every year from 1728 to 1752, inclusive; and again, on page 182: 'Town Clerks Since the Settlement of the Town . . . No. 10: Samuel Hill, 1717 to 1720 . . . No. 12: Samuel Hill, rechosen, 1721 to 1732.' . . .

It looks to me like the true foundation of the expression, "Running like Sam Hill."

Poor Fund Assigned.

Leesburg, Va., June 5.—The Loudoun County Board of Supervisors appropriated $4,549.36 to match a State allowance to provide for destitute persons in Loudoun County who are in need of public relief. Loudoun's share of the $950,000 fund appropriated at the last session of the Legislature for relief of the poor and indigent is $7,582.26.

Davis Is Named Reserve Board 'Farm Member'

position since Davis, after night-and-day labors in planning the soil conservation program, was sent to Europe by the President in April for a six-weeks' study of agriculture and trade conditions.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), of Florida, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, called a committee meeting for Tuesday to consider the nomination of Davis. He said:

"I think he is a very good man. So far as I know, he will be confirmed."

Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, father of the Federal Reserve System, who is chairman of the Senate Banking sub-committee which considers nominations, said:

"I see no reason to oppose him at this time. I don't know what will be presented before the committee, if anything."

Numerous rumors as to Davis' future niche had been current since his departure on the European trip. Many observers had predicted he would make a speaking tour of the Midwest to present his European observations to farmers of that area in an effort to offset the anti-Administration attacks of George N. Peek, once an AAA head himself.

Davis, in St. Paul, Minn., last night, back in this country only a week, discussed the benefits of the present farm program when coupled with the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement policy. He pictured nationalistic trends in thought as "economy folly," and stressed the necessity of heavy export trade by this country if recovery is to be stable and permanent.

AAA Issues Statement.

The AAA announcement yesterday cleared up reasons for the appointment at this time. It said:

"As the vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board exists while Congress is in session, it was necessary to make the appointment before adjournment; otherwise no salary could be paid until confirmation by the Senate at its next session."

Davis' term will actually begin in February of this year. His salary will be $15,000, $5,000 a year more than he received as AAA administrator.

The 1935 banking act increased membership in the Federal Reserve Board from six to seven, and set the seventh place for a representative of the farmers of the Nation. The place had been unfilled since the act was approved.

Davis, who was born November 17, 1887, on an Iowa farm, attended public schools and graduated from Grinnell College, Iowa.

Worked With Peek.

In newspaper work in South Dakota and Montana until 1917, he began publishing the Montana Farmer that year. He became commissioner of agriculture for Montana in 1921. In 1925 he joined the Illinois Agricultural Association and worked with Peek and others at that time for enactment of the McNary-Haugen farm bill.

He worked for Alfred E. Smith in the 1928 Presidential campaign.

Tolley, born September 30, 1889, in the Indiana farm country, graduated from the University of Indiana, and entered Government service with the Commerce Department in 1912. In 1922 he transferred to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. After that he became director of the Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics at the University of California, joining the AAA in 1933, and serving until last fall, when he left for the foundation again.

On January 6, when the Supreme Court toppled the AAA, Secretary Wallace sent for him and he has helped ever since in formulating a substitute program.

At RFC 3 Years.

Schram, appointed to the RFC, was born in Peru, Ind., November 23, 1893. In 1911 he entered the service of J. O. Cole, of Peru, operator of extensive coal mines, timber and farm lands. Upon Cole's death in 1923 he assumed control of the estate's affairs, but severed that connection in 1933 to become associated with the RFC as chief of the drainago, levee and irrigation division. Schram also is president of the board of trustees of the Electric Home and Farm Authority.

The RFC board now consists of Jesse H. Jones, of Texas, chairman; Charles B. Henderson, of Nevada; C. B. Merriam, of Kansas; Frederic H. Taber, of Massachusetts; Charles T. Fisher, jr., of Michigan, and the Secretary of the Treasury ex-officio. The confirmation of Schram's appointment will complete the membership of the board.

The Senate last night confirmed Robert Lincoln O'Brien, of Massachusetts, to be a member of the Tariff Commission. O'Brien is now chairman. His term will expire June 16, 1942.

The Senate also confirmed Claude L. Draper, of Wyoming, to be a member of the Federal Power Commission. Draper's term expires June 22, 1941.

A.F.G.E. to Fight For Labor Seats

Members of various lodges in the American Federation of Government Employes yesterday began a fight to retain their direct representation in the Washington Central Labor Union.

Under a proposed interpretation of the A. F. of L. constitution by the executive council of the Washington Central Latbor Union, it was said, the A. F. G. E. lodges would be prevented from sending delegates to meetings of the union.

E. Claude Babcock, national president of the A. F. G. E., said he would take up the problem before the executive committee of his organization at a meeting this morning in the Hamilton Hotel. Ira Bain, vice president of the organization, said he was opposed to any policy which would cut off direct representation.

Bain, a lewyer, said the proposal to bar representation would be a violation of the constitution of the American Federation of Labor. He added that only the A. F. of L. or its executive council had the right to amend or interpret the constitution.

Senate Passes Tax Bill

cost of the new farm control program, resulting from the AAA invalidation, and the new bonus financing, the Senate bill would raise $751,000,000, if the Treasury is right in its estimates, and $829,000,000 if the Senate Finance Committee is right. Senators claim the Treasury has underestimated the yield by $78,000,000. These figures compared with $803,000,000 estimated for the House bill.

The President had requested that Congress raise $620,000,000 annually by some form of permanent taxation, and that $517,000,000 in additional revenue be obtained over the next two or three years.

Briefly, the revenue measure provides:

A 1 per cent increase in individual surtax rates on incomes of from $6,000 to $50,000.

A 15½ to 18 per cent corporate income tax, representing a 3 per cent increase over present rates.

A 7 per cent additional tax on undivided profits of corporations.

Imposition of the 4 per cent normal income tax on corporate dividends received by stockholders.

Continuance of the capital stock and excess-profits taxes in full force, despite the Administration recommendations for their repeal.

Strengthening of administrative provisions of the present law, imposing penalties on "unreasonable" retention of corporate earnings.

Provisions designed to encourage liquidation of personal holding companies.

Exemptions Granted.

Exempts from the additional 7 per cent tax, banks, trust companies, life insurance companies and domestic concerns in bankruptcy or receivership.

Imposes 80 per cent "windfall" tax on refunded or unpaid AAA processing taxes.

Increases import tax on certain fish and vegetable oils.

Steeper taxes on income of non-resident aliens and foreign corporations, with preferential treatment for those residing in contiguous countries.

A host of minor amendments offered by individual Senators forced the Senate into a night session when the bill appeared on the point of passage late in the afternoon.

Robinson Takes Gavel.

Majority Leader Robinson had announced the Senate would not quit for the night until a final vote was taken on the bill. To speed action, Robinson himself took the gavel, and sat in the Vice President's chair.

But leaders had not reckoned on the Senate's penchant for quibbling. Each amendment brought a new wrangle. Finally, as the hour grew late, the leadership adopted a new strategy. Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, who was managing the bill on the floor, stopped fighting each Senator's offering. He consented to carry nearly a dozen amendments to conference.

Taking a facetious poke at the procedure, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, asked:

"Mr. President, is this the greatest deliberative body in the world?"

"It is when the Senator is present," snapped King.

The debate became dangerously personal at one point, when Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, vainly sought an amendment to give new corporations three years in which to revalue their stock for capital stock tax purposes.

Couzens Chides Pittman.

Senator LaFollette said the amendment would "jeopardize" the revenue yield of the bill, and cited a tax expert as an authority. When Pittman quickly rebuked LaFollette for taking the word of an "expert" against the word of a Senator, both LaFollette and Senator James M. Couzens (Republican), of Michigan, rose to the defense of committee experts. Couzens said Senators should not represent "clients" or "special interests" on the Senate floor.

Among the amendments that went down to defeat were proposals by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, to exempt from the 7 per cent undivided profits tax money spent for plant equipment and expansion, for plants destroyed by catastrophes, and funds used to defray debts.

Although Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, urged the Finance Committee to exempt money spent for plant expansion, both the Finance Committee and the Senate made short work of the Adams proposals.

Among the successful amendments was a cut in the amount of insurance that could be used tax-free to pay estate taxes, from $1,000,000 to $250,000; a $42,000,000 appropriation to pay refunds of processing taxes on commodities sold abroad or to charitable institutions, and an adjustment of the duty on rough lumber to the same level as the duty on finished lumber.

Special Taxes Defeated.

Among those thrown overboard in the rush toward passage were proposed taxes on tapioca and sago, proposed import taxes on jute, proposed State taxation of national banks, and one suggestion that even accumulated surpluses of corporations be taxed.

The bill as passed by the Senate bears small resemblance to the measure that was whipped through the House under an Administration lash.

While the Senate would levy a 7 per cent tax on undivided profits, the House rates were graduated up to a maximum of 42½ per cent. It is on this provision that the conference fight will center, with Administration Senators and Representatives fighting for the House rates.

Whereas the House imposed no corporate income tax whatsoever, the Senate imposed the following rates:

15½ per cent on the first $2,000 of corporate income.
16 per cent on the next $13,000.
17 per cent on the next $25,000.
18 per cent on all corporate income over $40,000.

These compare with the present range of 12½ to 15 per cent.

Another striking difference in the two measures came in treatment of intercorporate dividends. The House had provided that subsidiary concerns be fully taxed on earnings, even though all were paid out to a parent company. The Senate eliminated this section, continuing merely the provisions of the present law.

Stronger Laws On Neutrality Urged by Clark

15-Point Program Offered; Would Bar Citizens on Belligerent Ships.

By the Associated Press.

A 15-point legislative program intended to bolster existing neutrality laws was recommended to the Senate yesterday by Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, a member of the Munitions Investigation Committee.

Clark recommended:

1. That in time of war, the President keep Congress "accurately and promptly" advised of the status of the neutrality policy of the Government.

2. That belligerent ships which "misuse" the American flag be barred from United States ports.

3. That the United States refuse to clear armed merchant vessels of belligerent nations carrying passengers and non-passenger carrying armed merchantmen if armaments are not clearly visible.

4. That travel of Americans on belligerent ships through war zones be prohibited.

Floating of Loans.

5. That legislation permanently forbidding floating of loans by belligerents in this country be enacted. The present neutrality act covering this expires May 1, 1937.

6. That the President be empowered to prevent extension of credit to belligerents in excess of six months maturity.

7. That an embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war be declared to all belligerents and that abnormal booms in war supplies be prevented.

8. That the Munition Control Board be strengthened and the existing neutrality act be clarified to make embargoes apply immediately to all nations engaging in war.

9. That the munitions control board be allowed to examine correspondence and records concerning orders prior to munitions shipment whenever an embargo is in effect.

10. That "in view of the chaotic condition of international law concerning neutral rights and the fact that infringement of our claims to such neutral rights are almost inevitable in case of another major war, Congress should seriously consider the possibility that even another military victory in another war would not necessarily establish these rights against our own allies in any such war."

Arms Exports Licenses.

11. That no licenses for arms exports be issued unless the government of the importing country acquiescences and that penalties for inaccurate labeling, false manifests and false destinations be increased.

12. That "all possible steps" be taken to make international control of the munitions business more effective and that licenses for export of articles that might be used for either military or commercial purposes be accompanied by a statement from the importing nation that they are goods for commercial use only.

13. That arms be sold and shipped to recognized governments only.

14. That the 1935 neutrality act in general be extended by new legislation.

15.—That Congress consider ratification of the Geneva arms convention of 1925.

Roosevelt Signs Agriculture Bill

Legislation providing $195,304,606 for the Government's far-flung agricultural department activities during the 1937 fiscal year was signed into law yesterday by President Roosevelt.

This left but four of the session's 11 money measures still unapproved.

The bill did not provide for the $1,000,000 requested by the budget bureau to continue planting of the plains tree-shelterbelt, a New Deal undertaking which has been subject of much controversy.

The 1937 highway program is provided for in the measure including $125,000,000 authorized in new contracts under the old Hayden-Cartwright act and some $80,000,000 appropriated to pay past contracts.

Inventor Is Freed In O'Leary Death

P. E. Dettra, 39-year-old inventor, was freed late yesterday in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., of a manslaughter charge which grew out of the death of Mrs. William J. O'Leary, 47, of 3601 Connecticut avenue, in his "fever machine" last month.

The manslaughter warrant was withdrawn by J. B. Vreeland, chairman of the coroner's jury, but Dettra was rearrested immediately afterward on a charge of practicing medicine without a license.

Mrs. O'Leary, wife of William J. O'Leary, administrative officer in the Bureau of Public Roads, died May 24 from burns received in the machine, which Dettra claimed would cure arthritis.

Five Creepers Parts 4 and 5

FIVE CREEPERS OF THE SAME AGE, in different stages of creeping.—In today's pictures are shown two more creepers, still at the same age as the three previously shown, but in two other stages of creeping. In the first row of pictures, Baby Number Four really creeps. He plants one hand before him, digs in one knee and then proceeds by alternating lift and push. The second row of pictures shows Baby Number Five of this series, who goes on all fours, at the same age as the four other creepers. He proceeds like a bear, planting foot as well as hand in true quadruped manner. TOMORROW: A full page in the Rotogravure Section of The Sunday Post.

The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector of St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, will preach tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock on "God." Dr. Hart will leave later this week to attend the meeting of the Forward Movement Commission in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Holy Communion will be celebrated twice tomorrow at the Rock Creek Parish Episcopal Church. The Lord's Supper will be celebrated first at special services at 8:30 a. m. and again at the regular morning services at 11 o'clock.

The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke will speak on "What Is Being Saved?" at the festival Holy Communion service in recognition of Holy Trinity at All Saints' Episcopal Church tomorrow.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 7 a. m. tomorrow at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Fifteenth and Church streets northwest. Communion will be celebrated again at 11 a. m. The Rev. J. E. Elliott will conduct both services. He will preach the regular Sunday morning sermon at the 11 o'clock service.

Dr. C. A. Poling Will Address Presbyterians

Central Church Will Hear Dr. Taylor; McCartney Will Preach.

Dr. Charles A. Poling, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Phoenix, Ariz., will be guest speaker tomorrow at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. His subject will be "Out of the Tumult."

Dr. Poling will speak at evening service on "An Army With Banners."

Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Meaning of the Lord's Supper" at the Central Presbyterian Church. At night he will speak on "Some Teachings in the Book of Revelation."

"The Contagion of Christian Character" will be the subject of Dr. Albert Joseph McCartney's sermon-subject tomorrow morning at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church at 11 o'clock.

French services will be held at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 4 o'clock, with the Rev. Andre Frank Liotard preaching on "Un Conseil pour Tous les Ages."

The Rev. Harry Porter, pastor, will conduct Communion service at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the Westminster Presbyterian Church. He will talk on "What Remained When the Supper Was Ended?" The pastor also will lead the Westminster Fellowship at 7 p. m. in a survey of the prophecy of Isaiah.

Sunday evening will mark the beginning of vesper services at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church. The Men's Bible Class will be in charge of the program, and Homer L. M. McCormick, local attorney, will speak on "Public Enemies."

"The Limitless God" will be the subject of an address tomorrow morning by the Rev. Bernard Braskamp at the Gunton-Temple Presbyterian Church, Sixteenth and Newton streets northwest.

Children's Day services will take the place of the regular morning worship service tomorrow at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. The entire program, beginning at 11 o'clock, will be under direction of the Young People's Council. Theme of the service will be "Building a New Individual."

Holloman to Preach.

The Rev. J. L. S. Holloman, pastor, will speak tomorrow morning from the pulpit of the Second Baptist Church, Third street, between H and I streets, northwest, on "The Fruits of a Christian Life." Services will begin at 11 a. m.

On the Air Today

Our ear-to-the ground department reports there seems to be a trend toward full hour shows once again. Naturally, the trend isn't ever going to be revolutionary with radio networks coming at the cost they do. But several programs seem to be headed into the hour bracket.

No less than ten program sponsors would like to stage full-hour shows if the time becomes available. Among the late reports are the names of Walter O'Keefe and Jack Oakie. O'Keefe ("Caravan") now is doing two half-hour programs a week. Oakie is not now on the air, but got a good audition recently through an appearances with Ken Murray.

Murray, incidentally, has announced he wouldn't do a full hour for any one. Murray's theory is that the public will accept his brand of humor for 30 minutes and—wish the show lasted longer. But he reasons (and perhaps rightly) that he would go stale with his audience in 60 minutes.

On the other hand, Fred Allen seems to wear very well in a full-hour show. Rudy Vallee has known nothing else for years. Maj. Bowes almost requires a full hour to put on his type of show. The "Showboat" is another one-hour veteran.

My personal hunch is that there will be only a faint ripple in the full-hour show schedules. Too much money for the benefits derived from.

Yesterday, some one wrote for information on broadcasts of races from Charles Town by WFMD. Today the news comes through. Must be mental telepathy at work. Anyway, WFMD will broadcast Charles Town races at approximately 4:30 each Saturday and Wednesday afternoon—and that includes today. Tune WFMD just a bit off WRC. There's even a WFMD Handicap race on the card today.

Highlights today:

National Open Golf: Sprinkled all through the afternoon schedules. Consult the timetable.

Phil Lampkin: Guests with the Kiddies Hour, WJSV, at 10 a. m.

Ginger Rogers: With Smith Ballew and orchestra, "Chateau," WRC, at 8:30.

Coast Guard Academy Anniversary: WMAL, at 10.

Ceremonies: Opening of Texas Centennial Exposition, WRC, at 9:30. With Jan Garber and Jose Manzanares orchestra, Marine Band, organ and vocalists.

Pop Concert: Including Choppin's "Military" Polonaise, "Finlandia," by Sibelius, Dukas' "Sorcerer's Apprentice," selections from "Carmen" and Tannhauser." WMAL, at 7:30.

More Centennial: Columbia makes its Centennial pickup from Dallas at 1. With 1,000-voice chorus, band and drum corps, cowboy chorus, pageants, WJSV.

Rudy Valee is heard in a sustaining series for the first time in months, as I recall, over facilities of the National Broadcasting Co. He can be heard Saturday nights at 11, WRC. No one will sell you anything in this Valee series . . . Aside to Minerva Klinge: You shall, indeed, have those columns written by Kate Smith and Gracie Allen.

• • • •

After you hear Jack Hylton and his Continental Revue this week at the Earle and catch his air show Sunday night from WMAL, just remember that I kept saying all last winter that it was grand entertainment and available (for several months) through stations of the Columbia network in the Middle West. I'm going to look up Pat O'Malley and find whether those swell songs about Sam Small ever have been recorded.

• • • •

"Prof. Quizz" tells me that the demand for tickets for his show each Saturday night in the Willard Room, Willard Hotel, already has exceeded the seating capacity. Wonder where they'll move it next. It outgrew the WJSV studios the second night it went on the air and is only a month old now. Incidentally, the "Prof." (Jim McWilliams to you) also says he is taking applications for contestants in the weekly "school sessions." Apply to him by telephone, at WJSV, today if you wish. The show: WJSV, at 8:30 tonight.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

A committee to draw up plans for the re-organization and enlargement of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamship Inspection, will shortly be appointed by Col. John Monroe Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of marine activities.

The bureau was given more money for its work by Congress than it has ever had before and, although Col. Johnson would not commit himself as to the extent of the planned re-organization, he said that the plan would be ready for the beginning of the fiscal year on July 1 and that he would invite a number of naval and civil experts to sit on the re-organization committee.

"Without a doubt the recent marine tragedies such as the Morro Castle and others had an influence on Congress in taking up this matter and making changes by law," Col. Johnson said. "We have long needed a larger and more efficient bureau, and now we will have something much more effective in the Merchant Marine than ever before."

He declared the new plan will include additional inspection of American ships, but that the committee's work is fairly well prescribed by Congress and will consist in part in finding means of carrying out the new regulations.

Off to Twenty-first Convention.

Jim Preston—he's never called James D. Preston—the Assistant Administrative Secretary of the National Archives, leaves Washington tonight for Cleveland to attend his twenty-first national convention. The first one he attended was when McKinley was nominated at St. Louis in 1896 and, although he has not attended every one since that time, he holds as a special memory the year of 1912, when there were three national conventions on his schedule—the Republican, the Democratic and the Bull Moose.

Jim, who was for years in the Senate Press gallery as the chief factotum there, is officially listed at the conventions as an assistant in the press section, but those of us who have attended them know that he just about runs the hundreds of newspaper people there, straightens out their difficulties, gets them information and is himself a walking dictionary of political facts and dates.

He keeps a special set of memory books in his office in the Archives and gets them out at convention times to refresh the history of all past conventions. Yesterday he thumbed through an old file and pointed out with a laugh that the convention that ratified the nomination of Andrew Jackson for President and that nominated Martin Van Buren for Vice President, was held in the Universalist Church in Baltimore, and that it had a seating capacity of 1,200. Those were the press days, Jim said, when reporters wrote their stories in long hand and sent them to their editors by stage coach.

Same Names, Different Men.

There's another interesting bit of personnel chatter picked up yesterday at the Archives. There are two Russells among the 161 employes there, both of whom head divisions, both of whom are graduates of the University of Michigan, both of whom are amateur organists of accomplishment and who met for the first time when they came to Washington, although one Russell succeeded the other as organist in an Ann Arbor church during their college days.

John R. Russell, chief of cataloguing, was a freshman at college the year Nelson Vance Russell, chief of the reference division was graduated. Nelson Russell had been the organist in a small church and, hearing that there was a freshman who also played the organ, he phoned the younger man and asked if he would like to take the job he was leaving. John Russell assented but they never met until Robert D. W. Connor, the archivist, who knew them both, brought them here.

Robert L. Pile, superintendent of the plate vault division of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, who has a record of over 42 years of service, was retired on age a few days ago. Five other men whose length of employment ranges from 15 to 37 years, and three women, all of whom have worked in the Bureau for more than 30 years, were also retired. They are Louis Nichols, James C. Bannister, James P. Lannon, John F. Elmore, Archibald Joyce, Mrs. Grace F. Murphy, Mrs. Dorothy L. McCormick and Madelyn Zerega.

The Civil Service Committee of the Washington Chapter of the Federation of Architects, Chemists, Engineers and Technicians has little hope of the passage at this session of Congress of its bill designed to set up a board of appeals for the adjudication of disputes between Government employes and their superiors. But they announced yesterday that the bill will re-introduced at the opening of the next session along with several others to further the Civil Service program of the organization.

'Getting Simply to Hold' Dr. Daugherty's Topic

Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty, pastor, will preach tomorrow at the Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R streets, on "Getting Simply to Hold." Services will begin at 11 a. m.

The Rev. Emilio Greco, editor of the Sunday Courier, Newark, N. J., will preach the sermon.

The first Sunday in June always is observed throughout Italian communities in all parts of the world as the anniversary of the granting of a charter of civil liberities by King Albert of Savoy, in 1848.

Father Greco will deal particularly with the Constitution of 1848.

Scientist Church Lists Lesson Topic

The text to be the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow is: "God, the Only Cause and Creator."

The Golden Text will be taken from Psalms 121:1-2: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth."

The lesson-sermon includes this passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health, With Key to Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause, and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause."

Dr. Brooks to Speak.

Dr. R. W. Brooks, pastor, will speak tomorrow at the Lincoln Congregational Temple on "How to Transform Society." Services will begin at 11 a. m.

Six of 12 Members Meet in Connection With Alumnae Sessions.

Many Changes Made in School Cited by Mrs. Leiter.

"Early to bed and early to rise——"

Bedtime for the students of the lower school at Georgetown Visitation Convent is just 15 minutes later now than when Mrs. Joseph Leiter attended there 30 years ago—a concession of half a minute a year, she points out. The time for rising, 5:50 a. m. if the girls were going to mass and 6:10 if they were not, has not changed, but many other things at Georgetown have since she was a schoolgirl there, says Mrs. Leiter.

Yesterday and the day before the meeting of the Alumnae Association was the occasion of a reunion of 6 of the 12 girls who graduated from the convent in 1906. One is Sister Mary Margaret, headmistress at the school, and the others, Mrs. Alden Ludlow, of Mill Neck, Long Island, and Mrs. John Bower, jr., of Hagerstown, Md., who were guests of Mrs. Leiter during their stay in Washington; Miss Eleanor Connolly, of this city, and Mrs. Franchette M. Gilman, of Amherstburg, Ontario, and Miss Connolly's guest. Three members of the class have died and three were unable to be here.

Mrs. Leiter presided at the banquet for which the alumnae gathered at the Sulgrave Club Thursday night. Also there, were her mother, Mrs. John R. Williams, who attended Georgetown Convent 55 years ago, and her daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter, a recent student who has only known the school as the modern institution it now is.

Oldest Alumna.

Mrs. Florence Hayes Roach claimed the distinction of being the oldest alumna there. "I was enrolled at the convent when I was 12, and that was 70 years ago," she told those of classes of 50 or 25 years ago, mere youngsters as Georgetown counts its alumnae; for it is the oldest convent in America, opened 137 years ago.

Recalling the ten years she was a student, from the age of 8 to 18, Mrs. Leiter says the girls there today have "the earth with a fence around it."

Walking was the chief diversion for the girls 30 years ago; horseback would not have been countenanced; nor were there tennis courts, golf course, hockey field or gymnasium such as the school now affords. A mild form of baseball, played with tennis racquets and soft balls, was the most strenuous sport in which the young students indulged.

Instead of the private rooms of today she remembers dormitories accommodating about eight girls each. White curtains on iron rods halfway up to the ceiling divided the dormitory into "rooms" and there was no opportunity for talking after the signal for lights out at 9 o'clock.

Conversed in French.

After dinner in the evening, half an hour was devoted to French conversation—a period none too popular with most of the girls but one which came with unfailing regularity, as Mrs. Leiter recalls.

"The discipline was strict, but I guess it didn't hurt us," she said.

Since she attended, two years of college have been added to the course the school offers. Regulations for the older girls are somewhat different from those for the lower school which corresponds to that she attended, and which have changed but little in some respects since she was there. Mrs. Leiter is president of the Alumnae Association and much interested in the historic school which has given instruction to three generations of her family.

C. U. Graduates Will Be Feted

Alumnae Will Entertain 1936 Class at Tea Tomorrow.

The Catholic University Alumnae Association will give a tea tomorrow afternoon in the Mullen Memorial Library, from 4 to 6 o'clock, in honor of the women graduates of the class of 1936.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, wife of Senator Duffy, of Wisconsin; Miss Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau, Department of Labor; Miss Agnes G. Regan, acting director of the National Catholic Social Service School, and Mrs. Aubrey E. Landry.

Guerin, Miss Sheila C. Doody, Miss Vivian Barr, Miss Charlotte A. Gartner, Mrs. Frank Berarducci, Mrs. Mildred C. Bennert, Miss Gwendolyn Folsom, Miss Rita Smith and Miss Marcella Maloy.

Prominent on the list of guests will be Archbishop Michael J. Curley, Mgr. Joseph Corrigan, Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick, Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, Mgr. John A. Ryan, Mgr. Peter Guilday, and the heads of the several departments of the Catholic University of America, the Catholic Sisters College and the National Catholic Social Service School.

Lieut. and Mrs. Speck Will Reside in Capital

Lieut. and Mrs. Robert H. Speck, who were married in Marblehead, Mass., on Thursday, will come to Washington in the fall to live, as Lieut. Speck has been ordered here on duty. They have left for a honeymoon in Bermuda and will reside in New York during the summer.

The bride is the former Miss Martha Brackett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Paul Brackett. She is a graduate of the National Cathedral School in Washington. Lieut. Speck was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1927.

Classmates of Thirty Years Ago Meet at Reunion

Underwood & Underwood.

At the Georgetown Visitation Convent yesterday were five graduates who had not been together since their graduation 30 years ago. Pictured at the graduation exercises, they were (left to right) Franchette M. Gilman, of Amherstburg, Ontario; Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Miss Eleanor Connolly, Mrs. Alden Ludlow, of Mill Neck, Long Island, and Mrs. John Bower, jr., of Hagerstown, Md.

Mr. Sommers Weds Miss King

Ceremony Is Performed at Bride's Home by Dr. Simon.

The marriage of Miss Hilda Evelyn King, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph King, to Mr. Herbert Sommers, son of Mrs. Joseph Sommers and the late Mr. Sommers, took place yesterday noon at the home of the bride, at 4707 Connecticut avenue. Dr. Abram Simon performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the immediate families.

The bride, who was unattended, was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Mortimer King. She wore a suit of navy sheer crepe with a large navy hat and matching accessories. A corsage of orchids was fastened at her shoulder.

Following a breakfast for the guests who attended the ceremony, Mr. Sommers and his bride left for New York and sail from there today on the Queen of Bermuda to spend two weeks in Bermuda. Upon their return they will make their home at 4707 Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. White Issues Exhibition Cards

Will Display Mural at Tea Tomorrow Afternoon.

Mrs. Cherry-Ford White has issued cards for a tea and exhibition of her mural, recently unveiled at the sixty-fifth anniversary of Walker's Chapel, Country Club Grove, Va. The tea will be tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 6.

Assisting Mrs. White will be Mrs. Warren R. Smith (Frances Gutelius), Mrs. Ada Davidson, Mrs. Grace Ford Lawrence, Mrs. Robert J. McFall, Mrs. John McKnight, Mrs. Gertrude Royal Mitchell, Miss Mable Strider, Mrs. Herbert Todd, the Rev. and Mrs. Leslie L. Werner and Mr. Louis Loston Moneyway.

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Mary Bush, Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. Frank Gray, Mrs. W. Germand, Mrs. Florence Henry, Mrs. Wilson Hoof, Mrs. Kendall K. Hoyt, Mrs. Sophrina J. Lasica, Mrs. J. T. Lewis and Mrs. Willard Southworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Edge Visit in New York

The former United States Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter Evans Edge are spending some time in New York at the Ambassador Hotel.

Sir Courtauld Thomson, of London, England, who has been at the Ambassador Hotel for several days since his arrival in New York, aboard the Queen Mary, sailed yesterday on her return trip.

Lady Chilton, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain to Spain, and her daughter, Miss Anne Chilton, who have also been spending a brief time at the Ambassador Hotel, sailed yesterday aboard the Queen Mary on their return to England.

Others from Washington who are sending a short time in New York at the Ambassador are Mrs. Nelson T. Hartson, Mrs. John W. Guider, Mrs. J. E. Thurston and Mr. B. M. Thompson.

Luncheon Will Honor Miles Wedding Party

Miss Nanita Yulee Miles, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Sherman Miles, whose wedding to Mr. Allyn Richmond Wight will take place this afternoon in St. John's Church, will be entertained at a luncheon given for members of the bridal party today by Miss Esther Bagley Wallace, one of the bridesmaids.

Yesterday Col. and Mrs. Miles entertained the bridal group at cocktails following the rehearsal, and last evening Col. and Mrs. David Yulee Beckham gave a buffet supper in their honor.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

The United States Minister to Norway and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle will come to Washington on June 15. After a stay of several days they will go to Philadelphia for the Democratic convention.

Mrs. William Boyce Thompson, mother of Mrs. Biddle, will also visit Washington in a short time. She will return on her yacht Alder, the second largest in the world.

Mr. Rogelio Alfaro, son of the Minister of Panama and Mme. de Alfaro, left yesterday on the Queen Mary for Europe, where he will remain until August, studying international law at The Hague and visiting friends.

The Minister, who has been in Panama for several weeks, will return to Washington around the middle of the month.

Mrs. Perry S. Heath, widow of the former Assistant Postmaster General, has closed her house in Washington and left yesterday for New York, whence she will sail today aboard the Georgic. She is accompanied by her brother, Mr. Edward Conway, and together they will spend the summer motoring through Ireland, Wales and England, returning to the Capital in September.

Wife of Minister Of Norway to Sail For Home Tuesday

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway, expects to leave Washington on Monday for New York and will sail on Tuesday aboard the Bergensfjord for her home in Norway. She will be accompanied by her small daughter Marjorie and later in the season they will be joined by the Minister.

The Norwegian Vice Consul at New York, Mr. Sigurd Klingenberg, who, with Mme. Klingenberg, has arrived in Washington and is at the Kennedy-Warren for several months, is at the legation in the absence of the First Secretary, Mr. Francis Irgens, who with his bride will spend several months in Havana, Cuba, where he has temporarily assumed the duties of charge d'affaires.

Miss Perrier Selects Attendant for Wedding

Miss Mary Perrier, daughter of Mrs. Ethel G. Perrier, of Sydney, Australia, whose marriage to Mr. John Love Sevier, of Hendersonville, N. C., will take place on Wednesday, has selected Miss Cynthia Butler, of Sydney, as her maid of honor and only attendant. Mr. John George Marvin, of Summit, N. J., will be best man.

The ceremony will be performed in Christ Church, Alexandria, at 6 o'clock. After the wedding there will be a reception at the Shoreham.

Wedding Is Set For Next Week

Wife of Panama Envoy Will Attend Ceremony in White Plains.

Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama, expects to go to White Plains, N. Y., next week for the wedding of the latter's cousin, Miss Leonore Lucille Hebard, and Mr. Francis de Sola, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert de Sola, of San Salvador, Central America. The wedding will take place on Wdnesday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Hebard, of White Plains.

Miss Hebard will have no attendants. Mr. Orlando de Sola will be his brother's best man. The wedding will be informal and attended only by members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends.

The Minister of Salvador and Senora de Castro had originally planned to be present at the wedding, but will not now be able to attend, as the Minister has to remain in Washington on that date for ceremonies attendant on the inauguration of telephone service between this country and Salvador.

The young couple plan a trip West before sailing for Salvador to reside.

Miss Lightbown Is Dance Hostess

Miss Elizabeth Harper Married To Mr. Courtland L. Warfield

The Rev. Evans Officiates at Ceremony in Gunston-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church; Couple Will Reside in Alexandria.

Miss Elizabeth Glenn Harper, daughter of Mrs. Harry Fleet Harper and the late Mr. Harper, was married at 8 o'clock last evening to Mr. Courtland Lee Warfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Warfield, of Alexandria, Va., in a ceremony at Gunton-Temple Memorial Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Albert Evans, who married the bride's parents, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Bernard Braskamp, pastor of the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Harry Harper, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie over crepe with a standing pleated collar. Her train was edged in pleating and her tulle veil was attached to a halo of net, with orange blossoms at either side. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Edna Louise Klinge, of Wynnewood Park, Md., the maid of honor, wore a gown of gray mousseline de soie with a high waist, a wreath of roses and forget-me-nots in her hair and carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

The bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Ashby Beal, who will be married today to Mr. Frank Cleland Devlin; Miss Nancy Saltsman, the bride's cousin; Mrs. James M. Dykes and Miss Elizabeth Conlon, all of Washington. They wore frocks of powder blue mousseline de soie made like that of the maid of honor; wreaths of pink and blue flowers in their hair, and carried bouquets of pastel-colored flowers.

Mr. Edgar Ashby Warfield was his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. William Bernard Knight, Mr. Robert Duncan, Mr. Milton Harding and Mr. Thomas Monroe.

The bride chose as her going-away costume a dark blue ensemble with white pique trimmings and a dark-blue taffeta hat. After a wedding trip through the North she and her husband will reside in Alexandria.

Mr. Warfield is a graduate of the University of Virginia. He later received a law degree from the National University Law School and is a member of Beta Theta Pi.

Lord Fairfax Club Will Hold Dancing Party

Historic Building Will Be Scene of First Fete Since Opening.

Lord Fairfax Country Club, which was formally opened two weeks ago with a reception and tea dance in the historic old clubhouse on Mount Eagle, will have its first party next Saturday. It will be a subscription dance for which officers of the club have issued invitations.

An orchestra on the veranda will play for dancing which will begin at 9 o'clock in the main rooms of the clubhouse. The broad lawn outside will be lighted with lanterns.

The club is adding to its membership daily and is becoming a popular place for teas, dinner parties and other entertainments. Much interest is being manifest among both the older and younger members in the coming dance which will inaugurate its summer social season.

Mr. William Allston Graham, the president, has announced Mr. Rixey Smith as chairman of the floor committee, assisted by Mr. Gardner L. Boothe 2d, Mr. DeLong Bowman, Mr. Dallas Dort, Mr. Irwin Dunn, Mr. Laird Dunlop, Mr. Alston S. Goff, Mr. William Hoge 3d, Mr. Gordon Peyton, Mr. John Garland Pollard, jr., Mr. James W. Somerville, Mr. Waverly Taylor and Baron Hans von Dreyhausen.

Patronesses will be Mrs. Aldrich Dudley, Mrs. Gardner L. Boothe 2d, Mrs. John E. Fowler, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, Mrs. Charles R. Hooff, Mrs. J. Miller Kenyon, the Misses Moore, Mrs. Frances Northcross, Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, Mrs. C. A. S. Sinclair and Mrs. Rixey Smith.

Miss Leatherwood Weds in New York

Miss Margaret Jane Leatherwood, daughter of the late Representative Elmer O. and Mrs. Leatherwood, of Salt Lake City, was married to Mr. Perrine C. Rockefellow on June 2 in St. Mark's Episcopal Church New York City.

The bride spent her winters in Washington while her father was in Congress, attending the schools of Washington and Miss Madeira's School. She was graduated from Barnard College and on her wedding day received her M. A. degree from Columbia University. She always has spent her summers in her Salt Lake City home.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Rockefellow, of New York City, long connected with the Western Electric Co., and Mrs. Rockefellow. He is a graduate of Colgate University, has done graduate work in Columbia and is engaged in educational work.

Miss Anne Rice, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Miss Rachel Hixson, of Leonia, N. J., were bridesmaids. Dr. C. H. Albaugh, cousin of the bride, and Mr. G. W. Lavery were ushers.

The couple left for Portland, Me., on a wedding trip and will return to Bay Head, N. J., for the summer.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Men Take Issue With "Divorcee's" Four-Point Denouncement of Their Manners and Morals.

It would take at least eight columns of space to print in full letters delivered to this department this week signed by men who have some manner of retort to make to "Divorcee," who aired her views on unmarried men in this column Monday, June 1. Since so much space is not at this department's command, excerpts have been made from as many letters as could possibly be included in one day's column. These excerpts follow. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: May I suggest to "Divorcee" that she critically examine her own actions, speech and source of companionship before condemning the whole race of men on the basis of so limited a sample as a dozen beaux? Take her Criticism No. 4: "Most of them tried to find out just how far they could make advances." This is a subject often discussed among men. It seems to be the consensus of opinion that the extent of the advances depends almost entirely upon the girl. If she is given to discussing suggestive topics and dealing in off-color stories it cannot but be supposed that she is open to cheap amours. If, on the other hand, she evidences a proper, not necessarily prudish, self respect, men will almost invariably follow the lead given. This applies to all women—married, single or divorced.

• • • •

As for her charge that men "all are surprised to meet a girl who does not care for smoking and drinking," that in itself amounts to a condemnation of women more than men. If women who smoke and drink were not a common sight, an expression of surprise on discovering one who does neither would never be voiced. We are surprised at the unusual, never the usual. Therefore, if our friend "Divorcee" would avoid such expressions of surprise, she must either associate with persons who do not indulge in such practices; or, if she prefers the company of those who do, she will have to conform to a temperate degree.

• • • •

As for men "not feeling the need of religion in their lives," may I say that religion, like a good dinner, is not necessarily to be judged by the amount adhering to the vest and tie. Since I am a rather consistent church attendant who makes occasional forays into dance halls, I feel quite safe in making the above observation. SINGLE THIRTY.

• • • •

Says Erskine's Right.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Seven women out of 10 are on the road to self-glorification and the road that leads to men's pocketbooks. "Love them and leave them where you found them" is and will continue to be the average man's motto until women of today muster the good sense to realize that their mode of dress, their cheap talk, their greedy appetite for cocktails, their ambition to supplant man in his own sphere, has brought man's curse of contempt upon them . . . The average girl of today is a rattle-brained person who does not know what she wants, nor when she wants it. She is all for herself, and her knowledge of how to handle men is nil. She thinks she knows how to look out for herself, and that fool man is not a match for her. But "Divorcee" at least is having a sad awakening . . . Pray tell me what good is being accomplished by women of today? John Erskine in his recent book, "The Influence of Women and Its Cure," hit the truth on the head. Did "Divorcee" take the trouble to read it? . . .

• • • •

I have not had a drink in 10 years, and I am willing to wager there are more non-drinking men today than there are non-drinking women . . . I have been married five years, but I did not marry a woman who was born or reared in this country. She is a Latin with a Swiss education and a woman I would go to the ends of the earth for . . . She is far superior in type and intelligence to women of the divorcee ilk. B. W. G.

Southerner Speaks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was both amused and abashed by the letter signed "Divorcee." What she says about the male of the species is true to a large extent, but the same might be said of many young women who are living away from home for the first time. With no one to tell them when to come home, where they may go and whom with, many girls take the attitude: "Now I am free to do what I please and I am going to do just that." Because of the more or less temporary employment which bring the majority of younger people to Washington, the state of affairs described above may be more prevalent in this city than in any other city in the world, yet I believe it exists to some degree in every large city. On the other hand, there are still a good many young people of both sexes in Washington who do not look on life in such vein. I am sure of this because several young people here from my own state—in the Deep South—live by an honorable and above board code.

• • • •

I am 24 and I come from one of the Southern States noted for the beauty and exemplary conduct of its young women. I hope some day to meet and marry a girl who is as intelligent as I; who would regard a man as a fool if he spent all his money or incurred needless debt taking her places—in other words, a girl who is companionable and thoughtful of others, and who, without being beautiful, knew how to make the most of her looks. "Divorcee" says every man drinks intoxicants to some degree. She is wrong there. My closeest friend has never had a drink in his life, nor does he smoke. However, neither he nor I consider anything wrong in anyone's drinking a cocktail now and then in moderation. Almost as many women as men drink nowadays, and think nothing of it. Yours sincerely, L. L.

Conventions Blamed.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I always read your column with much interest because it deals with problems definitely confronting the average person. Many of the solutions suggested by yourself and your readers seem sound to me, but in dealing with the man-woman relationship broached by "Divorcee" there is a tendency to stress the conventions and to ignore underlying urges existing in normal human beings . . . The average man desires to have some days of fun and to do this feels impelled to circulate among the gals and let a permanent relationship develop of its own accord. Most women, on the contrary, would grab the first acceptable man who comes in sight and let it go at that . . . It seems to me conventions must be altered to make allowances for human nature as it really is . . . Man has more faults than woman but in the love relationship he has always got the worst of it in the past. The day is fast passing when a kiss and a caress must immediately be followed by a ball and chain, a heart balm suit or a shooting scrape . . .

ROMANUS.

Men Versus Women.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Men hold up a set of principles for women to live by. Women, as a rule, demand no moral standards in men. ("Divorcee" seems an exception.) The immoral man seems to be the hero and popular favorite of many women, who thereby confess themselves lacking in real character. However, for selfish reasons they try to cling to their own good names and appearance of respectability, fearing the finger of scorn, shame and degradation.

When men live clean, pure lives it is not through fear; it is through self respect, and a desire to be worthy of a fine woman's high companionship. The same may be true of a few women. Today's women rival men in drinking, gambling, smoking and cheap conduct; are often devoid of moral principle and self respect, yet abound in duplicity, strategy and slyness . . . Few marriages would occur soon if the Jewish standard, 22nd chapter of Deut, were enforced. MAN.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

FOR A WEEK homemakers from 22 foreign lands have had most of the spotlight at the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World.

Yet none of these got more attention than an American—a real American—Mrs. George Bates, Kiowa Indian, from Anadarko, Okla. As a delegate from the Wichita Mission Indian Club, this brown-skinned, dark-eyed woman, clad in an authentic Kiowa costume of beaded white buckskin, has aroused much interest at meetings of the conference.

Where did she come from? What was the significance of her attire? Did she make it herself? Did she dress in this fashion all the time? Did squaws of her tribe wear buckskin—even in summer?

A barrage of such questions as these has been fired at modest Mrs. Bates ever since she arrived in Washington five days ago. In most cases a smile has been her only reply, "because," as she explained, "women who were most curious never gave me time to answer."

But yesterday before she left she had time to reply. She told about the costume, herself and the work and interests of women of her tribe. Her comments were supplemented by Mrs. Hesper Williams, assistant home demonstration agent of Caddo County, Oklahoma, who is something of an authority on Indian history and current standards.

Buckskin a Special Costume.

"This costume," said Mrs. Bates, fingering the foot-length fringe on her sleeves, "is worn only on special occasions, very much as you white women wear your evening dresses. I put it on four or five times a year. I have to take good care of it, because it's hard to keep clean."

Her skill in sewing doesn't take in fancy handwork, however. She doesn't weave blankets or baskets or do beadwork of any kind. Few of her friends or relatives do.

The Indian woman's club to which she has belonged for 13 years recognizes this desire of its members. And it is chiefly through this organization that Kiowa, Caddo and Delaware women have learned how to keep abreast of the newest trends in housekeeping.

Maintain Our Standards.

"If you walked into one of our houses today," she said proudly, "you wouldn't know—unless you saw some of us—that it was an Indian home. If you visited our kitchens, you would see exactly what you would see in the average white woman's kitchen. Our children go to school just as the whites do. They dance and sing and drive automobiles. In the summer the boys work on the farms with their fathers; the girls help their mothers and learn to be good housewives, according to white women's standards."

Discussing diversions of Kiowa women, she told how much they enjoyed their mission club meetings, "where we spend the whole day cooking and talking and laughing. On Sundays we gather at church for all-day meetings. In our part of the country white people do that, too, you know; and what they do, we do."

While Mrs. Bates is most appreciative of what the white man has done for the Indian in health and education work, she does not think that in every regard her race has benefited from his influence. "Since we have to adjust ourselves to a white man's civilization, we do the best we can about it," she said thoughfully, almost wistfully. "But in making ourselves over we have lost much—our skill at arts and crafts especially. Recently there has been some effort to revive these among our people. Women who still do beadwork and weave baskets have been encouraged to teach all of us. But most of us haven't time to learn. We are too busy keeping our modern houses, cooking modern meals and keeping our clothes and those of our children up to date."

Chic in the English Mode

Smart individuality is exquisitely demonstrated in the collection of gowns fashioned by London creators and brought over on the Queen Mary. The lovely classic evening ensemble shown above and designed by Reville is made of alabaster-white rosalba, trimmed with South African feathers. The buckle at the waist is hammered silver. The ultra-long skirt and full-length cape will undoubtedly influence American styles.

Leaving Child In Parked Auto Is Called Risky

Mothers Warned Against Putting Offspring Within Reach of Brake.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH was in the habit of taking 6-year-old Billy to market with her. While she went into the shops, she left him sitting outside in the car. He never touched gear shift or brake, and seemed quite content just to sit and watch the passers-by and speak to his friends.

On one occasion, Mrs. Smith parked her car on a slope and left it as usual with no misgivings. But Billy was bored, and disobeying the orders he had so long followed, began to fumble with the brake. It moved under his hand and the car began to roll down the slope.

Always First Time.

"But he never did such a thing before," Mrs. Smith kept repeating. "He had sat in the car countless times and never touched anything."

There is always, however, a first time, and mothers must always be on their guard to fortstall it.

A child's reactions are unaccountable to an adult because the adult can not sense the workings of an unfolding intelligence. Perhaps Billy had never before noticed the brake; perhaps only that day had he found how it worked; or he may have been bored or in a vindictive mood.

Risky Business.

To leave a child in a parked car is always something of a risk. To park the car is such a way that the child can by any stretch of the imagination get into trouble is little short of criminal carelessness.

If a car is parked on a slope, the wheels should be so turned that even if the car rolled, it could not go far. Furthermore, it should be left in gear. The keys should be removed and the brake so tightly jammed that a child could not move it.

At all times the car should be parked in a spot where no one can easily run into it.

Billion for Feebleminded.

In 1931 the world total for current expenses to maintain armies and navies amounted to 4½ billion dollars, while in the United States alone $1,000,000,000 are spent annually for the insane and the feeble-minded. It has been estimated that at least $10,000 is invested every time a feebleminded child is born.

Parents Urged Not to Force Child to Eat

Instinct of Hunger Will Often Be Capricious, Says Dr. Cutter.

The child who will not eat is a source of no little concern to his parents. Probably more visits to physicians' offices are made because of this symptom than for any other single condition.

As most of us know, a growing boy or girl requires more food than an adult per pound of body weight. We must provide food for activity as well as for growth and the maintenance of body functions. As a rule, every young person will eat enough. In other words, instinct (hunger) is a safe guide. But whether he does so can be determined by his condition. Is he well or sickly, pale or rosy, thin or robust?

We must not attempt to make a well child "weller" by more food. Such a process will probably upset digestion, interfere with absorption and may—if continued—lay the foundation for illness. Of course, if the lad is not eating normally we must make certain that he is not sick, because fever, pain and infection will destroy all desire for food.

Children are exceedingly sensitive to habit. If a child is "on" an adequate diet at home, a change in environment that occurs suddenly may so interfere with his accustomed routine that appetite may suffer. Again, emotions play an important role. A happy meal period is a piquant sauce. One that is fraught with stormy bickerings is quite the reverse. Arguments between members of the family may start a chain of apprehensions that will so affect the sympathetic nervous system that the zest for food is lost.

A plain, nourishing menu is best. Rarely is it necessary to tempt the palate with highly seasoned delicacies. In fact, rich food has no place in the child's dietary. Sometimes the acquisition of a taste for materials that are not bone and muscle building will develop a dislike for those dishes that represent substantial elements.

Time and again we have stressed the fact that the child's stomach is small and it cannot hold a large amount without overdistension. Between meal periods (five meals a day), therefore, will often do what the three meal plan cannot accomplish. A bowl of cooked cereal with rich milk, or a generous slice of bread and butter with jelly at 10 a. m. and 3 or 4 p. m., may supply a deficiency and not interfere with substantial meals at regular times.

In our emphasis upon the desirability of milk we must recall that a growing child cannot thrive on milk alone. Per ounce, it contains only 1-5 of the fuel value of cooked cereals and from 1-4 to 1-6 of the value of meat. Nevertheless, it is highly desirable as a food, particularly for its mineral content. The amount prescribed per day, however, should not be more than is enjoyed. A full glass of milk with each meal may be too much for some youngsters. It is far better used as a midmorning or midafternoon article of diet.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Marsha Hunt.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

THEY SAY of women that they buy cosmetics through the eyes and nose, and I grant you that most of them do. There is one that they will be excecused for buying entirely through their eyes. That is what I did, only my good luck was that in this instance the contents of the little jar are as effective as the jar is beautiful.

The item is a tiny crystal jar of cream rouge, beautifully cut in this new style stripe effect. It looks like a jewel on your dressing table. When you take the top off, there is a marvelous cream rouge inside which shows a soft rose pink through the cut crystal. I would pay the price for the jar alone if it didn'thave a speck of rouge in it, and I think most women would if they had the price, which really isn't very much.

It has an innocent sort of name—I suppose because the crystal is so clear and the whole thing so chaste in appearance. Incidentally, the first jars made were, by mistake, sealed with a cement that only Houdini could break. The jar was sure to break before you could get it open on account of the cement. All this has been remedies now and the jar has a tiny gold cord tied over it which, I must say, is a remarkable improvement. Even manufacturers live and learn.

If you are thinking of getting anyone a present, take a peek at one of these jars.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column telephone The Washington Post, NAtional 4200, Branch 323.

For Love or Money

By ROB EDEN

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE.

At noon that day, as Brenda was calling Main 2121, Val got his novel from the copyist. There were three boxes of it, one containing the original and one the carbon, and the third the original manuscript.

"I did enjoy it so much, Mr. Sargent," the copyist said as she took his $75. "Lots of them I type, I don't enjoy it, but I did yours. I hope it sells. I've never copied a novel yet that sold."

"I hope it does, too," Sargent smiled grimly as he put the three boxes under his arm and left the office.

Maizie packed in boxes, under his arm, he thought as he went back to his own office to wrap one of the boxes for shipping. Maizie under his arm, and he carrying her as he would any unimportant bundle. Maizie, who had been so precious to him for so long. None of the boxes felt in the least personal, and as he strode along he decided that Maizie was very far back in his life. Maizie had become a task that was finished.

In his own office he wrapped up the fresh copy carefully, tied the string around the package neatly and printed the name of the publishers to whom it was going, Drayton Co.

The carbon and original he put in his desk, with his company files. The wrapped package he took to the express office to have weighed. Seventy cents it cost to send Maizie to Drayton's and it would cost him 70 cents more if she came back express collect.

He lingered for some time in the express office, watching other bundles thrown on top of Maizie. Finally, when she was completely out of sight, he asked the clerk when the packages for New York left and the clerk said, "right now." He stayed a little longer, until he saw the cart in which Maizie was resting wheeled away, then he went away feeling lonely.

Lonely.

The loneliness increased as the afternoon wore on. The day was a day for celebrating, and there was nobody he wanted to celebrate with but Brenda. That was impossible. It was an occasion for rejoicing, wasn't it? Maizie on a train, roaring on to New York, carrying all his hopes with her in the box in which she was bedded. Maizie bearing his standard to New York.

He went up and told Lally that Maizie had gone, and, although her pleasure was evident, it wasn't the joy he would have felt if he could have told Brenda. That is, if Brenda loved him even a hundredth as much as he loved her. She only needed to love him so little.

He had dinner by himself in the Biltmore Grill, but he didn't enjoy it, even when he ordered his favorite dishes. He kept thinking all the time that Brenda should be with him, sitting in the vacant chair opposite him.

After dinner he walked around for a while, aimlessly, and at 9 o'clock he went home. As he pulled a chair out on his balcony and lighted a cigarette he thought that Maizie was nicely started on her journey. He looked down at the living room window below, but it wasn't lighted. Brenda wasn't home yet or, if she was home, she was in bed.

From the unlighted window he looked at the dark sky, for the moon had not yet come up. The stars were very bright, and he saw a trail of brilliance pass through the heavens and lose itself behind the roof of the flat across the street.

"I should have wished on it," he murmured. "I used to wish on falling stars," and he thought of the last time he had wished on a star, when he was a boy, and it seemed so important for him to have a bicycle. He remembered how he had stayed up by the window in his mother's house, one night, looking up at the sky, watching for a falling star, because the bicycle was so vital to him. It was almost as if he were there by the window again, so clearly did the night come back to him.

Then it was a bicycle, that was when he was 10. Now it was—

"You're going childish, my son, very childish. I'm ashamed of you."

But it was pleasant to imagine that he might have one wish, and that it would come true. It gave him a comfortable glow as he sat smoking. There would be no question out of two possible wishes which wish he would make. One wish would be to have Brenda love him. Another would be to have Drayton's take Maizie. Brenda, of course, he would wish to have Brenda. He could forget Maizie, but he couldn't forget Brenda.

He kept watching the heavens but no more stars fell, and when he went in at midnight he felt a little disappointed, because he would have liked to wish his wish.

At 7:30 in the morning he went to the hospital to look in on Lally before she went into the operating room.

On the Way.

"Maizie's on her way to New York, and I'm on my way to walking!" Lally said as she looked up at him. "Isn't it amazing that two such important things could happer on the same day! She'll get to New York just about the time I get out of the operating room. Both of us are riding, Maizie on her train, and me on my cart." She put out her hand to him and he took it. Brenda had the other, but he hardly dared to look across the cart at her.

Lally smiled contentedly. Brenda had her left hand, Val her right, and he was pressing it gently. The pressure thrilled her.

"We're ready for the hypodermic, Lally," the nurse said as she came with the needle. "You'll have to move away, Mr. Sargent."

"No, no," Lally begged. "Let him stay. Please!"

So Val kept hold of her hand. When he did get courage to look at Brenda, he saw that there were tears in her eyes. Brenda wasn't looking at him, however. She was looking down at her sister.

"Ready now to take you up, Lally," the nurse said. "Dr. Koenig is waiting for you upstairs." Then she turned to Brenda. "I don't think you'd better go up, Miss Fayre. Dr. Pierce said you shouldn't. You can wait down here in Lally's room, though, if you wish."

An interne came in and wheeled the cart out of the room. Lally waved to them feebly as she went, for the hypodermic was taking effect.

"If there's anything I can do——" Val said when he and Brenda were alone, alone except for Peter, who was flying around his cage noisily.

"There's nothing, thank you, and there won't be any news for some time. Dr. Pierce said the operation would take about one and a half to two hours." She didn't look at him as she spoke, and her voice sounded tight to him.

"I'll call for you about 9, then. Will that be all right?" He wanted to stay and put his arms around her, turn her face up to his and kiss the tears away. He wanted to murmur tender words, tell her how much he loved her. He made a little step forward, but caught himself in time. Her left hand with the ring shining on it was gripping the metal back of the bed.

She was speaking now, and her voice was still tight. Her shoulders, too, as he looked at them. "Thanks for coming this morning. Lally wanted to see you." And while she was forcing herself to speak she was thinking, "why doesn't he go? I can't stand his being here much longer. It's too much for me. I've only a little courage left, so little. God, why do I love him so! Why do I love him more today than I've ever loved him before? Why is it such torture to me to be near him?"

Then she heard him say good-by, heard his footsteps going out of the room, and the door close gently after him. It wasn't a moment too soon.

'Remain Young,' Is Mae West's Tip to Women

'Don't Diet,' She Advises; Play Dumb Enough, and Be a Pal.

MAE WEST, motion picture authority on vamping, has recently compiled some rules governing this pursuit for both men and women. Here they are as told to the United Press:

For Women.

1. Stay young . . . even if you have to change the birth dates in the family Bible. Have your face lifted if necessary; it's easier to lift a sagging chin than it is to lift the mortgage on a sagging romance.
2. Be a pal. If you don't play with them, they'll start "playing around" with others.
3. Don't diet. Curves may be dangerous on the highways, but they never hurt a woman.
4. Play dumb. Just dumb enough to make a man think he's smart. It soothes his vanity.
5. Love them . . . but not too much. Too much love is like too much cake.

For Men.

1. Make every woman love you . . . but don't love every woman. When the girl learns you're in demand, she'll take you just to keep the other dames from getting you.
2. Pet them. They love it like a tabby cat. Occasionally suggest that she buy a new dress even if she does have enough dresses to clothe an 1890 chorus. Tell them once in a while that you realize 'she must be tired' and ought to eat out—even if she has been sitting around playing bridge all afternoon.
3. Don't be tight—with money or kisses.
4. Be attentive. When you take her out give her your undivided attention.
5. Don't lie to them . . . much. Tell the truth if it hurts, but don't bruise yourself badly. Sometimes a little lie will prevent a woman from stretching a little imagination into a big bugaboo.

Duchess of Kent Sets Hat Styles

Jaunty Creations Contrast to Queen Mary's.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 2.—The slim, vivacious Duchess of Kent today is Great Britain's leader in new hat styles for women—exactly contrary to Queen Mary, her royal mother-in-law, whose high-crowned models have been standardized for years.

Fast planes from Paris rush jaunty and sophisticated millinery creations to the former Princess Marina of Greece, who has introduced so many new types they cannot be counted.

Her particular hobby, her friends assert, seems to be to wear a new hat each time she appears in public.

Just as London tailors took their cues from King Edward when he was Prince of Wales, so do milliners speedily offer copies of her new hats to English women.

'Duck Pond' Pattern Presents Pleasing Design for Stitcher

By Alice Brooks.

Pattern 5602.

THE "DUCK POND"—a quiet, shady nook where graceful ducks float to and fro, is a charming subject, indeed, for a wall-hanging, the detail will prove fascinating to embroider. It's no time before every stitch is in, done in wool or rope silk, and you're ready to line and hang it.

In pattern 5602 you will find a transfer pattern of a wall hanging 15x20 inches; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches needed; color suggestions.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

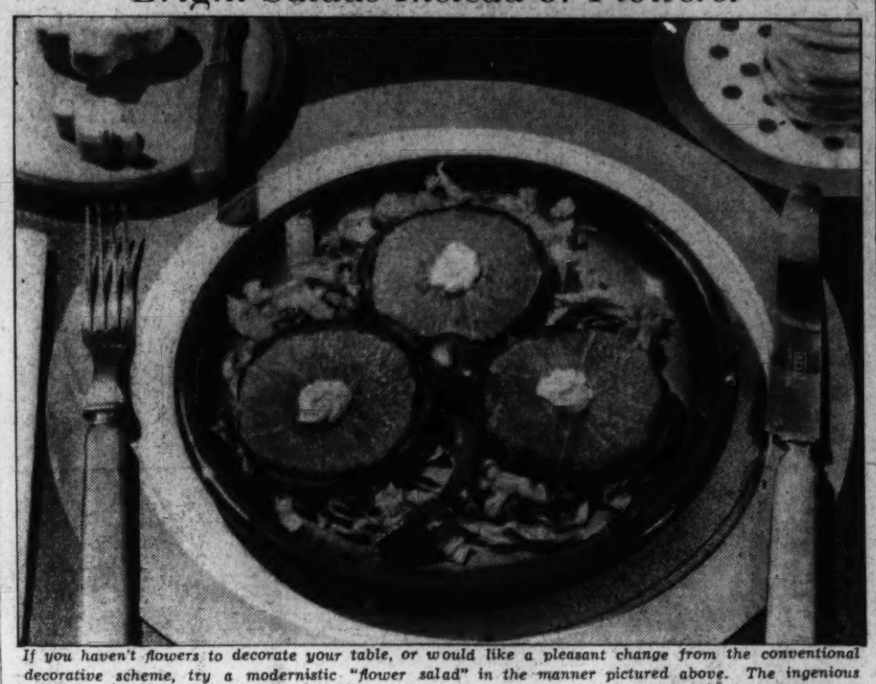
Feathers Are Style For Hat Trimming

Paris (U.P.).—Feathers are becoming more and more important as trimming for hats, according to Erik Braagaard, the young Danish milliner whose recently established Paris house has had unusual success.

Braagaard even makes entire hats and head-dresses of feathers. He takes a single yellow bird of paradise and curves it cleverly about the head holding it in position with double bands of black velvet that cross the back of the head. This hat designer is building crowns higher and higher for morning and sports wear. The conical or thimble crowns likewise are featured on some of the afternoon hats while others are trimmed with bunches of fruit or flowers.

The flower trimming is particularly graceful for the large afternoon hats as long-stalked flowers are used. The trick of using one or two long stemmed flowers as trimming is taking hold rapidly and promises to be one of the smartest summer fashion features.

Bright Salads Instead of Flowers!



If you haven't flowers to decorate your table, or would like a pleasant change from the conventional decorative scheme, try a modernistic "flower salad" in the manner pictured above. The ingenious housewife can plan varied salads to serve the dual purpose of decoration and food, and in the mood of summer, flower motifs are the logical medium for this delightful experiment.

Gay, Colorful Salads Replace Flowers as Table Decorations

Fresh Fruits and Vegetables of Summer Can Be Combined Into 'Eye-Arresting' Menu Themes to Stimulate Jaded Appetites.

IN LIEU OF FLOWERS as a table decoration, have you ever tried a gay and colorful salad? An exotic salad, which rates attention because of its appearance as well as its appeal to the palate?

Summer is one of the most opportune times of the year to plan such a festive addition to your table; the fresh fruits and vegetables, so plentiful in the markets and the flowers themselves, inspiration for the decorative design and color scheme of the focal point of interest—the salad.

Unusual salads in "eye-arresting" color themes stimulate the esthetic sense as well as the appetite. And, at this season of the year, appetites usually are not normal and need various and diverse strategy on the part of the housewife to pep them up a bit. Don't be afraid to experiment with either food or color combinations. If you want to concoct a salad which is really exclusive, that is exactly what you must do—experiment.

Protein Base Needed.

For a luncheon, supper or any light meal, the salad can be made to serve as the main dish on the menu. In this event, the basic ingredient of the salad should be protein: meat, fish, eggs, etc. And there are literally hundreds of such salads which can be modernized, and changes and additions made to give the dish the appearance and flavor, too, perhaps, of something brand-new.

Vari-colored salads which are to lead a double life in the guise of both table decoration and food, can be varied to suit the meal and the occasion, if the cook has a little ingenuity. Light, airy salads almost as elusive as the summer breezes; substantial salads, rich in nutritional qualities; other salads which are merely an integral part of a meal and chosen because they are important additions, both as to nutriment and appearance; all have their special place in menu-making.

A touch of the moderne can be brought to the table by way of the odd flower salad illustrated above. Oranges were selected for this flower-salad, but many other fruits or vegetables could be substituted with equal intriguing effect. This is the way it is prepared:

On a bed of shredded lettuce, arrange in petal-fashion three pepper rings made from ½-inch slices of pepper with center removed. Place a slice of orange in each pepper ring and center each slice with mayonnaise. For the center of the flower an olive was utilized and a piece of green pepper fashions the stem.

Another colorful salad can be planned in red, white and green color scheme, and is suitable for either luncheon or dinner—particularly nice when the salad is served as a separate course.

Red, White and Green Salad.

1 cup chopped celery
1 cup shredded white and green cabbage
½ cup green peppers, chopped
1 cup cooked peas
1 cup mayonnaise dressing
Chili sauce mayonnaise

Thoroughly mix the above ingredients and serve on crisp lettuce leaves. Garnish with chili sauce mayonnaise. This amount serves six persons.

Chili Sauce Mayonnaise.

1 cup mayonnaise dressing
½ teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon confectioner's sugar
2 teaspoons chili sauce
1 teaspoon horseradish mustard

Blend ingredients thoroughly. This makes 1¼ cups of dressing.

Famous Feminist To Inspire College

The famous feminist, welfare worker and pacifist—Jane Addams—whose life has served as an example for so many women, will be a special source of inspiration from now on to the women of Connecticut College.

Explaining why Jane Addams' name had been chosen for the new building, Marian P. Whitney, of the board of trustees, said: "It is because we, the trustees, feel that Jane Addams had qualities of greatness, of force of intellect, of nobility of soul, which we want every student here now and in the years to come, to know, and because we feel that to have her name perpetuated on this campus would be an honor to this college and an inspiration to everyone connected with it—faculty and trustees as well as students."

Canning Recipes

JARS OF FRUITS, vegetables, meat and poultry on pantry shelves—don't you simply gloat over the goodness and the saved-up time they represent?

A sudden picnic, or visitors? Just grab a jar of home-canned chicken, another of succotash, and a jar of those sun-preserved strawberries for which you are famous. All set! No work when you want to play!

Watch for a "buy" in chickens, or weed out the non-layers in your backyard flock. Cook them until tender in your pressure cooker, if you have one, or in an open kettle. Take the meat off the bones, as shown in sketch, and can it according to one of the modern, safe, sure canning methods. It comes out of the jar jellied and delicious.

Right now is the time for Alsatian Conserve. Combine 2 cups each of diced pink rhubarb, halved strawberries, and diced pineapple, and 4 cups sugar. Cook slowly about an hour until thick, adding ¼ pound shredded blanched almonds 15 minutes before cooking is finished. Seal in sterile glasses like jelly.

Our 40-page booklet, New Ways of Canning Meats, Vegetables, and Fruits, gives full instructions on canning chicken, beef, pork, and other meat, boiled or roasted.

A wealth of fine recipes for fruits, jellies, preserves and pickles. Sun-preserved strawberries that don't fail you, mint jelly, economy orange marmalade with carrots, Idaho ice-water pickles, many snappy uncooked pickle recipes.

Designers Offer Skirt Innovations

Parachute, Lamp Shade and Turkish Models Shown.

Paris (U.P.).—Unusual color combinations and a strong Oriental influence characterize the new Alix collection. Some skirts are so full and flaring that they resemble parachutes or lamp shades, while others, are caught under at the hem like Turkish trousers.

The feminine silhouette is stressed at all times and clothes at Alix are fashioned to display a slender waistline and curving hip line. For day wear, bodices are skin tight and are usually made with a high neck trimmed with bows or loops of material. All clothes show a certain amount of fullness at the hip, and this is frequently stressed by the use of a full and flaring peplum.

FAVORITE FOODS of FAMOUS FOLK

Vera Bloom's Recipe for Bran Muffins Long a Family Favorite.

By Pattie Ellicott.

MISS VERA BLOOM.

MISS VERA BLOOM, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, of New York, is a young woman of much erudition. She has traveled widely, studied art and literature at their sources and is noted as a linguist. Side by side with her interest in the current topics, the customs and the history of the countries she visits, Miss Bloom has made an exhaustive study of the foods of these nations.

When Representative and Mrs. Bloom entertain, Miss Bloom is certain to have made a happy suggestion or two as to the menu. Even as most epicures, she knows how to cook herself. Among the favorite foods in the Bloom household are bran muffins. The secret is said be in the use of sour milk in their preparation.

Sour Milk Bran Muffins.

2 cups bran
2 cups flour
2 cups lukewarm sour milk or buttermilk
¼ cup sugar
½ cup boiling water
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1 egg
1 tablespoon shortening

Stir shortening with sugar until creamy, add well-beaten egg. Dissolve soda in boiling water, add to milk, stir until foamy. Add bran, sift in flour, salt and baking powder together. Add to sugar mixture. Beat well. Bake in hot, greased muffin rings in hot oven about 20 minutes.

Make 16 muffins. Use half ingredients for smaller quantity.

Destruction of Ants Is Often Difficult

First Problem Is to Find Nest of Insects.

There are more ants in the world than any other single type of creature. They are found in all lands and all regions, from the dry sands of the deserts to the damp jungles, from the timberline of the mountains to the lowest valley of the Dead Sea. They flourish, says the American Institute of Sanitation, New York City, under all conditions of environment, and adapt themselves easily to living both out in the open and indoors.

In fighting ants the first thing to do is to find their nests and destroy them. Sometimes the nests are built in the walls of a home, adding to the difficulty of reaching them with insecticides. There are a number of effective powders, sprays and liquids available for destroying ants. For small infestations of the common red and black ants, usually spraying the insects and their runways whereby they gain entrance soon rids the house of the pests.

Tomato, Stuffed With Sweetbreads, Is Star's Favorite

Leslie Howard gives his favorite salad recipe—tomato stuffed with sweetbreads—in July Pictorial review: Peel six medium-sized tomatoes. Remove a slice from stem end and scoop out center. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper and turn upside down to drain for a short time. Then mix two cups cooked sweetbreads, broken in small pieces, one-half cup mayonnaise, one cup celery, finely chropped, one tablespoonful parsley, finely chopped, salt and pepper. Now fill the tomato cups with the mixture and top with an additional dab of mayonnaise. Serve on shredded lettuce which has been sprinkled with French dressing. This serves six.

N. Y. Birth Rate Falls Among Foreign-Born

The birth rate of the foreign-born in up-State New York is declining much faster than that of the native-born, according to Clyde V. Kiser of the Milbank Memorial Fund. The birth rate of foreign-born women between the ages of 25 and 34 years was only half as high in 1934 as it was in 1920, while the rate for the native-born declined by one-fourth. Thus, for all married women of child-bearing age, the birth rate of the foreign born has been more than cut in half, while the decline in the rate for the native-born has been less than a fourth.

Letter Writing Important Art Even Nowadays

Courses Have Been Started in Clubs, Organizations in Washington.

By Margaret Wallace.

Nothing is as indicative of character and good breeding as personal letters. The importance of the art of letter writing can not be overestimated even in this day of easy communication by telephone, telegraph or radiogram.

So important is this art considered in many Washington circles that letter writing courses have been instituted in many clubs and organizations.

It is as much of an affront not to answer a courteous, cordial letter from a relative, friend or acquaintance as not to reply when they speak personally. It is not necessary to carry on a continued correspondence of letters and answers with an acquaintance if this is not desirable. A courteous reply to the first letter without undue enthusiasm will usually end the correspondence.

No Hard and Fast Rules.

There can be no hard and fast rules for personal letters. Many elements enter into them, depending upon the degree of friendship or relationship between the person who writes the letter and the person to whom it is sent.

There are a few rules which do not vary, however. It is not considered good form to begin a letter with an apology for not writing before. Usually these excuses are tactless. It is more tactful to relate what has been occupying the writer's time rather than a direct excuse for not writing.

Personal letters should be written on good paper and the paper and envelopes should match. The art of handwriting seems to be something of a lost art in these days of the typewriter and hurry. Even if the handwriting is not "pretty," as it seldom is nowadays, care should be taken to have it neat and legible.

Query—My daughter writes to all her friends on the typewriter. Do you think this is polite? She even writes to older persons she does not know very well in this way.

Answer—It is polite for your daughter to use a typewriter in writing to friends of her own age, if this is the established custom between them. She should not write to older persons on the typewriter, especialy those she does not know well.

Query—I am ordering some letter paper. I like colored paper but do not want to use it if it is not good form. Is it proper to have monogramed paper?

Answer—White, cream or gray paper is in good taste. Monogramed paper is correct for personal correspondence.

Query—Is it proper to show the letter from one friend to another friend?

Answer—It depends upon the friend and the letter. Confidences written in a letter should never be shown to another friend even if you think the friend who has written to you would not mind you telling a mutual friend.

Query—Is it proper to write letters on postal cards?

Answer—Not personal letters. Greetings or impersonal messages written on postal cards especially picture ones, are correct.

School Appeals To Many Adults

GROWN-UPS who go to school like it much better than they did as children, says Dr. Everett Dean Martin, director of Cooper Institute, New York, in an article on adult education in the current issue of the Parents' Magazine.

Pointing out that 10,000,000 adults in this country are now pursuing systematic courses of study after working hours, Dr. Martin further comments: "Many adults are now finding out for the first time what education is all about and why a few people down through the ages have kept a passion for learning.

"A large majority of the 10,000,000 are finding a delightful intellectual adventure in companionship with Plato and Aristotle, with Cicero and Erasmus, with Voltaire, Shakespeare and Homer," he continues.

"In short, they are thrilled to live in the company of the world's best minds—men who were above everything mercenary and had a message of permanent importance."

Yet Dr. Martin is convinced persons are not going back to the little red schoolhouse, with the drill and discipline which, as youngsters, they detested.

"In adult education no one can bully you," he avers. "No one can require you to pass an examination in a subject in which you are not interested. If you do not like your instructor you have the American citizen's privilege of walking out. All you have to do is to keep on finding out what you want to know."

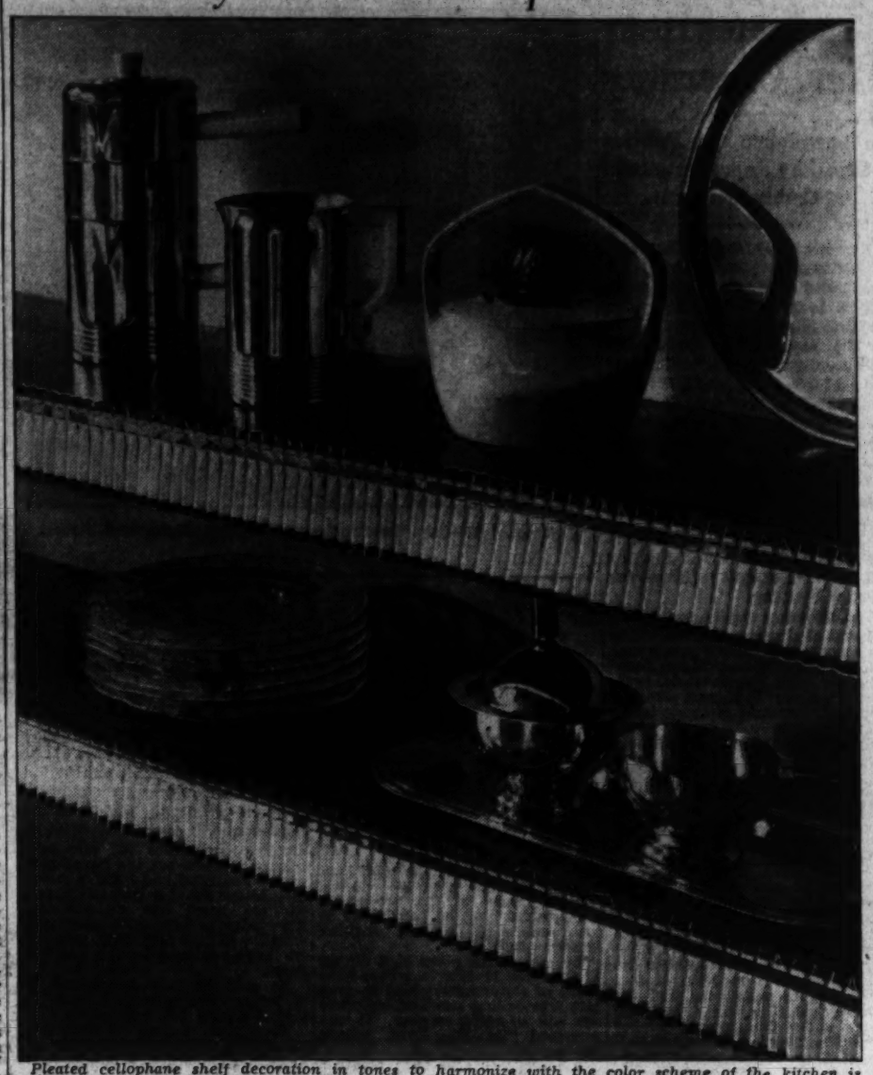
Pantry Shelves Dress Up for Summer



Pleated cellophane shelf decoration in tones to harmonize with the color scheme of the kitchen is a delightful method of bringing a bit of dash to this oft-forgotten room of the house. The new cellophanes are impervious to steam and moisture—an important note when selecting "trimmings" for the kitchen. The white, opaque cellophane with borders in bright contrast is sometimes more effective than a shelf ruffling of solid colors.

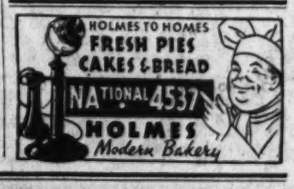
Morrison, superintendent of Nurses of Sibley Hospital, will share honors as guests of the District of Columbia Dietetic Association at its annual breakfast at Clara May Downey's Olney Inn, Olney, Md., at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Miss Rowena Roberts is chairman of the committee arranging the breakfast party and twenty-five members of the association have reserved places. Miss Mildred is president of the District of Columbia Dietetic Association, with Miss Mary Philbrick, of the George Washington University Hospital, as vicep resident; Miss Kathlyn Durnell, secretary, and Miss Eva Marks, treasurer.



Tall, Cool Summer Beverages Sought in Post Recipe Contest

HARBINGERS OF SUMMER—those tall, cool beverages, served with your luncheon, dinner, afternoon bridge or garden party! And iced drinks should not mean just tea or the citrus fruit ades. It is interesting to experiment with fruit juice combinations and garnishes which give the frosted beverage a luscious flavor and artistic appearance.

A dash of this and a bit of that and an unusual garnish, and there you have an iced concoction that will bring forth ohs and ahs from your guests. Iced drinks may not be the backbone of your summer menu, but they can be its personality if ingeniously prepared.

How do you make iced tea or fruit punch that gives it the title of being, oh, so different? Have you a pet recipe for tall, cool beverages that has distinguished you as a hostess? What particular scheme have you perfected for garnishing your frosted drinks?

The Post is conducting a contest for such recipes and offering cash awards for the five best. First prize, $5; second, $2, and the three remaining prizes, $1 each. Send your best recipe for frosted beverages to reach the office not later than Saturday morning, June 13.

Rice Tossing Tips Brides Off to Food

Lucky the bride the rice falls on! That's what the ancients thought, who started this centuries-old custom of tossing rice at the bride, to bring her fertility and happiness. So wedding guests continue to fling rice at the heels of the newlyweds, where it will nestle in the groom's cuff and the bride's hair, to tattle tales to the hotel clerk.

Much more to the point, according to brides of former seasons, would be to save the rice to give to the bride after the "at home" cards have gone out, together with recipes for tossing it, in cooked state, to her new mate. Since the beveiled beauty-of-the-hour scarce has time to collect the thrown grains, it's up to her homemaker-friends to tell her how rice, the wedding symbol, can help in that rude transition from satin sheath to gingham apron.

Cooking for two, cooking thriftily in small amounts, is one bride's problem that yields to rice. You can boil as big a bowlful at one time as you like and put it in the refrigerator to use as needed, and is always ready for serving with the meats, for croquettes, salads, entrees and desserts.

New Combinations Of Food Ridiculed And Then Relished

"Plain crazy!" That's the expression from curled lips that has greeted almost every new food combination when it was first mentioned. Combine whipped cream with horse radish? Cook a banana? Combine oranges and onions? Eat dates with gooseberries? Put wine in cake? Ridiculous, my dear madam! But once tasted, the tune changed.

So it has been with every new food combination. Tomatoes were once thought poisonous; now we juice them and drink them at the drop of a spoon. Grapefruit was early considered only a medicine; herbs were used for poultices, and "greens" were weeds to be yanked out of the yard.

Household Hints

A mark of a good cook is her ability to plan varied meals. This is especially true in the summer, when appetites need a bit of coaching. Variety in breadstuffs is a phase of menu-planning that is often neglected. Instead of the usual plain breads, try giving the family such things as raisin or orange bread; snails; nut and fruit breads; cheese biscuits and the 1001 other varieties of the "staff of life."

DURING these warm summer months do the major cooking only two or three times a week. Plan to have today's roast or meat loaf furnish tomorrow's sliced meat or sandwich spread. When boiling dried fruits for breakfast, include enough to serve for tomorrow's salad and the next day's shortcake, or basis for a frozen dessert. This method not only means conservation of energy for the housewife, but keeps the house cooler!

ONE GETS so accustomed to dish washing that the vital importance of this prosaic task is forgotten. The way to make a sometimes messy job into a neat one is first to scrape all dishes. A good hot-water rinse is also an advantage.

After the dishes are piled in neat order washing in a hot-water, soapy bath should follow. Usually glassware is given preference and washed first, then silver (care should be taken not to scratch the silverware); the china, then the mixing dishes, and finally the cooking utensils. Rinse with very hot water, wipe and polish with a clean, soft, lintless towel.

CARELESSNESS—that often brings UNHAPPINESS

YOU may know girls like the one on the left—at home, unhappy, while others are out enjoying life.

Often they are victims of ill health that results from unwise dieting—from eating meals that lack sufficient "bulk" to provide needed internal exercise.

Common constipation results. Too often it isn't regarded as serious. Yet doctors will tell you that common constipation can slowly undermine your health, leading to discomfort, lowering of bodily resistance, and disease.

Don't neglect common constipation. Usually it is due to lack of sufficient "bulk" in the foods you eat. When it is, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a safe and pleasant corrective. Scientific tests in leading universities have shown that this delicious ready-to-eat cereal supplies the "bulk" needed to provide regular elimination.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture in the body, forming a soft mass that gently cleanses the intestinal walls. It does not break down in the system as does the "bulk" in many fruits and vegetables. So it is often more effective.

Isn't it better to use this natural laxative food in place of patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily, served with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all"—but it does correct common constipation. It is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, waffles, etc. ALL-BRAN has a tempting nut-sweet flavor. Eat it regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity

Farm Women Hold Exercises At Watergate

Foreign Delegates Carry Flags as Band Plays National Anthems.

Farm women from all sections of the United States and from a score of foreign countries who have spent the last five days in Washington attending the third triennial conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, brought their meeting to a spectacular close last night with a farewell ceremony at sunset at the Arlington Bridge Watergate.

Flags waved, more than 2,000 voices were lifted in familiar songs, and the Navy Band played national anthems of the countries represented as the women made their farewells to each other and to the National Capital.

While the band, directed by Alex Morris, assistant leader, played the anthems, foreign delegates carrying the flags of their countries, marched down the steps with Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A. as escorts. Some of the delegates were in native costumes which added color to the pageantry of waving banners, bright summery costumes, and the slow-moving Potomac.

After Miss Ella Gardner, recreation specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture Extension Service, led the throng in singing "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "Just a Song at Twilight," the formal farewell was voiced by Fru Marie Michelet, of Oslo, Norway, a vice president of the A. C. W. W.

Makes Peace Plea.

Fru Michelet expressed the joy of all the organization's officers in the success of the conference, reminding her listeners that only 1,000 women had been expected, but that more than 7,000 had attended.

"We go home," she said, "each of us to our little place, and take with us the wonderful inspiration of thought and emotion and the feeling of strength and ability to go in for our work and ideals which we have gained through this large, loving, co-operating crowd."

Frau Michelet told the women it is up to them to build world peace.

"It is not around the conference tables that peace is built up, but in the hearts of men and women," the Norwegian declared as her farewell message.

Baroness Henry Schroeder, of Germany, and Mrs. Edward Young, of Milton, N. Y., also spoke briefly.

The baroness described the homelike feeling the foreign delegates have enjoyed in Washington since "country women all over the world express themselves in the same terms wherever they meet and therefore understand each other."

Find Common Ground.

"It is interesting to note," she continued, "that whereas we live in a troubled world, restless with political difficulties, internal and external misunderstandings, we country women have found too much common ground to want to discuss these differences or even to criticize in our minds the doings of governments."

Baroness Schroeder recalled the interest Mrs. Roosevelt had taken in the conference and said:

"The kindness of the First Lady of the Land will ever remain in our memories as one of the outstanding features of our visit here."

Mrs. Young brought a message from President Roosevelt, explaining that he wished her to say good-bye to the farm women for him "and to say he was sorry he could not say good-bye to you in person."

For one of the few times in the entire conference program, the husbands of the rural homemakers were mentioned yesterday.

Mrs. Young expressed appreciation of the men folk on the farms "who have also felt the tremendous importance of this occasion and have made provision for the carrying on of farm operations while we are here at the busiest season of the farmer's year."

The women returned to their homes last night by the hundreds, leaving only the officers and foreign delegates. This group will remain in Washington another week, but its program from now on is a leisurely one. The conference, with its speeches, group discussions, exhibits, trips and banquet is over.

Country Women's Conference Ceremony at Watergate

Farm Women Urge Tolerance For City Folk

Mrs. Watt Presides Over Session Summarizing Six Round Tables.

Farm women were urged yesterday by a rural homemaker from Nevada to be more tolerant toward city people who come to the country.

"The city people will meet us more than half way if we give them a chance," Mrs. Florence Bovett, of Reno, told a group of Associated Country Women of the World at a discussion dealing with problems created by townsfolk who enter rural communities as transients, workers, or residents.

"We country women must get over the feeling of being abused and downtrodden by city people," Mrs. Bovett continued. "We should assert ourselves but that doesn't mean we can't be kindly and neighborly."

Six Discussions Held.

The round table on townspeople in the rural districts was one of six discussions held by the A. C. W. W. yesterday, the last of the organization's five-day conference.

Other topics were: The country woman and the economic problem; the country woman's use of rural resources; electricity in rural life; marketing of home products, and rural unemployment and readjustment.

At yesterday afternoon's session a summary of the six round tables was combined with a resume of group discussions held earlier in the week. Mrs. Alfred Watt, of England and Canada, president of the A. C. W. W., presided at this meeting, held in the U. S. Government auditorium.

It was the last business gathering for the thousands of farm women who came to the conference. Many of them left for their homes before the farewell ceremony at the Watergate near Arlington Bridge, which formally closed the conference. Others departed by the hundreds as soon as the ceremony was over.

Foreigners Remain.

Remaining in the Capital for another week are the foreign delegates and officers. They have scheduled a business session for Monday.

The problem of dealing with persons who litter the countryside with remains of picnic lunches, who uproot flowers, and help themselves to fruit, was threshed out by the discussion group led by Mrs. A. E. Brigden, of Marathon, N. Y.

About half the 50 women at the round table thought the solution lay through teaching children in the schools to respect the property of others and "to love all things clean and beautiful."

The other half thought this teaching should be up to the parents and not to school teachers.

"But why teach only the children," asked a rural homemaker from Illinois, "when it's their parents who are careless about littering our fields and roadsides?"

Urge "Honor System."

The best way to deal with the adults, the group finally decided, is to put them more or less on their honor. One woman from Virginia told of clearing an attractive spot beneath shade trees and then posting a sign which told the city folk they were welcome to picnic there.

Beneath the welcome was a request to clear away all rubbish.

"We've had very little trouble since we welcomed the townspeople," said the rural housewife. "And now that we have fixed a place for them they stay off our lawn."

Persuading town girls to come into farm homes to work as domestics is exceedingly difficult, the group agreed, because the young women can't stand the loneliness of country life.

"Many city people who come to the country to live are wretched and lonely because they have a false sense of values and lack inner resources," said a farm woman from New Jersey.

Servant Problem Up.

The round table on rural unemployment and readjustment turned into a discussion of the servant problem in England and Africa.

Mrs. Lloyd Baxendale, of Greenham, Berkshire, England, said she gets along beautifully with her servants because she gives them an afternoon and evening off every week as well as alternate Sundays and then never asks them any questions concerning the way they spend their free time.

Lady Eleanor Cole, of Kenya, East Africa, said her worst problem is to keep her servants from fussing with each other.

Mrs. Clarence I. Hendrickson, of Chevy Chase, Md., said the biggest problem regarding servants in rural communities near the District of Columbia is to combat exploitation of domestic employes.

Queen Mary Sails On Home Voyage

New York, June 5 (AP).—The British liner Queen Mary sailed today on her first return trip eastward across the Atlantic, carrying 1,855 passengers.

Both the commander, Sir Edgar T. Britten, and Sir Percy Bates, chairman of the board of the Cunard White Star Line, said the new queen of the seas would not attempt to establish any speed record for the west-to-east crossing.

On this crossing, the ship plies slightly to the south of the westward course.

The sailing had been scheduled for 9:30 a. m. (E. S. T.), but due to the heavy passenger list and the crowds at the dock to bid a "bon voyage," the huge liner did not slip from her pier and head down the Hudson until 9:55 a. m.

Among the passengers were Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Jules S. Bache, the broker, and Hedda Hopper and Elsie Ferguson, the actresses.

A. S. Lehman Elected To Two Exchanges

New York, June 5.—Allan S. Lehman nephew of the Governor of New York State and partner in Lehman Bros., was elected to membership in the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange yesterday. Mr. Lehman took over the membership held by the late Arthur Lthman, and will continue the connection of the Lehman family with the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, which dates back over 50 years.

Mr. Lehman also was elected yesterday to membership in the New York Cotton Exchange.

Friends School To Get Most of Sidwell Estate

Educator Leaves Farm to Kin; Wills $1,000 to Two Colleges.

The major portion of the $400,000 estate left by Thomas W. Sidwell, who for many years conducted the Sidwell Friends School here, will go to the school, it was learned yesterday when a petition for the probate of his will was filed in the District Supreme Court.

After directing that his Maryland farms be given to his brother, nephews, and nieces, Dr. Sidwell asked that the rest of his estate be held in trust for three years for the action of the trustees of the Friends School.

Should the trustees find that, after three years, the school could be operated successfully, the trust estate will be given them for the school's benefit. On the other hand, should they deem it unwise to continue its operation, they can close the institution and sell the property, the proceeds to be distributed among the school's teachers and employes. In addition, $1,000 is to be paid Vassar College and Wilson College, of Chambersburg, Pa.

Dr. Frank H. Sidwell, a brother, of Westminster, Md., was given half an interest in the farms and the four children of a deceased sister—Mrs. Josie M. Russell, Mrs. Sarah M. Bennett, Dr. J. Edgar Myers and Dr. Jesse S. Myers—are to share the other half.

Sidwell School Graduates Hear Mrs. Greenway

Independence in Politics Urged by Representative at Commencement.

Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona, last night urged the graduating class of Sidwell Friends School to be independent in their political thinking and action.

"The complications which face this country," she said, "call for the help of educated, intelligent persons. But do your own thinking. Decide what you believe civilization needs and then get out and work for it."

The 22 members of the graduating class marched into the packed gymnasium of the school to the tune of Gounod's "March Pontificale." Each girl, dressed in white and carrying a large bunch of deep red roses, was escorted by a boy.

The ceremony was opened with a moment of silent meditation. Then the school's choral study group sang "Men of Harlech" and "Massa Dear" from Dvorak's "New World Symphony." Albert E. Rogers, associate principal, presented diplomas to the following:

Minor Giles Atwood, Eleanor Barton Browning, Wilson M. Compton, jr., Jane Dulaney, Hush Scott Duncan, Lucy Pratt Packner, James H. Forsyth, jr., Margaret Purlow, Beatrice A. Gibson, Margaret Ellen Goldenweiser, John Lewis Gwynn, Victoria Kuhn, Elisabeth Prescott Lawton, Carola Fenton Manning, Robert Henry McBride, Alice Mendenhall, Robert Horner Niepold, Rita Abigail Scheffler, William Gray Shultz, James A. Smith, Richard S. Smith, Almus Reed Spears, jr.

Awards of certificates and prizes were made at the City School, 1809 I street, in the morning. Elwood Cobey, president of the junior class, received the prize offered by the Harvard Club of Washington to the most outstanding member of that class. Rogers announced that the eighth grade, City School, had won the prize for the greatest number of contributions to the Frances Haldeman Sidwell Memorial Library, and that the bookplate drawn by Doris Powell, of the junior class of the high school, had been chosen for use by the library.

Local Man to Build Jefferson Memorial

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes yesterday named John L. Nagle, of 1408 Varnum street northwest, assistant chief engineer of the National Park Service, to construct the $30,000,000 Thomas Jefferson Memorial at St. Louis.

Nagle is expected to leave Washington to embark upon his work as administrator of the memorial project about June 15. For the past 25 years Nagle has been employed by the Government. He was in charge of the construction of the Arlington Memorial Bridge. The Jefferson Memorial, it is said, will cover some 37 city blocks along the water front of St. Louis.

Byrd to Devote Life to Peace, Keeping Vow Made at Pole

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 5.—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, scientist-conqueror of both poles and the Atlantic by airplane, announced tonight the rest of his life would be devoted to promoting world peace, save for two years reserved for future explorations.

The announcement, he said, kept a pledge he made in 1934 during darkest hours of the six-month, nearly fatal vigil he kept alone in an Antarctica outpost seeking weather facts.

He told of his plans at a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria, where hundreds of friends assembled to give him a medallion attesting his courage and scientific services. It was inscribed "To Dick Byrd, gallant gentleman."

The explorer said even aviation had been "perverted" into world-wide preparations for war. "It is the fear of wings over the world that is helping to drive us deeper and deeper into international insanity," he said.

As he quoted from his diary, Admiral Byrd conjured up in the thronged room of white shirt fronts and glittering formal gowns a picture like the one engraved upon the medallion. It was of a gaunt, long-haired man sickened by fumes from a faulty oil stove and yet painfully telling the world by a hand-cranked radio that "all is well" so that no other lives would be risked to save his.

"If I survive this ordeal I shall devote what is left of my life largely to trying to help further the friendship of my country with other nations of the world," he had written.

He spoke of "growing mass fear."

Nations everywhere have been swept by a nightmare, and in the resulting terror they are arming to the teeth against the day when the nightmare will come true. With so many opportunities for our new science to push out the boundaries of the unknown and build a fairer and better life for human beings, we are using our technological knowledge to prepare a cataclysm which will bring to final ruin all we have achieved in the last 300 years."

He said he was determined to "carry out the promise I made to myself during the long night.

"Here it is. I shall set aside two years of my life sometime later on to further explorations, but, as soon as I get some months of greatly needed rest, I shall start my work for international amity, though I realize only too well that my part will be an extremely humble one, for my experience lies in far different fields, and I know also that I am only one of hundreds of millions who are as equally concerned as I am with this great problem."

Retired from the Navy, and at 49 a world figure in polar exploration and aviation, Admiral Byrd had just completed a seven-month lecture tour, during which he spoke to more than 600,000 persons in 156 cities.

He flew over the North Pole in 1926, from New York to France in 1927, and over the South Pole in 1929 in the first of two Antarctic expeditions. He returned in May, 1935, from his second southern venture.

U. S. Intervention Scored, Defended

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., June 5.—Government intervention in private enterprise was assailed and defended before the annual convention of the National Junior Chamber of Commerce today.

The meeting moved toward a close with the election of Walter E. Holman, 34-year-old Portland, Oreg., funeral director, to the presidency.

Holman's election was made unanimous after Roswell T. Rosengren, of Buffalo, N. Y., nominated from the floor, withdrew when Holman's selection became apparent. Selection of other officers was deferred until tomorrow. Allen Whitfield, of Des Moines, Iowa, is retiring president.

Forney Johnston, Birmingham, Ala., utility lawyer and foe of the Tennessee Valley Authority, told delegates that "in yielding to taxation upon every dollar of earnings without limit under the Constitution, the American people are at least entitled to a run for their money, free from Federal lock-step and ball and chain voted into every business by a black shirt majority in a Congress of perennial candidates, freed for Constitutional restraint by the zeal and impatience of the New Deal."

Award to Slain Man's Widow Upheld by Court

Lincoln, Nebr., June 5 (AP).—A traveling salesman who picked up a hitchhiker does not step from the scope of his employment, the Nebraska Supreme Court ruled today. Its decision affirmed compensation awarded the widow of Russell Goodwin, who was murdered September 6, 1934, by Harold Malmberg, of Des Moines, now serving a life term in the Nebraska Penitentiary.

The court upheld a $15 a week for 350 weeks payment to Mrs. Goodwin from the date of the murder. Her husband was a salesman for an Omaha printing company.

The opinion held the shooting was compensable since Goodwin had no instructions not to pick up hitchhikers.

Concessions Service Study Is Published

Reforms Recommended for Group Operating U. S. Cafeterias.

Easing Interest Rate on Loans to Workers Is One Proposal.

Numerous reforms affecting service, personnel and bookkeeping of the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, Inc., are recommended in a report made public yesterday by the special committee named by Secretary Ickes to investigate activities of the quasi-public organization.

Operating more than 100 cafeterias, newsstands, swimming pools and other concessions in Government buildings or on Federally owned land, the association already has accepted practically all the recommendations which have been submitted by the committee, the report said.

Besides urging the adoption of a new accounting procedure, elimination of the accrual of dividends and various bookkeeping changes, the investigators recommended:

That interest be charged at the rate of 6 per cent on all advances or charges to employes outstanding more than 30 days only in such cases where the employe merely desires a loan of funds to meet a voluntary rather than a necessary obligation. Where the employe, because of illness, death in the family or other occurrances causing necessary and unusual expense, is in need of temporary financial aid, no interest is to be charged.

That all employes handling foodstuffs be required to undergo an annual physical examination.

Urges Further Study.

That there be a further study of the association's accounts back to 1933, when the Office of Public Buildings and Public Parks, under which the welfare group had operated, was abolished and the Office of National Capital Parks installed in its place.

That a new contract be drawn up betwen the association and its "guardian," the Interior Department. Practically all of the welfare and recreation body's busines iss transacted on property under jurisdiction of the National Park Service, a unit of the Interior Department.

The committee decided it could not reasonably recommend that hte association's numerous cafeterias in Federal office buildings be required to serve a vegetable with each al la carte meat order without increase in price because there was no way of determining whether such a change would necessitate a decrease in quantity or quality of the food served.

I asked that further clarification be made in separating the deductible expenses of the association before computing its net profits, 50 per cent of which are paid into the Federal Treasury.

Recommends No Bonuses.

Henceforth, the report continues, there should be no payment of bonuses either to the assoication or its employes and all charitable contributions should first be approved by the Secretary of the Interior. Such donations may be deducted from the computation of net profits to be divided with the Federal Government.

The Welfare and Recreational Assoication, whose board of trustees is headed by Reed F. Martin, chief clerk of the General Accounting Office, operates 111 cafeterias, shoe shine and news stands and other concessions in Government buildings. It also runs swimming pools, tennis courts, tourist camps and tea houses on park land in the District.

Members of the special committee which made the survey were Frederick L. Kirgis, George A. Moskey, Charles L. Gable, Samuel Goodacre and George A. Holcombe.

Grotto Enters Contest.

The officers and drill corps of Kallipolis Grotto, Mystic Order of Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm, will leave tonight for Indianapolis, Ind., to attend the forty-seventh annual session of the supreme council of the order. The drill corps is entered in a competitive drill to be held Wednesday.

Tried Post Ad Instead of Sign To Rent Room

Chalk up another victory for The Post Want Ad vs. the window sign. Instead of depending on a sign to rent her vacant room, Mrs. C. E. Conway, of 1738 Riggs Place N.W., inserted this small ad in The Post—and what do you think happened? Here's what Mrs. Conway said: "I got 6 calls for the room as soon as the ad appeared. My ad in The Post brought me better results than from anything I have ever used."

RIGGS PL. NW., 1738 (bet. N. Hamp. & 18th)—Well furnished, cool, next bath, for 1 or 2; $25 month. NO. 3406.

Why not let a Post Want Ad rent or sell something for you? The cost is very small. Call

Gray Cavalrymen Talk It Over

Emmett M. Waller and Robert W. Wilson (right) the only members of Washington Camp of Confederate Veterans who will attend Confederate memorial service at Arlington tomorrow.

2 D. C. Confederate Veterans To Attend Arlington Services

Memorial Ceremonies for Civil War Soldiers of the South to Be Held Tomorrow; Organizations to Participate.

When Confederate Memorial exercises are held at Arlington National Cemetery tomorrow there will be present but two members of the Washington camp of Confederate Veterans—two comrades of the men who wore the gray in the War Between the States.

The membership of the Washington camp, once nearly 300, has dwindled to four. One of these, George Nauzy, is out of town. The other, Cornelius B. Hite, is so crippled with arthritis that he will be unable to attend.

The sole representative of the Washington camp will be two hard-bitten ex-cavalrymen, Emmett M. Waller, of 1409 Harvard street northwest, and Robert W. Wilson, of 3548 Warder street northwest. These two got together yesterday to discuss plans for the services and to exchange reminiscences.

Both Waller and Wilson are 89 years old now but are still vigorous. Waller, in fact, still goes to work every day at All Souls Unitarian Church, where he has been custodian-clerk for the last 34 years. Wilson goes out almost daily for long walks through the city.

Waller Served Under Forrest.

Waller said that he served in the Army of Tennessee under Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest.

"Is he the man who had 27 horses shot from under him?" inquired Wilson.

"Well, sir, I don't know how many horses he had shot from under him, but he had plenty. In those days general officers used to fight at the head of their troops, not stay 5 or 6 miles in the rear.

"I was with Gen. Pat Cleburne at the Battle of Franklin. Cleburne was killed right on the Union breastworks. I was beside him at the time and another fellow and I pulled him away. After the firing died down we took him to a farmhouse.

"Well, sir, on the porch of that farmhouse there were six other Confederate general officers—dead."

At the age of 14, Waller enlisted in the Thirteenth Tennessee Infantry as a drummer boy. He was wounded at Murfreesboro and left on the field.

He was captured by the Union troops but, after recovering from a leg wound, was allowed to walk freely about Murfreesboro.

"I used to go out and play marbles with the other kids," Waller said. "I got pretty lonesome, though, and one day I started crying in the railroad station. A Union major came along and asked me what the trouble was. When I told him he got me a railroad pass and sent me back to Memphis."

Wounded Twice in Cavalry.

Waller was wounded twice while serving with the cavalry. Once, while picking persimmons in the midst of a shirmish, he was picked off by a Union sharpshooter.

"I didn't have to go to the hospital with that wound," laughed Waller. "but it was mighty uncomfortable riding my horse for a while after that."

Some years after the war Waller enlisted in the United States Infantry. He served for years in the West and was with the first group to reach the scene of the massacre of Gen. Custer's command by the Sioux.

Wilson served with a Maryland Cavalry Regiment. He enlisted in the last year of the war, taking part in the Battle of Winchester and other more minor engagements.

Hite, a retired General Accounting Office employe, who lives at 2915 Connecticut avenue northwest, also was a cavalryman. He fought with the Virginia Sixth Brigade and at times carried dispatches for Gen. Lee.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, will be principal speaker at the Confederate Memorial exercises. He will be introduced by Gen. Albert L. Cox.

Organizations taking part in the services will be Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy, the Confederate Southern Memorial Association, the Children of the Confederacy, the United Spanish War Veterans, the American Legion, the District National Guard and the Boy Scouts. The exercises begin at 1:45 p. m.

Backers Vision $520 Business On Scrip Dollar

District Committee Stresses Possibilities in Reporting Bill to House.

A $1 "anticipatory revenue" certificate, as proposed in the Greenway House joint resolution, might be expected to do $520 worth of business in the course of a year, the House District Committee pointed out yesterday in reporting the measure to the House.

At the end of the report, the committee appended a chart headed, "I Am a Certificate" et cetera, and then showed its imaginary progress during a week.

Beginning as a supplemental pay roll of the XYZ company, the certificate is paid to John Doe for services. John Doe in turn spent his earnings for groceries.

The progress of the certificate from grocer to wholesale dealer to taximan to gasoline station to plumber to drug store to window washer to department store is then shown.

At the end of the week the imaginary certificate has done $10 worth of business at a cost of 2 cents, the committee points out.

"This legislation is permissive in character," the report explains, "and predicated upon the voluntary co-operation of the Commissioners of the District and business and other private employers in the District.

"It directs the Commissioners to call for volunteers under the plan and leaves to the discretion of the Commissioners the actual initiation of the plan when in their judgment sufficient qualified employers have agreed to co-operate and participate.

"The responsibility and obligation to render service paid for in a manner satisfactory to the employer rests as entirely with the individual employed as it does with other employes of the same establishment.

"No employer would be expected to retain any additional employe, given employment under this plan, who does not render satisfactory service. At the same time there would be added incentive to the persons employed under this plan to improve their qualifications for classified employment on regular pay rolls."

Boys Club Fund Total Now $56,713

The membership fund of the Boys' Club of the Metropolitan Police Department reached a total of $56,713 yesterday after 750 associate memberships from 12 police precincts and larger subscriptions were reported by James E. Colliflower, chairman of the campaign.

Heading the list of subscribers was William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., who sent a letter to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, inclosing a check for $100.

Still in the lead is Capt. James E. Bobo's Second Precinct, with $5,465 in memberships, followed by Capt. Harvey Callahan's First Precinct, with $3,495. Third place is held by Capt. Miller, at Third Precinct, with $2,470.

Junior Musicians Recital.

Young musicians who won first place in the recent junior contest held by the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs will give a recital at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Salle de Recital, 1325 G street. Gertrude Lyons, State junior counselor, and Mrs. R. E. Espy, junior contest chairman, will be the hostesses. The recital is open to the public.

Cult Leader Faces $10,000 Fraud Charge

'Bishop' Ada V. Carver Arrested After Giving Bond in U.S. Case.

New Accusation Involves Bond Issue for Church; Hays Also Held.

Within an hour after her release on $5,000 bond on charges of conspiracy to avoid payment of a license, Ada Victorine Carver, "bishop" of the Washington Institute Church of Christ, was rearrested yesterday and charged with obtaining $10,000 on false pretenses.

It is alleged the money was obtained from Nellie Houghton, 1206 Tenth street northwest, and was part of a $1,000,000 bond issue floated by the church.

Arrested on the same charge with Miss Carver was Arthur Hays, 48, of 1728 Taylor street northwest Taylor, who gave his occupation as a "broker," is said to have been the sales agent for the bond issue.

A few hours later police arrested Kenneth Zellie, of the 1400 block of Belmont road, and held him under $3,000 bond on a charge of false pretenses. He said he was a salesman for the company operated by Hays.

The bond charge was disclosed earlier in the day at a hearing of Miss Carver on the conspiracy charge before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage. The bonds were said to be secured by farm and forest land in North Carolina that the church claims it owns.

$50,000 Reported Raised.

According to a four-page prospectus, this property is worth $2,500,000. The prospectus also announced that the purpose of the bond issue was to erect a church edifice, a hospital, a seminary for the training of the church clergy and a home for orphaned children. All of these were to be built in Washington.

William Gallagher, attorney, who represented Miss Carver at the hearing yesterday morning, said that about $50,000 of the bond issue already had been subscribed throughout the country. The bonds, ornamented with an impressive engraving of the Capitol, provided for 6 per cent interest semi-annually.

The church had set up an executive board to distribute the bond issue. Hays, it is said, was a member of this board.

"Bishop" Carver's arrest yesterday was made by Detective J. O. Patton and United States Marshal T. E. Ott after she had returned to her home at 3731 Warren street northwest.

Simultaneous with a round-up of "ministers of the Washington Institute Church of Christ" here, the Carver woman was arrested at a New York hotel. She was brought here Thursday and arraigned before United States Commissioner N. C. Turnage.

Detective a Candidate.

It was charged that, to avoid payment of the $250 clairvoyant fee in the District, members of the church had operated a "diploma mill," which granted doctor of divinity degrees for $50. Recipients of these degrees are said to have practiced clairvoyancy under the guise of ministers.

To learn the methods of operation of the church, Detective Patton became a candidate for a degree. Up to last night ten arrests had been made and more were expected.

According to information police obtained from various sources, a Dr. Herman P. McKnight, who held the title of "bishop" in the cult, and now is dead, and Miss Carver went to a Washington attorney and asked him to hold the property in trust for the church.

The land, rich in hardwood timber, lies, it was said, in Stokes County, N. C., and Patrick County, Va.

Most of the estate, it was said, was owned by McKnight, and upon his death the attorney refused to surrender the deed of trust.

Hazen Returns.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen returned to his office yesterday after a brief vacation. He has been at his Virginia home, Pilgrim's Rest, at Nokesville, Va., for the last week. Mrs. Hazen has gone there for the summer.

8 Unions Back Strike of Auto Workers Here

A.F.G.E. Lodge to Furnish Pickets; Public Control of Industry Urged.

Eight more local unions last night threw their financial and moral support behind striking automobile mechanics in Washington.

Those voting last night to assist the strikers are the local lodges of the Glaziers, Paperhangers, Rodmens, Sheet Metal Workers, Steamfitters and Helpers, Carpenters and Painters and Decorators unions and Lodge 12 of the American Federation of Government Employes.

All are making financial contributions to the strikers' relief committee and in addition pledge their membership to withhold patronage from the non-union garages.

Lodge 12 of the American Federation of Government Employes, comprised of workers in the Department of Labor, also voted to supply pickets to the strikers. To raise funds they are selling "honorary picket" cards.

The Consumers Council of Washington, meeting at noon yesterday, approved a plan providing public regulation of the automobile repair industry. Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the council, said that a bill for such regulation is now being drafted and will be introduced at the next session of Congress.

The auto mechanics themselves are now holding nightly strike meetings to hear reports from pickets and from delegates sent to other union meetings.

Man Draws a Year For Non-Support

Wilhelmus Philipoom, on trial yesterday for nonsupport of his wife and son, said "Indeed I will not!" when asked by Arlington County Trial Justice B. M. Hedrick if he would give his wife the $7 a week he admitted he spent for food. The judge then gave him a sentence of on year on the State road gangs.

Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, county superintendent of public welfare said her investigation, which resulted in charges being placed against Philipoom, revealed that he forced his wife to pay two-thirds of the grocery bill from her own meager savings and refused to contribute to the support of either her or their 11-year-old son.

In her report, Mrs. Jacobs said she went to Philipoom's home on Little Falls Church road and saw a loaf of bread, some cheese and milk on a table. Also on the table, she said, were five pennies which the wife had paid for her share of the milk and three pennies which she and the boy, who earns $2.50 a week at odd jobs, had paid for their part of the cheese.

60 Officials Pay Visit to Camps For Needy Children of District

Chopawamsic Recreational Area Found Humming With Workers in Preparation for Advent of Washington's Boys and Girls During Summer.

Sixty Government officials and District welfare workers inspected two camps for children in the Chopawamsic recreational area in Prince William County, Va., yesterday and delved with serious thought into a program designed to make needy boys and girls of the District happy this summer.

Robert Fechner, head of all civilian conservation work in the United States, led the caravan of inspectors. With him were Conrad Wirth, assistant director of the National Park Service, and John Lansill, of the Land Utilization Committee of the Resettlement Administration.

The camps, nestled deep in the 15,000-acre tract the Government has purchased for its people to play and live on, are being built for Washington children.

They will open July 1—just as soon as the last nail on the cabins is hammered down and water is let into the last swimming hole being built for the children.

The delegation visited the girls' camp first.

The girls' camp is located deep in the woods and on top of a hill. Several cabins stood skeletonized in the woods. Only the framework has been finished. But soon slabs will be nailed and pegged on the framework, screens will be put in place and the camp will be ready for the girls from the city.

The officials approved the site, commended CCC men on drainage and their carpentry, and then moved on to the boys' camp, a couple of wooded hills away.

The boys' camp is nearly finished. It was built to accommodate 100. CCC workers were putting finishing touches on some of the cabins when the party arrived.

The cabins are made of logs, but interiors are smooth and finished. Department of Interior officials explained the cabins were made to last several generations of rough-and-tumble campers.

Down the hill at the bottom of a rugged ravine guides pointed out where the swimming holes will be. Government officials decided it would be better to have several pools than one large one.

It was explained there would be rigid discipline in the camp and that the purpose of the camps was for health as well as pleasure and that healthful conditions could be established only by adherence to regulations.

The whole place is a real forest-primeval.

Government regulations say no roads except those absolutely necessary will be built. There are trails through the woods, but that is all. The cabins themselves are squeezed in between trees.

But there will be modern sanitation. Clear water that would pass any health inspector's analysis has been piped to the camp. There are shower baths with hot water. And electric lights.

There is a third camp for families—for mothers and babies.

The Government will lease the camps to social agencies in Washington. Plans aren't complete yet but the Boys Club will take over the boys' camp and some organization for girls will supervize the girls' camp.

The Chopawamsic camps are pioneers in a program in the Department of Interior. Others will be established over the country.

The tour of inspection lasted nearly all day and left the officials highly pleased.

Pin Ball Machine License Is Urged By Police Official

Assistant Supt. of Police L. I. H. Edwards said yesterday that he will recommend that pin ball machines and all similar "games of skill" be subject to an annual license tax.

Edwards said that there are approximately 2,000 of these machines in operation in the city. He estimated the average "take" of each machine at $40 a week, indicating that Washingtonians pay about $4,000,000 testing their skill at shooting marbles.

Edwards, who represents the Police Department on the District license committee, declared that he will request the committee to recommend to the District Commissioners that a license be necessary for operation of the machines.

Drive Ordered On Overloading Of Trucks Here

Damage to City's Streets, Unnecessary Noises Cited by Hazen.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday ordered Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to institute a drive against overloaded trucks on the District streets.

Overloaded trucks, Commissioner Hazen said, cause an undue amount of damage to the city streets and also cause unnecessary noise.

The District traffic laws limit the total weight of four-wheel vehicles, loaded, to 28,000 pounds, with the proviso that not more than 800 pounds per inch of nominal width of tire may be on any wheel.

Multiple wheeled vehicles may not weigh, loaded, more than 36,000 pounds, gross, nor may they have any more than 14,000 pounds on any one axle. Heavier vehicles are required to have a special permit from the director of traffic.

District officials in charge of the roadways have complained from time to time that trucks are overloaded. Some of the highway officials have complained, too, that the present law is inadequate. They say a total weight limit is not adequate. A small truck which is overloaded and not adequately tired will do more damage to the city roadways than will a large truck, of much greater weight, properly tired and driven at proper speed, they hold.

Levy Exemptions Asked by 5 Groups

Exemption from payment of the unemployment compensation tax was asked of the District unemployment compensation board yesterday by the American Red Cross, the Smithsonian Institution and the Pan American Union on the grounds they performed governmental functions, by the National Geographic Society, on the ground it was an educational institution, and by the Missionary Society on the ground it was a relgious organization.

Meeting in the office of Commissioner Hazen the compensation board made no decision but referred each application to Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, who is acting as counsel of the board pending decision whether he shall be appointed its counsel formally or shall be appointed corporation counsel of the District.

John A. Marshall, director of the board, reported $498,000 had been collected so far. Most of this amount, he said, had started to collect 2 per cent interest.

Chest Settles Fund Dispute With Suburbs

Maryland and Virginia Counties to Participate in Campaign.

A controversy as old as the Washington Community Chest ended yesterday when the Chest's board of trustees acepted a reciprocal agreement by which nearby Maryland and Virginia counties will participate in the annual funds drive.

Each year county residents have deemed it unfair that funds solicited from persons who live in the counties and work in the city during the campaign have not been divided with county relief agencies. The agreement will meet their objections.

According to the plan, simultaneous campaigns will be conducted in the counties and in Washington, and Chest solicitors in Governmental and group solicitation units will be authorized to accept pledges from persons working in Washington and living in the adjoining counties, for agencies operating in these sections.

Four Counties Involved.

The plan adopted yesterday was worked out by a special committee representing the suburban areas and a special committee representing the Community Chest. The territory involved is Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland, and Arlington and Fairfax counties and Alexandria City in Virginia.

According to the agreement approved by both Chest and counties, the Chest will not be responsible for the collection and handling of funds for the suburban area. A saparate and distinct pledge card will be used by the subscriber and all solicitors in the governmental and group solicitation units will be provided with these cards. Upon receipts of these pledge cards and accompanying cash payments, the Chest solicitor will place them in a separate envelope, also distinct from that of the Chest, and turn them over to the campaign auditor. They will then go to a central committee representing the counties or to agencies designated, this to be determined by the suburban committee in advance of the campaign.

Will Supply Cards.

The suburban committee agrees to engage a secretary who will be, in effect, a unit secretary who will keep in close touch with the Chest during the pre-campaign and campaign period, look after all matters concerning county participation and map out county campaign plans. The group from the suburbs will supply the necessary pledge cards and take care of all counties' expenses.

The suburban committee has already agreed to engage James A. Councilor, of the firm of Councilor & Buchanan, C. P. A., to audit all county returns, including those received in Washington. Councilor has been chairman of the audit unit for the Chest since its organization and his firm audits the Chest campaign pledges, so that it was felt his retention facilitates accurate accounting between the two organizations.

Representing the counties on the committee are Washington I. Cleveland, Montgomery County Civic Federation; Frederic P. Lee, Social Service League of Montgomery County; Hugh C. McGrath, Arlington County; Fred W. Nickel, Prince Georges County; Harry F. Kennedy and Albert A. Smoot, Alexandria, and Mrs. K. F. Edler, Fairfax County.

On the Chest committee are E. Joseph Aronoff, James A. Councilor, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Coleman Jennings, Joseph D. Kaufman, Mrs. Leonard B. Schloss, H. L. Rust, jr., Marcy L. Sperry, Elwood Street, Corcoran Thom, jr., W. W. Wheeler, J. Bernard Wyckoff and Herbert L. Willett, jr.

BIRELEY'S Orangeade

Boy Undaunted by 'Indians' In Pageant—They're His Pals

Tommy Foti, who lives with his mother and father at 523 Virginia avenue southeast and is in the fourth grade at school, lay down on the grass in front of Sylvan Theater last night, cupped his face in his chubby hands and watched the pageant.

He saw:

The stage, and it was green, with trees in the background and children who sat on the grass and wore costumes of every nation . . . .

The lights from the stage blinked and the play was on—the summer festival of the council of Social festival of the Council of Social Agencies. Tommy sat with 500 others behind the reserved seat section. There were no seats, so he sat on the grass.

Tommy watched:

The 250 children skip across the stage in the dance of many nations.

He heard:

Folk songs as quaint as the costumes the children wore . . .

There were many dances and all were good. But of them all he thought the Irish and the Scottish were the best.

Tommy watched them:

The little girls and boys in green and white, skipping to a folk song thatwas old when St. Patrick drove the snakes from Ireand. They skipped and danced in lilting leaps.

Then Tommy saw:

In kilts and flashy plaids the children dance like they do on the heather of Bonnie Scotland. A man walking out on the stage with a bagpipe, playing shafts of that music that echoes through the Scottish glens at twilight.

He saw:

The Grecians in pale yellow, flimsy classic dresses swaying to the lays of Ancient Athens in a Grecian dance.

And:

The Russians jump like little frogs in a dance the Czar enjoyed once upon a time.

Tommy's eyes followed a fond mother. She took a coat to her son on the stage. He was an Indian and he wore more warpaint than an Iroquois. She told him to put on the coat because it was getting chilly. But sonny—he just threw the coat over his shoulders as if it were an Indian blanket.

Tommy watched the Colonial girls wheel the Virginia reel to tunes of "Turkey in the Straw."

He watched the Indians make grimaces as they whooped an Indian war dance and said almost out loud: "Aw shucks . . ." because as he said later:

"All the time I knew Jimmy—he goes to school with me—isn't fierce like that."

Mary Ellis Has Exacting Stint In Earle Film

English Band Scores Hit; Symphony at the Fox; Other Programs.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"FATAL LADY." Paramount picturization of a story by Harry Segall, adapted to the screen by Samuel Ornitz, with additional dialogue by Tiffany Thayer, starring Mary Ellis, with Walter Pidgeon, Norman Foster, John Halliday, Ruth Donnelly, Alan Mowbray, Guy Bates Post, Edar Kennedy, Albert Conti, Edward Van Sloan and Frank Puglia. Directed by Edward Ludwig. Reviewed Friday morning.

With grand opera and a Parisian bistro as background, this slightly tawdry, but none the less interesting exhibit, has the audacity to attempt the welding of two dramatic elements as far apart as the poles. In story content and development it is a melodramatic, multiple-murder mystery. In between times, it becomes a fairly comprehensive demonstration of just how successfully grand opera may be contrived on the screen.

BELL.

"Fatal Lady" is primarily fortunate in having as its star an artiste who is equally at home in drama and opera. Mary Ellis brings to the cinema a complete equipment as an actress and no less proficiency as a singer to whose career the exacting demands of grand opera have not been unknown. The action of her present vehicle has been so fashioned as to afford her ample opportunity to display both facets of her art. The more impressive of the two is her singing. Not that Miss Ellis' portrayal of the role of Marian Stuart, who is known successively also as Maria Delasano and Malevo, is in itself faulty, but rather by reason of the fact that the authors of the present piece have surrendered just a little too much to the "Trilby" motif and have failed to grace the non-musical periods of their charade with dialogue of any intrinsic merit whatsoever to lend it importance. The appeal of the picture is almost entirely a matter of individual enthusiasm for Miss Ellis' personal charm and the cleverness of the development of the homicidal elements of the story.

Title Is Apt.

"Fatal Lady," as a title, possesses the twofold merit of intriguing suggestion and comparative truth. All of the young gentlemen who became infatuated with the brilliant young singer whose New York career was cut short by the sudden death of an admirer sooner or later come under the lethal attention of the baffling murderer who makes it appear that her favor alone is enough to condemn its recipient to sudden and violent death. One by one, they tumble into their graves, victims either of knife or gun, always wielded at close quarters.

This ramification of plot is in vivid contrast with the delightful vocal intervals of the film during which Miss Ellis' highly cultivated soprano is heard in legitimate scenes from "Isabelle" and "Bal Masque," as well as a group of lighter numbers, including "Je Vous Adore." As Marian's star begins to set, shifting fortune throws her lot with the drab habitues of a Parisian cabaret, where wealthy admirers still search her out and thus place their lives in jeopardy.

Were the quality of the dialogue in any sense commensurate with the ostensible social standing and breeding of the characters who speak it, "Fatal Lady" would be a drama of compelling novelty and considerably more force.

The story's dramatic developments are intrusted wisely to Miss Ellis, Alan Mowbray, Walter Pidgeon, Guy Bates Post, John Halliday and Norman Foster; its comic possibilities to Ruth Donnelly and Edgar Kennedy, as an operatic impresario and his watchful wife. The movement of the play leads from New York to Brazil, London and Paris and offers a corresponding variety of scene and investiture.

British Band Scores.

Jack Hylton and his "Continental Revue" offer an hour of diversified orchestral, vocal and comic divertissement, in which Pat O'Malley, Magda Neeld and Peggy Dellare, the featured specialists, augmented toward the close of the pastiming by the remarkable pianologue by Eric Templeton, a blind artist of amazing versatility and a high quality of musicianship. His feat of playing four melodies simultaneously is an achievement of genuine note—especially since the numbers are, or were yesterday afternoon, "Dinah," "The Rosary," "Trees" and "Yes, We Have No Bananas," nominated by the audience and not arbitrarily chosen by the performer.

Miss Neeld's voice is a high coloratura of purity and power, heard to fine advantage in the Neopolitan Street Song and "Poor Wandering One," from Gilbert and Sullivan's "Pirates of Penzance." Miss Dell is a deep contralto with a leaning toward the humorous in tunes and lyrics and Mr. O'Malley an all-around journeyman singer-comedian, whose recitation of "Sam, Pick Up Thy Musket" is one of the comic gems of the program. There are, in addition, a mixed quartet, male trio and a comic gentleman who plays saxophone in the band that contribute greatly to the gayety of the occasion.

The orchestral numbers are handsomely tossed off, with perhaps a little too much stress on the brasses now and again. The finale is a colorful ensemble staged to the stirring strains of a movement from Coates' London Suite. Altogether a rousing and riotous act worthy of the ovation which it was accorded.

A Bill Corum sport short, devoted to greyhound racing, and the Paramount News are the auxiliaries of an Earle bill that just misses striking fire.

Loew's Fox

"TROUBLE FOR TWO." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's story of "The Suicide Club," adapted to the screen by Manuel Seff and Edward E. Paramore, jr., featuring Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, with Frank Morgan, Reginald Owen, Louis Hayward, E. E. Clive, Tom Moore, Ivan Simpson, Guy Bates Post and Pedro de Cordoba. Directed by J. Walter Ruben. Previewed Tuesday, June 2.

Pursuing a cumulative course of dramatic intensity and mounting excitement and suspense, this unusual adventure-romance snowballs a drama of lethargic early movement into an exciting race with death.

Robert Louis Stevenson's idea of a conveniently available means of exit from this mortal coil through the equitable working of the constitution and by-laws of a metropolitan "suicide club" is prolific in sources of weird and unexpected complications. Particularly is this true when two of the members happen to be the heir apparent to a throne and the beautiful incognito princess to whom he does not wish to be married through any mere whim of paternal expediency. It is not betraying a state secret to confide that Prince Florizel changed his mind before he got through with the president of the suicide club and that worthy traitor's diabolical scheme of political sedition on a revolutionary scale.

It is a fantastic story that is here unfolded—a "costume" thriller, lent an added quality of eerie terror by the grotesque makeup of some of its principal figures and the constant threat of impending doom in the dimly lit rooms of the world's strangest "club."

A Parlous President.

The play's ominous import is given its most sinister expression by Reginald Owen in the role of the president of the suicide club, where one might purchase the privilege of meeting death for a matter of a few hundrd pounds sterling. Mr. Owen will not be immediately recognized, although the skill of his performance soon betrays his identity. Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, as the royal pair who discover that they do not so greatly object to being betrothed, after all, acquit themselves well in assignments that are a little cryptic in their early manifestations.

Frank Morgan, as the protector of the prospective king, is the most humorous figure in the play, although it is beginning to seem desirable that sometime again, just once, he finish a sentence before bewilderment has a chance to throttle it completely. Mr. Morgan's comedy device of interrupted speech has been continuously prevalent in his performances now, ever since "Naughty Marietta." Too much is sometimes enough. Louis Hayward and E. E. Clive are the additional members of the cast who contribute something of value to a story that is a little too episodic to create a sustained effect.

A Musical Event.

A brilliant feature of this week's bill at the Fox is the colorful overture number conducted by Yascha Bunchuk with both the orchestra pit and the stage packed with instrumentalists and the triple-manual pipe organ added for good measure. In this flamboyant sweep of musical color, Conductor Bunchuk is merely bringing to F street the sort of chromatic tone pictures he contributed to the bills at the Capitol Theater in New York over a period of some 12 years or more.

His overture makes no claim to genuine symphonic content or treatment, although it does combine portions of compositions of standard worth and achieves a grandiose effect that won the director and his men an ovation at yesterday afternoon's second performance.

It is a fine bit of effective showmanship that emphasizes once more how serious a loss was suffered when large orchestras were eliminated from the motion picture theaters.

Dancers on Stage.

The stage bill at the Fox—and this is entirely distinct from Mr. Bunchuk's orchestral embellishments—is headlined by Vivian Fay, classic dancer, recently a feature of "The Great Waltz," who contributes two numbers of rare grace and beauty.

A suitable background for Miss Fay's terpsichorean artistry is provided by the Elida Ballet of 12 agile young women, who present a series of entrancing rhythms and spectacular stage pictures.

Others on the vaudeville portion of the bill include the Three Swifts, foremost of the stage's Indian club jugglers, and Talbot Haslett, Washington tenor-barytone, who scored a hit both from the ramp before the orchestra and from the stage in clever arrangements of "Melody From the Sky," "Beautiful Lady in Blue," a medley of songs from Victor Herbert's "Naughty Marietta" and "Love Is Like a Cigaret."

An unusually diverting issue of the Fox Movietone News completes a bill that possesses distinctive qualities rarely encountered on F street.

Sings in Gay Revue at National

Harris & Ewing.

Prominent in the cast of principals marshaled for the "Kapital Kapers" revue, which opened last night in the National Theater, is Helen Shaffer Mark, popular Washington mezzo, who is heard in solo and specialty numbers as one of a total ensemble of 125. "Kapital Kapers," directed by William Holbrook, will be repeated at the National tonight.

"THE GUARDSMAN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of Ferenc Molnar's play, adapted to the screen by Ernest Vajda, starring Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, supported by Roland Young, ZaSu Pitts, Herman Bing and Maude Eburne. Directed by Sidney Franklin. "THE PLOW THAT BROKE THE PLAINS." Rural Resettlement Administration production, made by Pare Lorentz. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

The Belasco should be pretty proud of itself this week, for it is featuring, in its double bill, the two most exciting things the theater has to offer.

In "The Guardsman," the thrill of the best acting and most highly polished professional production; in "The Plow That Broke the Plains," the merit of a true story important to the entire country, told in vigorous terms, though produced by comparative amateurs.

Some years ago (we forget just how many) we came out of a motion-picture theater beaming broadly, rushed to a typewriter and banged out something about "Huzzas in our throat, stars in our eyes, bouquets in our hands."

We were "reviewing" the grand Lunts in a grand show. We are still raving—expect no moderation from us on this score—for although the years have dimmed "The Guardsman's" photography a little, they have made no mark on the delicious and delirious play or the gay and gusty performances of a trio of very fine actors. Roland Young is the third.

They Play Ebulliently.

The Lunts may not be our greatest actors, but they probably get more fun out of the theater than anyone else in the country, which naturally means that they put a tremendous amount of fun into it.

This time in Molnar's sprightliest play, which was one of their most stunning Broadway successes, Alfred is an actor, Lynn an actress, and these two temperaments are biting, snapping, snarling at each other in a state of holy and jealous wedlock. Hearing the "footsteps of the next man" in his wife's life approaching, the actor determines to be that man. He undertakes his greatest masquerade, trembling as a husband for fear that his wife will succumb to his disguised charms, worrying as an actor that he will not be a sufficiently persuasive lover. His Romeo, he says himself, is without compare.

Question marks as great as the famous one of "The Lady or the Tiger" develop here, there and everywhere. Did the actress recognize him, or didn't she? Her eyes and lips says "Yes" and "No."

It is a chuckling, blithe, brilliant play that deserves its cinema immortality, and it is, needless to say, played absolutely to the hilt, with a pace and timing that fairly race and snap along in their rightness. This is acting.

That "Documentary" Film.

As different from this as day from night is the companion feature, for its pace is that of time itself, which, coupled with over-plowing, over-planting, hot sun, high winds and litle rain, has made a desert and a dust bowl of hundreds of thousands of acres in America's Great Plains area, stretching from the Panhandle of Texas to Canada.

The Resettlement Administration has filmed the tragic story with skill and with magnificent photography and with economy of description. Perhaps the most graphic moment is the relentless approach of the plows upon the helpless land—much as the grim tanks are shown rolling forward at the front during the war—that created the wheat boom which did so much to hasten the land's destruction.

Pare Lorentz, who was movie critic for Vanity Fair, wrote the story and directed it, and proved once and for all that he has every right to criticize the work of other movie workers. John Franklin Carter, of Ressettlement—better known probably under his numerous pen names, Jay Franklin, Jefferson Chase, and "Diplomat," his dectective story nom-de-plume—was supervisor. This picture has been shown again and again this week to the farm women from many lands here for the conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, and particularly impressed the foreign delegates.

The newsreel completees a bill worthy of several viewings.

"SHOW BOAT." Universal picturization of the novel by Edna Ferber and stage extravaganza of the same name by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, with music by Jerome Kern, starring Irene Dunne, with Allan Jones, Charles Winninger, Helen Morgan, Paul Robeson, Helen Westley, Sammy White, Queenie Smith, J. Farrell MacDonald, Hattie McDaniel, Donald Cook, Arthur Hohl, Sunnie O'Dea and Charles Middleton. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Friday evening (third week) by Sally Stroud.

"Show Boat" is, of course, a Must. To whet your appetite, you will see Irene Dunne in blackface, singing a Negro ballad and dancing a clog, Helen Wesley delivering her famous sniffs and snorts, Charles Winninger genially being a whole show, Helen Morgan sighing through her inimitable rendition of "Bill," Allan Jones romancing through a song called "Make Believe," and Paul Robeson at last getting movie justice in "Old Man River" and "Ah Suits Myself."

Magnolia married Gaylord against the wishes of her mother. Came a daughter, Kim. Came adversity. Exit Gaylord, thinking the two would fare better alone. With luck and her father, ebullient Andy, owner of the showboat, Magnolia managed beautifully. When Kim made her theatrical debut as a star, her parents were reunited. Sounds like a melier-drammer; maybe it is, but its romantic meanderings will intrigue you as did the book and the stage play.

Oscar Hammerstein 2d is responsible for the lyrics, Jerome Kern the music, Vera West the costumes and James Whale did a whale of a job with the direction, which is paced in the mood of the old South—a South of crinolines, naivete in young females, gallantry in men; a South so often the subject of nostalgic bleatings from literary artists. Here it is for your enjoyment. And enjoy it you will.

Miss Dunne has never been so gay, carrying her comedy with a sure hand. She sings clearly and smoothly. Allan Jones offers sympathetic support. He sounds like Crosby; but his sideburns are his own—I hope.

In the newsreel the Five at Two are shown, meaning 'tis birthday time for the Dionne quintet in Ontario.

"UNDER TWO FLAGS." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the novel by Ouida, with screen play by W. P. Lipscomb and Walter Ferris, starring Ronald Colman and Claudette Colbert, supported by Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell, Gregory Ratoff, Nigel Bruce, C. Henry Gordon, Herbert Mundin, John Carradine, Lumsden Hare, Onslow Stevens, Fritz Leiber, William Ricciardi, Frank Reicher, Francis McDonald, Gwendolen Logan, George Regas, Nicholas Soussanin, Gaston Glass and Douglas Gerrard. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

When Louise de la Ramee, yclept Ouida (1839-1908), penned "Under Two Flags" there was given to the world's literature an adventure-romance of stern proportions which was destined to offer the motion pictures one of its great opportunities to depict that tremendous sweep of theatrical display which is the cinema's exclusive province.

In its silent version, and now in its articulate form, "Under Two Flags" was, and still is, a story of heroic proportions, calling forth from actor and technician alike the utmost in talent and ability. The cast, a few of the major names in which may be found in the preceding italicized paragraph, is superb, with the animosities and amorosities of Ronald Colman and Victor McLaglen the key-noting feature of the narrative.

With Claudette Colbert, as Cigaret, and Rosalind Russell as Lady Venetia, representing the opposing types of womanhood, the distaff side of the story is admirably depicted. Others in the long list of dramatis personae are of no less efficient and effective in their assignments than this pivotal quartet, individually and collectively.

Topping the auxiliary program is "Little Boy Blue," with Charles ("Chic") Sale offering another of his superb old-man personations, using the Eugene Field poem starting "The little toy dog is covered with dust" as the means of making friends with a small boy. "The Cobweb Hotel" is an amusing Technicolor cartoon wherein a lady fly comes to the rescue of her groom snared in the gossamer trap of the arachnoidal proprietor. A release of the Metrotone News is included in the bill.

"SMALL TOWN GIRL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the story by Ben Ames Williams, with screen play by John Lee Mahin and Edith Fitzgerald, starring Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, supported by Binnie Barnes, Lewis Stone, Andy Devine, Elizabeth Patterson, Frank Craven, James Stewart, Douglas Fowley, Isabel Jewell, Charles Grapewin, Nella Walker, Robert Greig, Edgar Kennedy and Willie Fung. Directed by William A. Wellman. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

A story by a popular author, translated to the screen by good craftsmen and peopled with a cast of players of wide-spread popularity, "Small Town Girl" combines the major attributes of successful entertainment, a fact further attented by this return engagement of the Ben Ames Williams story to Loew's Columbia Theater after already having delayed a fortnight a little westward on F street.

The appeal of Janet Gaynor and Robert Taylor, not to mention the others of the time-tested—and approved—cast, is alone sufficient to warrant the conclusion of entertainment value, and, with a pleasingly written and convincingly presented story, that estimation is entirely substantiated.

Elaboration on the narrative, and even the histrionic aspects of "Small Town Girl" would, at this late date, be superfluous. Much has already been written on these points; so, be it sufficient unto this day merely to state that here is money worth for the showshopper.

Augmenting the program is "Rural Mexico," a Technicolor travelogue narrated by that ace of all loquacious globe-trotters, James A. Fitzpatrick, with admirably selected pictures done in exquisite hues. "The Brain Busters," with Billy Gilbert and Vince Barnett, offers a typical comedy that has its moments. A release of the Metrotone News rounds out the bill.

'Kapers' Revue Wins Favor for Breezy Comedy

Young Democrats Present Lively Extravaganza at the National.

"KAPITAL KAPERS." The District of Columbia Division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America presents the musical extravaganza in two acts and 24 scenes, under the general direction of Mrs. Katherine Ford. Sketches staged by John Kline. Dances staged by William R. Holbrook. Phil Lampkin orchestral unit under direction of William F. Jacobs. At the National Theater, June 5 and 6. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

In more than a score of fast-moving, expertly performed scenes, the District of Columbia Division of the Young Democratic Clubs of America last evening in the National Theater presented "Kapital Kapers," as smoothly produced a revue of native origin as has ever come to the local boards.

Virtually free from political implications and persiflage, dance routines with and without accompanying vocalizings, alternated with amusing black-out skits, all done with a surprising precision and artistic craftsmanship.

Twenty-four separate scenes graced the bill and each with the particular merit of being short and to the point, so that the entire program, even with an intermission, consumed only slightly more than two hours.

Miss Mark Stops Show.

While all the numbers possessed their moments of merit—and rarely has a more consistently meritorious production been produced from local talent—and, accordingly, are deserving of extended mention, but few can be accorded space at a late "deadline" hour!

As the show-stopper was the solo by Helen S. Mark, who, accompanied at the piano by Betty Grey, offered an excruciating travesty on a prima donna warbling something about "Oft Have I Seen the Swift Swallow." But what really laid the howling customers in the aisle was her exit on roller skates! One wonders, however, whether the posture attained at one point was part of the act! If not, it was good enough to be kept in! Both Miss Mark and Miss Grey combine a fine comedy sense with genuine musicianship.

Another particular highlight was the "hick," dead-pan pantomime of Eleanor Perry, Robert Gibbons, Margaret Levy and Edgar Wise. Three times they appeared, and three times convulsed the audience with an exhibition that was little short of inspired.

More Serious Moments.

Considering, for the nonce, the "straighter" aspects of the bill, mention must be made of the exquisite ballroom routine by Marion Venable and Paul Fox, the novelty acrobatic dances of Jack Reagan, the lovely toe number of Evelyn Fostor and the vocal interpolations of Jack Collins and Charles Dixon in duo.

Some 48 girls comprised the two independent corps de ballet, both performing in charming manner, and joining forces for an excellent military routine just preceding the finale.

Because of the sponsorship of "Kapital Kapers," and because some political inferences were expected, the producers wisely refrained from satire or burlesque. They did, however, include a colloquy between Mrs. Hoover (Miss Grey), and Mrs. Roosevelt (Mrs. Tempe Ellen Roberts), wherein party lines meant nothing to the wielders of the delicately articulated shafts of satire.

$50,000 Key Opens Texas Fair Today

Dallas, Tex., June 5 (AP).—Legendary Texas, its factual and fabled past of 400 years quilted together under six flags, opens a $25,000,000 centennial birthday party tomorrow to the odor of fresh paint.

Rushed to completion by hurried efforts of 15,000 workers on around-the-clock shifts, the 200 acres of Midway attractions, historic and commercial exhibits and amusement spots of the exposition looked like a freshly laundered shirt tonight.

Fresh paint warnings hung here and there, but the big show, largest unit in the State-wide celebration of Texas' one-hundredeth anniversary of independence, had every door open for an expected 300,000 visitors on opening day.

Unlocking of the main gate with a $50,000 jeweled key will start the exposition. Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, official Government representative, and Gov. James V. Allred will arrive at the gateway at noon, leading a 3-mile procession. Gov. Alfred will turn the jeweled key.

4 Young Artists Win Scholarships

Four young artists have been awarded scholarships by the Felix Mahony National Art School as the result of work shown in the school's annual commencement exhibit this week.

Full-year scholarships went to Ramon Contreras, of Brazil, for his poster design; to Betty Deaderick, of Washington, for her fashion design, and to Constance Robinson, Charleston, W. Va., for a poster design. Edwin Owens was awarded a summer school scholarship to study under Henry Hensche, the portrait painter, at Provincetown, Mass.

With commencement exercises this week bringing the regular school term to a close, Felix Mahony, director, is preparing to leave for Provincetown, where he has spent the summer for several years.

Reviewing Stand.

Chicago, June 5.

By the time this reaches your eyes, Bobbie Arnst, pretty little former wife of John Weismuller, will be divorced from Chicago Lawyer Robert Cavanaugh . . . They have been married about a year . . . He's out of town, so it won't be contested, and she is already driving her car back to New York.

IRENE CASTLE McLAUGHLIN.

Irene Castle McLaughlin was a backstage visitor yesterday . . . The girl who originated the bobbed tresses for America and who mastered chic long before Parisian salons realized the financial scope of the United States femme market, is just as stunning as ever, and even more modish . . . She talks crisply, the speech of a woman who is accustomed to business decisions . . . And because I am a stranger in the midst, she is going to give me something that I will appreciate deeply for my "Water Under the Bridge" collection—a print of the only moving picture which she and Vernon Castle made . . . I think that is rather nice.

On this entire Midwest visit I've had a total of 17 hours' sleep . . . Me, who shuddered uneasily at the thought of arising in the morning and feeling the hot breath of the sun, have been up with the roosters every day after getting to bed at 5 or 6 a. m. . . . So, now I'm going back to Broadway to rest up . . . There's one thing to be said for these early arisings, however . . . You meet a better class of sunshine.

Al Scott has shifted back to Janet Gaynor . . . The Conrad Nagel-Kay Linaker attachment is getting serious . . . Twentieth Century-Fox is having "stage mother" headaches with Shirley Temple's maw, and she may be barred from the lot to have mileage on her squawks . . . Jay Howard, editor of the breezy Chicago, theatrical pamphlet, the Rounder, will wed Bernice Buchanan . . . The De Marcos goout on the Queen Mary to London.

Jock Whitney's $900,000 technicolor adventure in "Dancing Pirates" is an enlarged headache . . . The film is faring badly in its early releases . . . Charlie Collins, Frank Morgan and Steffi Duna turn in fine performances, but what the flicker lacks is a love interest of box-office proportions.

Rosie Dolly Netcher, of the famous Dolly Sisters, has a cute manner of remembering her friends when they are in this town . . . She just sent me a huge container of the most delicious chicken soup I've ever tasted . . . A charcoal burner kept it piping hot en route . . . The former Meredith Howard, one of Ziegfeld's prettier girls, lives here under her married tag, Mrs. Russell Erskine . . . he's of the auto clan . . . She is president of the Ziegfeld Alumnae Association of the Midwest, and in contrast to the indifference which greeted a similar organization in New York, it is a bustling, thriving club here . . . The girls were smart enough to support their own energy by inviting society matrons of the city to join . . . The result is a perfect rash of energy and a successful organization . . . Frank Bering, who was NOT glorified by Ziggie, is the treasurer.

Performers who catch your eye in Chicago: Louis Nixon, Jackie Green, June Travers, Margie Little, Dorothy O'Donnell, Keller and Nalley . . . This Dorothy O'Donnell is the blonde daughter of Spike O'Donnell, once a local beer baron . . . She is a grand little performer, a great hoofer and knows how to sell hot songs.

George Frame Brown, N. B. C. author, will wed this fall . . . The girl is an old sweetheart from schooldays . . . Chez Paree will not permit any performers to double hereafter . . . Yacht Club Boys doubling from the club to a local theater strained their pipes so badly that Joey Jacobson rushed to New York to get an act to replace them . . . They were useless on the floor, and patrons were complaining.

The talent scouting contest which drew this reporter to the Midwest almost was a flop . . . Barney Ross, however, supplied the stopwatch to clock the applause and saved the situation . . . Muriel Paige, the Flame Girl of the Casino de Paree show, is going to startle New York with a new idea, a glass fabric costume that looks like an ordinary evening gown under one light, but becomes revealing when exposed to the higher-powered stage lamps . . . It is the newest in nude effects, and she's a bit of gorgeousness.

Town is raving over Florence and Alvarez . . . And local clubs are bidding for Grace and Ray MacDonald, cute youngsters, who are coming along fast . . . Frazee Sisters can't decide on a N'Orleans offer . . . College Inn has an ice carnival that is exciting . . . Carl Stockholm, former six-day bike rider, is one of the wealthier Chicagoans, with a string of dry-cleaning establishments . . . Ashton Stevens and Ben Bernie have collabed on a popular song: "I was Just Beginning to Care" . . . They will each rate 25 per cent of the receipts.

Culbertson on Bridge

Purely Psychological.

I have received an interesting letter from a group of Philadelphia medical students who cheerfully refer to themselves as "four medical and contract dubs." I liked the line of their letter which said: "Although we have pronounced and independent views on most subjects in life, we still are willing to defer to superior knowledge in medicine and bridge."

They sent me the hand shown below asking me to comment on the bidding and, more particularly, on the play of a grand slam contract. The great question is, as a glance at the cards will show, which way a finesse in a vital suit should be taken.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

♦ J 7

SOUTH
♥ A Q 10
♦ Q 10 9 4 3 2
♣ A 4

The bidding which actually took place was:

North	East	South	West
2 spades	Pass	3 dimds.	Pass
5 dimds.	Pass	5 no trp.	Pass
6 dimds.	Pass	7 dimds. [final bid]

It was admitted by all parties, North included, that the opening two bid was pretty bad, so, outside of heartily agreeing with this view, I will make no further comment. But it does appear, since North must have realized that he had already "pressed" by opening with a forcing bid, that he could have exercised restraint on the next round and not jumped from three to five diamonds. South undoubtedly was justified in going to a grand slam with his excellent holding after North's terriffic show of strength.

West created an immediate problem by opening the six of spades. And it was on this point that my correspondents asked a decision: Should declarer finesse immediately or not?

My answer was that it depended entirely on the bridge personality of the West player. There were, of course, two distinct lines of play possible: one, to finesse the queen of spades; the other, to put up dummy's ace, draw trumps, play three rounds of clubs, on the last of which South could discard a spade, and then (still having a high trump entry left in dummy) play the queen of spades through East for a finesse against the king. I pointed out that against some opening leaders I would adopt the first plan; against others, the second. The only question to determine was whether West was the type of player to lead boldly away from a king into a bid suit, and if so, whether he had chosen this specific hand to do it. A difficult problem in psychology, I will admit, but certainly one that should appeal to medical students!

Vic Ghezzi Adds Round of 70, Ties Mangrum for Open Lead

Nats Conquer Tigers, 6-2, Advance

Regain 4th Place Tie as Whitehill Hurls 8-Hit Game.

Bluege, With 3 Safeties, Leads 13-Hit Attack Against Phillips.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The pitching arm of Earl Whitehill ushered the Nats back into the first division yesterday. Dealing the Tigers an assortment of curves, fast and slow, the venerable Washington southpaw held 'em to eight hits and fashioned a 6-2 victory for the Nats.

To the accompaniment of the ladies' day shrieks, the Nats made time with the offerings of big Clarence Phillips, Detroit rookie righthander who was making his second big league start. With rare good judgment in timing their 13 blows the Nats compiled a 3-1 lead for Whitehill and took the precaution of scoring three more runs for him in the seventh inning.

It all served to move the Nats back into a tie with the Tigers for fourth place, but more important is their proximity to third place which the Cleveland Indians, beaten yesterday at Boston, now occupy by only a half-game margin.

Tigers Are Crippled.

It was a crippled Tiger crew that the Nats beat. With Manager Mickey Cochrane on the sidelines after a collapse at Philadelphia; Al Simmons out of uniform with a sprained ankle, and Hank Greenberg nursing his broken wrist at Detroit, the Tigers were not the formidable team that boasts two pennant triumphs.

But the Nats, supposedly crippled, too, by the absence of Second Baseman Buddy Myer, found a brilliant substitute in the veteran Ossie Bluege who for the second straight day pounded out three hits in four times at bat and figured in all of the Nats' scoring rallies.

Whitehill, in fact, might have earned a shut-out over the Tigers. Their run in the first inning evolved from a pair of handle-hit singles by Charley Gehringer and Goose Goslin and it was Red Kress' error on Hayworth's ground ball in the fifth that paved the way for their only other run.

Kress Makes Superb Play.

But Whitehill was indebted to his supporting cast for keeping the Tigers' score down. Kress went to deep short for a superb play on Hayworth's smash in the second inning after a one-handed stab of Walker's liner in the first, and both Bluege and Buddy Lewis turned in spectacular stops with Tigers on base.

Washington reclaimed that run the Tigers scored in the first almost instantly. Jake Powell, with a rare burst of speed, beat out a triple to left center when Goslin and Walker let the ball fall between them, and scored on Lewis' infield out.

The rest of their runs the Nats scored with two out. They picked up two in the third when Bluege, Stone, Travis and Kuhel slammed out consecutive singles, and they made it 6 to 2 in the seventh in which Whitehill himself contrib-

Gomez Wins as Yanks Rally to Beat Tribe, 4-3

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 5.—Lefty Gomez returned to the mound today after a ten-day layoff with a sore arm and held the Cleveland Indians to five hits as the league-leading Yankees came out ahead, 4 to 3, in a pitchers' duel.

The victory was Gomez's sixth against one loss this season. He hooked up in a tight struggle with Lloyd Brown until the eighth, when the Yanks fell on the Cleveland hurler for three runs, to sew up the ball game.

Lou Gehrig, playing in his 1,700th straight game, contributed to the win with his ninth homer of the campaign, hitting a long smash inside the park in the sixth to start the Yankee scoring.

Rookie Joe DiMaggio also aided the winning cause, getting two of the Yanks' six hits, to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 18.

By the triumph, the New Yorkers kept their jinx hold on the Indians for the season, with six wins and no defeats.

Chicagoans Absorb Sixth Consecutive Licking From Boston.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 5.—The Red Sox won their fourth consecutive game today, downing the White Sox, 8 to 6. The Chicagoans have lost all their seven games to Boston this season. Jack Wilson, starting his first game of the season for the Fenway millionaires, lasted until the ninth, when the White Sox tallied five runs.

Berlin, June 4 (AP).—Baron Gottfried von Cramm defeated Lucilo Del Castillo, 6—0, 4—6, 6—4, 6—1, in the opening match of Germany's third-round Davis Cup tennis series with Argentina today.

Dublin, June 5 (AP).—Ireland took a 3-1 lead over Switzerland in their third-round European zone Davis Cup tennis competition today when G. Lyttleton Rogers and T. G. McVeagh defeated Hector Fisher and William Steiner, 5—7, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4. They split even in the first two singles matches yesterday.

Cox Is Lone D. C. Golfer In Running

Kenwood Pro Has 148 at Baltusrol as Others Fail.

Barnett, Shorey and Walper Each Add Round of 79.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Baltusrol Golf Club, Springfield, N. J., June 5.—If a Washington, D. C., professional wins the National Open Championship which ends tomorrow it will be Wilfred (Wiffy) Cox, of Kenwood Golf and Country Club. Cox was the only District golfer who qualified for the final 36 holes, where Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase; Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range instructor, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac failed after today's dizzy second round.

Cox added a 74 to his 74 of the first day for a 148, and was in the select circle of 76 by three shots.

Barnett failed with rounds of 71-79-154, missing by three strokes. Walper had 78-79-157, and Shorey, 80-79-159.

Cox had a most auspicious start, rapping in a 12-footer for an eagle three, went one over on the third when his drive caught a trap, and turned in 35, one under.

Trouble on Seventeenth.

He was forced to sink a 12-footer for his par three at the tenth, and got into the woods and a trap to take a six at the eleventh.

On the fifteenth, Cox was trapped from the tee, and wound up with a four. He missed a 5-footer that would have meant a birdie at the sixteenth, and after all sorts of trouble in the rough and trap got his five at the seventeenth.

On the eighteenth a pushed second shot cost him a five, one over, but his 74 was good enough to qualify.

Barnett, with a 75 the first day, needed only a 76 to get in. The Chevy Chase pro went out in 38, two over, but took a six on the eleventh where he was trapped from the tee. Another six was made on the twelfth, after Barnett drove into the woods, was in the trap on his third. Barnett canned a 10-footer for a birdie at the fourteenth. He finished poorly, 6—6, three over the margin by which he failed to qualify for the final 36 holes.

Their cards:

Brevity Favored in Belmont Race

By the United Press.

New York, June 5.—Brevity, Joseph E. Widener's "hard luck" colt, is the 6-to-5 favorite to win tomorrow's sixty-eighth running of the Belmont Stakes—mile and a half feature event on Belmont Park's closing program and one of America's most important classics for 3-year-olds.

Although ten perfectly conditioned thoroughbreds were entered today for the $45,200 event, Brevity and another "hard luck" mount, the Belair Stud's Granville, are expected to make a two-horse race of it.

Granville is quoted at 8 to 5, in a second-choice coupling with his stablemate, Isolater, and the Wheatley Stable's Teufel. The three will be saddled by Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, who trained three previous Belmont winners — Gallant Fox, 1930; Faireno, 1932, and Omaha, last year.

This $25,000 added stake event will have a gross value of $45,200 if the ten entrants start, and the winner will receive $31,200. Thus the horse which takes the Belmont will have an excellent opportunity of displacing Bold Venture as the leading 3-year-old money winner. Several other important 3-year-old fixtures will be contested later. Bold Venture has earned $65,800 this year; Teufel, $12,275; Granville, $7,350, and Brevity, $29,600.

Moreover, the horse that wins tomorrow's American equivalent of the English Derby will have claims at least to the title "champion of the 3-year-olds," despite Bold Venture's close victories in the shorter Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Accordingly, the stakes will be an important contest—although it lost considerable glamour through Bold Venture's withdrawal—and more than 35,000 turf fans are expected to fill Belmont's spacious stands and lawns.

This will be the season's second meeting between Brevity and Granville. Both were beaten in the Kentucky Derby by Bold Venture.

Granville is the son of Gallant Fox, 1930 Belmont winner, and because of this sire, former Jockey Earl Sande figures Granville will win tomorrow. Sande rode Gallant Fox to his Derby, Preakness and Belmont victories in 1930.

Garnett Beats Mitchell, 5-Time Champion, in City Tennis Upset

Youth Enters Final Round, 6-4, 6-0

Welsh Also Survives by Defeating Lynch in Three Sets.

By George Considine.

Employing the most powerful service ever seen in local tennis, Yelverton Garnett, youthful dark horse of the City of Washington tournament, blasted his way to the final round yesterday at Edgemoor with a stunning straight set victory over five-time champion Dooly Mitchell. The scores were 6—4, 6—0.

Garnett's superiority is clearly shown in that he lost only one service game—his second of the first set—during the match. The big Chevy Chase youth, who weighs 185 pounds and stands 6 feet 3 inches, so completely dominated the second set that Mitchell was able to deuce only one game.

Mitchell Is Aced.

The deciding factor undoubtedly rested in the winner's delivery. Time after time the 20-year-old graduate of Episcopal High sent aces whizzing past Mitchell. When Dooly did manage to reach the ball, his return was usually so weak that Garnett found no difficulty scoring a placement on the next shot.

In the other semifinal match Barney Welsh, District champion, ran into a tartar in smooth-stroking High Lynch, former Princeton net captain, before winning by the tell tale count of 10—8, 3—6, 6—2. Both players were near exhaustion at the finish.

For the greater part of the match Welsh seemed content to loaf along, bearing down only when it was absolutely necessary. The spindly-legged speed king from Rockville finally cut loose in the deciding set and won going away. It was his third overtime match of the tournament.

The Welsh-Garnett finale, which is slated for tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, bears a striking resemblance to final of the District tournament last year when Welsh was pitted against Bill Breese, another dope upsetter. At that time Welsh was an easy victor.

Garnett Highly Rated.

Close followers of the game, basing their theory on the fact that the champion has had a tough time throughout this tournament and that Garnett has taken easy verdicts in every round, give Garnett "a very good chance" to take the title.

Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, District doubles titleholders, advanced to the final round by virtue of a surprisingly easy victory over Garnett and Tommy Moorhead. The youthful Chevy Chase pair challenged in the opening set but were soon subdued to the tune of 6-4, 6-1.

In the only remaining quarter-final match Mitchell and Bud Markey trounced Hugh Trigg and Hy Ritzenberg, 6-4 and 6-2. Mitchell and Markey will clash with Nate Ritzenberg and Allie Ritzenberg this morning at 11 o'clock, the winners to meet Welsh and McElvenny for the team championship at 3:30 p. m.

6,000 Compete In Rockville Track Meet

By Merrill W. Whittlesey.

Rockville will be the center of attention for all Montgomery County today as upward of 12,000 citizens in the roles of participants, proud parents, coaches and spectators, gather for the twenty-second edition of the annual track and field meet on the county seat fair grounds.

Representatives of 56 schools are expected to top last year's record entry list of 6,224. The watchful eyes of Dr. William Burdick and his corps of Public Athletic League assistants will judge events. The events start at 9:30 a. m. with a 50-yard dash for the 80-pound boys and conclude with the principal senior high events at 4:30 p. m.

Montgomery High of Rockville will defend its high school crown in the feature of the day and will be preceded by Leland, junior high champs; Kensington, grade school titleholders; Glenmont, small school winner, and Montrose, one-room school defenders.

Coach Allen Vogt and staff expect the relay and soft-ball teams and added strength in the field events to help the hosts regain the crown they relinquished three years running to Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

Coach Tony Kupka will depend mainly on Fuller, Barrett, Mizell, Simmons and Putnam to give the Bethesdans points in the individual events and regain the title held in 1934.

Coach Eddie Quinn, former Southern Conference 100-yard champ, is aiding Coach Bride at Blair High in bulding up a dark-horse team that expects to better its third-place post of last year. Jimmy Henderson, some strong relays, and soft-ball prospects brighten the outlook for the Blairites.

Jake Powell beat out a hit to Owen and was forced by Lewis, but Bluege contributed his third single of the day and Whitehill scored from third. At this point Johnny Stone drilled a double over first base and Lewis and Bluege romped home.

After the first inning, Whitehill was in difficulty only once. That was in the sixth when, with one out, the Tigers threatened the Nats' 3-to-1 lead. Goslin singled and Walker slammed a double to right center that put Goslin on third, but in this emergency Whitehill disposed of Burns on a pop foul to Kuhel and Owen on a simple fly to Stone.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

They call it the great American game, but the blood of 23 nationalities courses through the veins of players in the American League, which fails to number a single full-blooded American among its cast of more than 180.

POVICH.

Mr. Henry Edwards, who dispenses the publicity for the American League, has added it all up, and the best that he can prove is that seven American Leaguers bear traces of Indian blood. There are 27 full-blooded Germans, 21 Irishmen, 14 Englishmen, 9 Italians, 6 Poles, 4 Hebrews, 3 Frenchmen, 3 Hollanders, 2 Scots, and one each of the following nationalities: Welsh, Swedish, Mexican, Norwegian, Austrian, Bohemian, Lithuanian, Hungarian and Slovanian.

The Irish may bemoan their almost complete eclipse in the prize ring formerly ruled by sons of the Ould Sod, but on American League diamonds they are in the ascendancy. Reckoning those who boast part Irish patronage, there are 70 of Irish extraction in the league.

Mexico gets into the picture in the presence of Melo Almada, the fleet Red Sox outfielder, whose grandfather was a Spanish grandee, of old Sonora. Others who are the lone representatives of their race are Johnny Broaca, the Yankee's Lithuanian pitcher; Joe Kuhel, the Nats' Slovanian first baseman, and Julius Solters, the Browns' Hungarian outfielder.

On the Washington club the Germans outnumber all other full-blooded nationalities, with four of the Nats being of that strain: Ossie Bluege, Ed Linke, Walter Millies and Nick Altrock. The only other full-blooded gents with the Nats are Jimmy DeShong, a Hollander; Pete Appleton, a Pole; Fred Marberry and Dee Miles, Irishmen, and Jack Russell an Englishman.

Cliff Bolton is English-Scotch; Carl Reynolds, Johnny Stone, Cecil Travis are English-Irish; Buddy Lewis and Earl McNeely are Scotch-Irish; Red Kress, German-Irish, and Jesse Hill, Welsh-Irish. Manager Bucky Harris is alone as Welsh-Swiss; Jake Powell is German-Hollander, according to Edwards' records; Buddy Myer is German-Jewish, and Monte Weaver is English-German.

In the current issue of "Stage," Laurence Stallings, pictorial bigshot, takes an ungentle rap at the Nation's race writers who are still arguing the merits of Bold Venture's victory over Brevity in the Kentucky Derby.

The arguments still rage, Stallings point out, despite the fact that they could be settled very simply if any of the Nation's racing scriveners took the trouble to review his slow-motion pictures of the entire Derby as it was run. They aren't good reporters, he suggests, and as fact finders they are something less.

Stallings had four high-powered movie cameras photographing the stretch run at different angles, and other cameras recorded every phase of the running. Despite Jockey Wright's claims of Brevity's inability to get through, Stallings declares his pictures show the race to be truly run two strides after the start and that Bold Venture, the 20-to-1 shot, was simply the best horse.

The only Derby entry who suffered any trouble, according to the Stallings pictures, was He Did, which was lagging at the stretch turn after leading the field. The Stallings pictures must have revealed a deal of the intimate running inasmuch as they plainly show a woman fan on the rail grabbing at the whip of He Did's jockey and knocking the horse off stride.

In Short.

Buddy Lewis has been able to get the ball out of the infield only twice in his last 20 times at bat . . . during which he made one hit and lost 35 points in his batting average . . . Ossie Bluege's six hits in his last eight times at bat lifted his season's average 90 points . . . Jesse Hill yesterday held the student assembly of Montgomery Blair High School spellbound with his speechmaking . . . the Tigers yesterday sighed for the return of Hank Greenberg as Jack Burns struck out with two on base in the first inning and popped a foul to Kuhel under similar conditions in the sixth . . . the Cincinnati Reds recently asked for waivers on all of their players in an attempt to lure some club into a trade, without results . . . before the June 15 trading deadline sets in, it's even money that Tom Yawkey unloosens his money bags again and buys a pitcher for his Red Sox . . . Manager Bucky Harris has barred card-playing in the Nats' dressing room before the games . . . and the copyright owners have notified Griffith Stadium officials to discontinue playing "The Old Pine Tree," the Nats' theme song, over the amplifying system for some reason.

Schmeling to Last 4 Rounds—Louis

A Staff Correspondent.

Baltusrol Golf Club, June 5.—Sloe-eyed Joe Louis, best heavyweight fighter since the days of Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney, came out here today to see the stars parade in the National Open Golf championship, and openly predicted that he would knock out Max Schmeling in their big bout this month.

Flanked by two strapping State policemen, and followed by five curious little colored boys—who didn't miss a thing—Louis said he expected to flatten Herr Maxie in the fourth round.

He put up four fingers when the question was put before him.

Indiana Trackmen Win: Owens Stars

Milwaukee, Wis., June 5 (U.P.).—Indiana's Big Ten champions showed their heels to a brilliant field in the eleventh annual Central Intercollegiate track and field championships tonight, but the lithe form of Jesse Owens flashed over Marquette Stadium with another amazing personal triumph that dimmed the bitter team fight.

Although he failed for the second straight year in his assault on the two sprint records hung up by his rival, Ralph Metcalfe, of Marquette, Owens was outstanding in the huge entry list.

The Ohio State star captured the 100 and 220-yard dashes and then won the broad jump.

Three others cracked par, one of them an amateur, and their totals were 143.

Ralph Guldahl, the big Texan, whose muffed 4-foot putt on the last green cost him a tie with Johnny Goodman for the 1933 Open at North Shore, had rounds of 73 and 70, and Clarence Clark, blowing up on the stretch, added a 74 to his first day's 69.

The kids who put on a real show and furnished the drama were Charlie (Chuck) Kocsis, 21-year-old University of Michigan golf captain, a Detroit boy, hailing from a veritable golfing family, and Jack Munger, the bespectacled Texan. Both are amateurs.

Kocsis Has 143.

They left Kocsis and Munger off the Walker Cup team and the youngsters today proved they could take it. Kocsis, pacing the 35 amateurs entered in this championship, played with the skill of a Vardon and the coolness of an experienced campaigner to drill out a crackling 71 that gave him a total of 143, only 3 shots from the leaders.

Munger, just 20, still in college, tacked on a 70 to his 74, for a 144, and, along with Paul Runyan, who soared to a 75 after his first-day 69, and Frank Moore, an unknown from New York State, had matched par for the 36 holes.

So fierce was the scoring that 76 golfers out of a field of 163 qualified with totals of 151 or better.

If you were seven strokes over par you could have been eligible for tomorrow's wind-up, but many a star couldn't make the grade, great as was the day's firing.

Tonight there were two pathetic figures.

One of 'em was Wee Bobby Cruickshank, who has been on the threshold of several Open championships, only to be repulsed by a bad approach or putt.

Cruickshank Out.

Bobby, Richmond, Va.'s hope, the dynamic chap who played off 13 years ago with Bobby Jones for the Open title only to lose, passed out of the championship with a weird total of 155.

Cruickshank, who said his caddy was underclubbing and overclubbing him, went out in 42 and finished with an 80. His total was 155. Bobby was in tears tonight.

And as hard as he fought, and tore his heart out in an effort to land a qualifying place for Saturday's final drive, Sam Parks, of Pittsburgh, the defending champion, failed to make the grade. Parks couldn't better his 76 of the opening day, and finished with a 152, just one stroke too many. Just a few slips on the stretch, with the pressure at its height, cost the titleholder a chance to play tomorrow.

Ky Laffoon, the Chicago flash, was in safely with 145, and Walter Hagen, the big drama man of National Opens, put on one of his characteristic spurts to grind out a 34 on the last nine for a 72 and a total of 146.

Mac Smith, the Carnoustie Scot, playing with an ease and rhythm that brought "Ahs" from the gallery, scored 146.

That sterling, colorful shotmaker, Gene Sarazen, champion in 1922 and 1932, followed by a tremendous gallery, was in a fairly comfortable spot at 147, after he ran abreast of par with a 72 today.

Wiffy Cox Shoots 74.

The only foreigner left in the running is Chick Chin, the tall, likable pro from Japan, who trimmed out a 71 for a 147. His countryman, Torchy Toda, failed to qualify.

Jimmy Thomson, the king of swat, scored 147.

Zell Eaton, the one time Oklahoma caddy, gave a couple of hundred a thrill on the 158-yard tenth hole when he holed out a full six iron for an ace—the only one thus far. There have been several eagles, but no aces. That ace didn't help for he followed with two sixes, and scored only a 75 for a 147.

This is the fairest course any Open championship has been held on, as the scores attest, and in the long run the payoff will be on putting. True, a long driver of the type of Thomson, Dutra, Craig Wood, or the new tee-shot sensation, 19-year-old John Bulla, of Chicago, are perfectly at home here, but if you can't stroke those putts on these terrace-deceptive greens, where a roll is a roll, you can't get your pars.

Mrs. Meckley Wins Third Title As Helen Dettweiler Bows, 1 Up

25 Boys' Clubs Open Season Today

The 25 teams of the Boys Club of Washington Baseball League's Peewees and Insect divisions will open their league seasons today. In the Peewee division, the Georgetown Boys Club Pirates will meet the Boys Club Yanks on the North Ellipse and the Cardinal Peewees will meet Little Tavern on the East Ellipse, both games at 11 a. m.

In the Insect division, the Georgetown Boys Club Indians clash on the South Ellipse and Northeast Boys Club and Victory A. C. on the West Ellipse, both games at 1 p. m.

The Peewee division has been divided into two leagues of six teams each. Teams in the American League—Georgetown Boys Club Pirates, Boys Club Yanks, Cardinals, Little Tavern, Y. M. C. A. and Franklin Boys Club. In the National League—Northeast Boys Club Aces, Oates A. C., Evans-Palmer, Boys Club Al Simmons, Georgetown Boys Club Cubs, Betty Mays.

Teams in the Insect division follow: Class A—Georgetown Boys Club, Boys Club Indians, Blue Streaks, Y. M. C. A. Gibson Grays, Merrick Boys Club. Class B—Northeast Boys Club, Victory A. C., St. Martin's; Fenwick A. C., Embassy A. C., Thieles Garage, Friendship House.

The winners in each class will meet in a play-off series for the division titles. Individual gold balls and a team trophy will be awarded the winning team in each division.

Playgrounds' Track Meet At Central

An army of 903 boys will converge at Central High Stadium this morning to match their speed of foot in the twenty-fifth annual Department of Playgrounds elementary school track championships. The entrants represent the finalists in eight divisional meets held in various sections of the city.

The struggle for the team championship finds a Northeast school and a Northwest school the favorites to battle it out for the title. Wheatley School carries the Northeast hopes, with John Quincy Adams from Nineteenth street and Columbia road, as the chief standard bearer for the Northwest section.

Peabody-Hilton, with one of its best teams in years, and Bowen School, Garfield division winner and a newcomer in championship ranks, are other leading contenders.

The meet will open at 10 a. m. and is expected to be completed by 1 p. m. The competitors will not only be vieing for a team championship, but for the medals and ribbons which will be awarded the first five boys in each event. The winning team will receive a trophy, which will be awarded immediately at the close of the final event.

Indian Spring Player Becomes 1st to Hold 3 Major Titles.

By Helen Dettweiler.

Winning 1 up in the finals of the District women's links tourney over Helen Dettweiler, of Congressional, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Indian Spring star yesterday became the first woman in this section ever to hold three major golf titles simultaneously.

Before the triumph Mrs. Meckley held the Maryland State title, won at Rolling Road last June, and the Middle Atlantic crown won in October.

"Betty" did the unheard of, and she did it in great fashion.

Miss Dettweiler won the first hole with a birdie 5 to the new champion's 6, but that lead was soon lost. The next hole went to Mrs. Meckley. She also took the third and fourth holes with pars. The next hole was halved in sixes when both failed to put their third shots on the green. Miss Dettweiler decreased that 2-up lead on the sixth hole when she dropped a par 4.

A stymie on the eighth green blasted Miss Dettweiler's hopes of taking that hole and when both took fours on the ninth Mrs. Meckley was 1 up.

Tenth Is Halved.

The tenth was halved in fives when Mrs. Meckley played a beautiful iron shot from a hard lie on the hill and laid it about 12 feet from the pin. The match went back to even on the eleventh, when Miss Dettweiler won with a birdie 4. The twelfth was halved, but Mrs. Meckley soon regained her lead with a par 5 on the following hole. The two were even again for the last time when Miss Dettweiler won the fifteenth.

Mrs. Meckley immediately took things in hand to win sixteen, and then closed out the match when her putt for a birdie stopped inches from the cup. And a new champion was crowned.

She deserves all the praise that can be given her, for she has displayed a great brand of golf all week, winning the medal on Monday, then proceeding to dispose of all her opponents in convincing style.

The other match played today, the consolation of the championship flight, was a keenly fought battle between Mrs. J. J. McCarthy, of Congressional, who has a fine game, and Mrs. Jack Scott, formerly of Congressional, but now playing from Kenwood. They halved the first hole in par figures, and Mrs. Scott took the next. They rounded the turn with Mrs. Scott three up. Mrs. Scott won ten, eleven and twelve to go six up, and had her opponent dormie, but Mrs. McCarthy, putting up a fine battle, took thirteen with a par to keep the match alive. They finally halved the fourteenth and the match was over with Mrs. Scott the victor.

Clark Is Named Citys' Leading Bowler

In the closest balloting that ever decided the ranking bowler of the city, Astor Clark was named the Capital's No. 1 duckpin artist by 2 points last night over Perce Wolf, of Hyattsvile, Md. Receiving 65 points under the ranking system used by the committee of the Washington City Duckin Association, Wolfe narrowly escaped lifting the title which Clark has now held for two years running.

The No. 3 ranking went to Joe Freschi, with

Sea Finn Wins Charles Town Feature to Pay $24.80 Mutuel

Spotty Track Brings High Pay-Offs

Double Is Worth $231; 4,000 See Thrilling Finishes.

By Walter Haight,
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 5.—From last to first came Sea Finn, a sprightly daughter of Searip, this afternoon to win the Washington Herald purse, the day's feature race. Running as if she had a big bag of oats awiting her at the finish line, the filly defeated Clear Knight by a length. Another length and a half away came Canteret to take the third money.

The heavily played Mazyniata was nowhere in particular. The route of the favorite was in keeping with the spirit of the day and Sea Finn paid a $24.80 mutuel.

The track ranged from "heavy" to "fast." Along the rail there was a path of dry going. For the next 5 yards the oval was a quagmire. From that point to the outside fence the course was reasonably dry. These facts probably accounted for some of the upsets.

Almost every race brought a thrilling finish for the 4,000 present. The second and third races, which produced the day's $231.20 daily double were tight fits. In the second race, Clifton's Agnes took a lip decision from Warned Off. The latter probably would have been disqualified had he won for he carried his rival far out entering the stretch. The third race was even closer. In fact, many in the crowd booed the placing of Star Special ahead of Wrackess. From where I sat, it looked no worse than a "dead heat."

Daffy, a daughter of The Porter, received an intelligent ride from Apprentice Jockey L. Garrett and won the first race for her backers at a $19.20 mutuel. The track was heavy on the inside, except for a narrow path along the rail. It was for this trail that Garrett guided as he brought Daffy into the stretch. On the other hand, Jockey Cusimano took his mount, Bright Girl, into the soggy part of the track and she tired.

Harmoak, as stiff as a board and steered to the outside fence in his previous effort which found him last, awoke today on the off track and won in a three-nose finish that saw Opposition, another long shot, second, and Hogarty third. Harmoak, ridden to the outside fence at every turn in her previous race, saved ground today and won in a drive to pay a $52.60 mutuel.

Egeon carried Passing Sun wide entering the stretch and carried off the decision in the sixth race to pay a $9.40 mutuel. The two battled it out most of the way. Jobakheta, the favorite, was third in the field of seven.

George Jessel, 9-year-old gelding, won his annual race in the finale to pay $19.80.

RUBANS PET	(Walsh)	108	1	5	6¹	7h	7h	8	10.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAFFY, $19.20, $6.80, $4.80; BRIGHT GIRL, $6.80, $5.40; SIEMPRE, $9.40.

DAFFY, badly outrun for three furlongs, worked her way up along path nearest the rail and closed with a rush to be up in the concluding strides. BRIGHT GIRL, off last, went around her field to enter contention on the backstretch, took command at the far turn, drew far out, but Cusimano steered in the heavy going rounding the turn for home and the filly tired. SIEMPRE closed a tremendous gap in the closing eighth and was going fastest at the end. PRINCE PETTIE, off in the first flight, was shuffled back turning into the backstretch, moved up menacingly approaching the stretch, but faltered. SABLE ISLE was hard ridden to reach the leaders swinging for the backstretch, assumed the lead, but tired suddenly. HAYMULUS quit after three furlongs. COUNSELLOR BILLY and RUBANS PET were bothered at the far turn.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:02½. Off at 3:05. Winner, Capt. E. Johnston's b. m. (5), by Coun Gaulois—Ornamental. Trained by O. F. Kent. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLIFTONS AGNES, $17.60, $5.60, $4.00; WARNED OFF, $4.20, $3.60; MISS TOUCAN, $3.40.

CLIFTONS AGNES, closest to the pace of MISS TOUCAN at the start, was under slight restraint when WARNED OFF took the lead. Was carried extremely wide entering the stretch and then came gamely to outlast WARNED OFF. The latter circled the leaders to get to the front approaching the backstretch, was steadied along, but went wide entering the stretch and just missed. MISS TOUCAN dropped back after a quarter to go evenly thereafter. DONEE was blocked while attempting to run up path on inside of stretch. CHISEL tired. CASTLE CLIFF and MAYETTA could not reach contention.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:33. Winner, J. R. Skinker's ch. f. (3), by Mayne—Dollys. Trained by J. L. Garthright. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:24 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR SPECIAL, $20.20, $9.60, $4.80; WRACKESS, $8.40.

STAR SPECIAL moved up on the outside approaching the far turn, disposed of $4.40; BANANA, $3.80.

LADY CIREK and just lasted to outstay WRACKESS under a punishing finish. WRACKESS, within striking distance from the start, came with a belated rush in the last eighth and appeared to have gotten up. LADY CIREK was sent to the front along a fast pace, setting backstretch under hustling tactics, was kept to the better going, but tired suddenly entering the straightaway. MIDNIGHT SHOW closed willingly. BUSY TONY could not reach contention. MISS JOYOUS went forwardly for a quarter. TEXTON was never a factor.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $231.20.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. The Boonsboro. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 4:00. Winner, Mrs. B. Welch's b. m. (8), by Harmonious—Cross Grain. Trained by E. Field. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARMOAK, $52.60, $16.40, $8.80; OPPOSITION, $62.20, $16.20; HOGARTY, $4.80.

HARMOAK, going in greatly improved form and saving ground to the backstretch, came around on the outside of leaders entering the stretch and finished resolutely under punishment. OPPOSITION, off last, improved her position steadily and closed with a belated rush and would have won in another stride. HOGARTY was sent to the front going to the first turn, was kept in the good going and finished willingly. WHISKORA worked his way to contention, but faltered midway of the stretch. BROMIDE was through early. SEA SAGA showed early speed.

FIFTH RACE—About 5 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. The Washington Herald. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:28. Winner, Mrs. L. Seay's b. f. (4), by Sea Rip—Tiny Finger. Trained by M. Johnson. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:00 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SEA FINN, $24.80, $9.80, $4.80; CLEAR KNIGHT, $4.80, $4.20; CANTERET, $3.40.

SEA FINN, saving ground when outrun to the backstretch, came up on the outside with a bold move to engage and wear down CLEAR KNIGHT. CLEAR KNIGHT assumed command under hustling tactics approaching the backstretch, came willingly at the end, but could not resist the winner. CANTERET swung wide for racing room leaving the backstretch, but hung. RADIAL showed a good even effort. ADA WAN had early speed. MAZYNIATA faltered after running in the deepest going.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. The Berkeley Springs. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53. Off at 4:54½. Winner, R. Co Utz's ch. g. (4), by Archaic—Queen of The Sea. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EGEON, $9.40, $4.60, $3.00; PASSING SUN, $7.00, $3.80; JOBAKHETA, $3.00.

EGEON ran JACK LOW into defeat and was taken under slight restraint to save ground when PASSING SUN went to the front, carried the latter wide entering the stretch, and then closed stoutly under punishment. PASSING SUN, off poorly, was sent around field under hustling tactics to take command, rallied after interference, but could not resist winner. JOBAKHETA, always within striking distance, did not appear to like the going. EXCLUSIVE closed some ground in the late stages. BIG TONEY was through after a half.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:22. Off at 5:24½. Winner, J. W. Etheridge's b. c. (3), by Playfellow—True Flier. Trained by W. Main. Value to winner, $220; second, $50; third, $20; fourth, $10. Time, 2:02 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GEORGE JESSEL, $19.80, $7.40, $4.00; PAULINE H., $7.20, $4.60; MACO, $4.40.

GEORGE JESSEL, showing improved form, went to the front entering the backstretch, drew out to clear turning for the stretch, and held his advantage under driving tactics. PAULINE H., a storward factor all the way, barely fended for the place ahead of MACO. The latter, always forwardly placed, dropped back leaving the backstretch and closed full of run on the outside. He wore blinkers today. BENDROMEL moved up menacingly along the rail, but could not threaten in the final stages. BRAD ran another dull race.

Freight Traffic Continues Rise To Higher Level

Total of 646,859 Cars in Week Is 15 Per Cent Over Year Ago.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended May 30 totaled 646,859 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 84,177 cars, or 15.0 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935 and 67,203 cars, or 11.6 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934. Due to the holiday, loading of revenue freight for the week of May 30 was a decrease of 36,547 cars, or 5.3 per cent below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 262,884 cars, a decrease of 21,435 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 50,029 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 33,153 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 144,988 cars, a decrease of 17,108 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 6,998 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 1,399 cars above the same week in 1934.

Coal loading amounted to 114,022 cars, an increase of 7,883 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 2,585 cars below the corresponding week in 1935. It was, however, an increase of 12,422 cars above the same week in 1934.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 29,734 cars, a decrease of 1,631 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 6,479 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 2,583 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended May 30 totaled 18,367 cars, a decrease of 958 cars below the preceding week this year, but an increase of 3,574 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock Shipments Drop.

Livestock loading amounted to 10,343 cars, a decrease of 810 cars below the preceding week, 761 cars below the same week in 1935, and 5,413 cars below the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended May 30, totaled 7,446 cars, a decrease of 976 cars below the preceding week this year and 1,025 cars below the same week in 1935.

Forest products loading totaled 31,155 cars, a decrease of 2,259 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 6,507 cars above the same week in 1935, and 6,713 cars above the same week in 1934.

Ore loading amounted to 44,655 cars, a decrease of 2,074 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 14,594 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 14,336 cars above the corresponding week in 1934.

Coke loading amounted to 9,078 cars, an increase of 887 cars above the preceding week, 2,916 cars above the same week in 1935, and 2,010 cars above the same week in 1934.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding week in 1935. All districts reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1934, except the Southwestern which showed a small decrease.

Johnson & Johnson Pay Employes 5% Bonus

New Brunswick, N. J., June 5 (AP). Johnson & Johnson, manufacturers of surgical dressing, paid to employes today a bonus amounting to 5 per cent of their 1935 earnings. Attached to each check was this notation:

"Prosperity largely depends upon the earning power of the people, therefore, we are making this contribution to the cause of better times."

A total of 2,500 workers in the company's four plants at New Brunswick, Chicago, Chicopee, Mass., and Gainesville, Ga., will share in the bonus, it was announced.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000 or thereabouts. One series will be 188-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks, or branches, up to 2 p.m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Air Express Gain.

New York, June 5 (AP).—Railway Express Agency, Inc., reports that its air express revenue for April showed a gain of 85 per cent over that of the agency's contract airlines for April of last year.

Record Output Of Oil Menaces Price Outlook

Level Maintained So Far by High Rate of Consumption.

New York, June 5.—Prospects for the oil industry have been clouded by the increase in crude-oil production, which, during the week ended May 16, rose to 3,008,050 barrels daily, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today. This exceeds the previous record high of 2,973,450 barrels a day produced during the week ended August 31, 1929. A large part of the increase this year is attributable to the development of the Rodessa Field and to the new Oklahoma City field extension.

Although the expansion output has not been accompanied by a weakness of crude oil prices, as in previous years, earlier hopes of another advance in prices by late spring have been supplanted by fears that present schedules may not be fully maintained. The price level has been sustained thus far largely by a compensating rise in consumption.

New Consumption Peak.

Present indications point to a domestic motor fuel demand of approximately 500,000,000 barrels for 1936, a new high record and about 7 per cent above 1935. Since the beginning of the current year, crude oil production has been moderately more than 7 per cent larger than a year earlier. The relatively well-balanced operations which have prevailed in the industry since the early part of 1935 have not, therefore, been definitely upset, but current developments are threatening. Because of the present high rate of drilling activities there is little present likelihood of a definite cut in crude-oil production for the country as a whole.

Consumption at record levels will operate against the demoralization of conditions during the immediate future, but the favorable volume of demand is not solving adverse production tendencies. Under present seasonably expanding requirements, gasoline stocks should be diminishing rapidly, whereas little progress has been made in lowering stocks which stood at record levels at the end of March. The total is still well above 70,000,000 barrels and it appears doubtful that there will be a sufficient reduction during the summer to prevent an unsettling of gasoline prices in the next period of seasonally reduced demand.

Single Purchaser Buys $10,000,000 Bonds

National Steel Corporation has filed a registration statement covering $10,000,000 first (collateral) mortgage sinking fund bonds, 3¾ per cent series, due June 1, 1965.

According to the registration statement, these bonds were sold by the company on June 1, 1936, by private sale, to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and two associates, at an aggregate price of $10,000,000. In connection with this sale National Steel Corporation agreed to file a registration statement with respect to the bonds. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and associates have advised the corporation that they have sold the bonds to a single purchaser for $10,088,000.

Stocks Show Irregular Price Changes in Dull Trading; Firmer Tone in Treasury Issues.

New York, June 5.—Stocks managed to rally a little in the last hour, after another dull day in which the turnover failed to reach 700,000 shares. The recovery was too feeble to restore all the losses. Bonds were quiet, with a firmer tone in Treasury issues. September wheat lost ⅜ of a cent at 85⅝ cents a bushel.

By late afternoon stocks, which had been mildly weak in the earlier hours, had found resting levels which were virtually identical with the price positions just two weeks ago. The poorest of the groups was the steel section. At its worst U. S. Steel was down a point, but it regained most of the loss in the last hour. Bethlehem also was heavy. Firestone softened in the rubber list, but other tires were firm. Oils were irregular. Utilities were steady.

Steels Lower.

Lower prices were paid for metal stocks, although Cerro de Pasco continued to be an exception to the downward trend. A firmer tone was found in the food, mail order and merchandising shares. No great change took place among the motor stocks. Rails worked lower. Losses were in the majority for the motor accessories and rail equipments. Columbia Pictures and Lowes were bought. Steel and Commonwealth & Southern were the only stocks with sales of more than 10,000 shares at the beginning of the final hour.

With the drain upon Bank of France gold continuing unabated, though at a pace which lately has been by no means alarming, the foreign exchange market watched anxiously for some signs as to the new government's program and just what emergency laws would be proposed. France has had a spectacular loss in gold, but the position of the central bank is so strong that it could lose a further $1,400,000,000 before its reserve, on the basis of its present statement, got down to the legal minimum. French franc futures continued difficult to deal in and the spot rate for francs was weak at the gold point. Sterling acted in a fashion much more orderly and moved in a narrow orbit all day around $5.01.

Decision of the government to increase the tariff charges against certain classes of German imports had no appreciable effect on the markets. Cameras are to be included in the list, but the chief producer here, Eastman, covers mainly the lower and middle class fields, leaving the high-priced areas to German producers who probably will continue to dominate. One certain other lines, Japanese competition is more to be feared than that of Germany. The action on tariffs keeps alive the question of foreign debts.

Raising Barriers.

Purely on the basis of tit for tat, this country has a good case in proceeding against Germany, which subsidizes her own exports. Just the same, such action will make it more difficult for Germany to pay debts to the United States. What the world needs is to tear down rather than to build up trade barriers. To one theoretical objection the answer will be made that in Germany's case at least, no matter how much financial help be extended in the way of tariff favors, no debts will be paid on Government account anyhow; for it is a question less of ability than of willingness to pay. The answer to that has been given decisively by Germany some time ago, and some other nations have not replied satisfactorily.

Although major indices of industrial activity are holding well, some signs are appearing of a seasonal let down in business. The Department of Commerce estimates industrial gains for May at "between 15 and 20 per cent" over last year, but finds a slight declining tendency in weekly statistics. If nothing worse than an ordinary summer slackness appears there would appear to be no cause for worry over a further market decline on that score. Stocks already have anticipated some recession. Their action this summer will be an attempt to estimate autumn business, and the outlook is clouded with the political factor.

Member Bank Credit.

One swallow doesn't make a summer, but the weekly bank statistics for New York City certainly revealed that the banks did a rushing business and expanded their earning assets at a pace which would have pleased the most critical inflationist. How much of the expansion will stick remains to be seen. Loans to security dealers jumped $209,000,000, loans to others on securities rose $8,000,000, and miscellaneous and commercial loans jumped $37,000,000, while the Government securities portfolios, direct and guaranteed, was rising $86,000,000. Reserves fell $150,000,000, and the piling up of deposits continued.

Brokers' Loans.

The $209,000,000 expansion in loans to brokers and dealers here, commonly known as brokers' loans, obviously was the result of the new Treasury financing. Time was when nearly all the security loan business done by the New York City banks was for stock market speculation, but the weekly figures of the Federal Reserve Board are now mainly indicative of Treasury operations. Last week probably brought a cut in loans made to brokers for the purpose of carrying customers' stocks. Such buying as took place in the stock market was mostly for the account of outright investors, and prices were unsettled—all making for a reduction in brokers' loans. Most of this week's expansion in security loans will wash out in the next fortnight, except in the unlikely event that a heady bull movement revives in the stock market.

Railroad Earnings.

As a whole the railroads are now meeting their operating expenses and their interest charges, but they are paying out or storing up only scanty amounts for their owners. Net railway operating income in April was 19.7 per cent greater than for the same month of last year, and for the first four months the net increased a little more than 20 per cent. That means coverage of fixed charges on yearly basis with something to spare. With a continuation of industrial improvement, with good crops, and with firmer control over competing transportation lines, the railroads promise within two or three years to be in a position to reward their owners for a long period of starvation. However, the railroad problem is by no means in sight of easy solution. In spite of lower interest charge, the long depression has added greatly to the railroad debt burden, the passing of time has made obsolete much railroad property, hope for wage reduction and consolidation is still dim, and a great many lines are, and doubtless will continue to be, a long distance from self-support, unless great amounts of capital now invested in them are to be wiped out.

Housing Loans In District 9 Times Year Ago

Insured Mortgages Total $2,182,310 for First 5 Months.

An 800 per cent increase in the number and a 900 per cent increase in the dollar volume of mortgages insured by the District of Columbia office of the Federal Housing Administration is shown by a comparison of the business done during the first five months of 1936 with the same period last year, District Director J. Reilly Stanton announced yesterday.

Total mortgages insured for the first five months of 1936 aggregated 335 cases, totaling $2,182,310; in 1935, 41 cases totaling $247,180.

During the same period in 1936, applications for insured mortgages on new construction handled by the District office amounted to $2,132,900, an increase of almost 60 per cent over the first five months of 1935, when the new construction applications totaled $1,365,870.

Revival in Realty.

A further indication of the revival of real estate activity in the District is shown by the comparison of January, 1935, with January, 1936. "In January, 1935," Mr. Stanton said, "we insured no mortgages, whereas the same month this year our figure was 93 mortgages insured amounting to $589,760.

"More than half of this year's applications are for new construction. I anticipate continued activity throughout the year as more people in the District and environs are becoming acquainted with the details and advantages of our program. Real estate operators also are awakening to the possibilities and may call upon us at any time to educate their sales personnel in the operation of the insured mortgage system. We are ready at any time to explain the plan to the general public."

Banker Addresses Radio Institute

Addressing the graduates of the National Capital Radio Institute last night at the Willard Hotel, John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, outlined the remarkable progress made by the industry during the present generation.

"Every industry must necessarily make use of finance in the development of its business," he said. "Finance is the science of money. The applicants for use of this money therefore must demonstrate not only an ultimate net worth that would justify advances but also it is becoming more important that the management of the various enterprises shall be of the highest order and the conduct of business of such a nature as to produce a substantial profit for the investor. In the field of management, you gentlemen, have a rare opportunity for service.

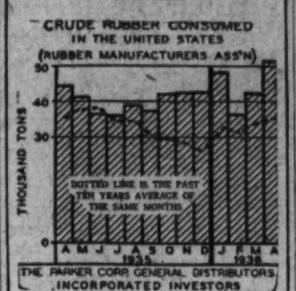
"The radio industry is still in its infancy. It will always hold a prominent place in the affairs of every nation in the world because it is a means of bringing the people of the world closer together. Were it not for radio most of our citizens would be destitute of the knowledge acquired through its instrumentality. There is a challenge therefore to you, who have demonstrated your proficiency in the technical aspects of this mighty industry, to constantly address yourselves to the betterment of the services rendered by it."

Goldstein, Boxing Star, Joins Mutual Life

Robert Goldstein, of Washington, has signed up with Thomas P. Morgan, jr., manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, to enter the life insurance field. He is a former captain of the University of Virginia boxing team and during his college career won three Southern Conference championships, was national intercollegiate champion in the lightweight class, reached the semifinals in the 1932 Olympics and won several Golden Glove and amateur championships.

Having finished law at Columbia University, he is now following a career in life insurance underwriting in association with his father-in-law, Maurice M. Salomon.

Rubber Consumption Sets New Peak



Boston, Mass., June 5.—More rubber was consumed by the manufacturers of this country in April than in any month in the history of rubber. The increase was 16 per cent over last year. Domestic stocks of crude rubber were the lowest since September, 1931. Three-quarters of United States rubber goes to the automobile industry.

Wheat Declines On Slight Rains

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—Dashes of rain in North Dakota, the principal spring wheat State and likewise the one suffering most from drought, gave wheat prices moderate setbacks today. Before assuming, however, that crop danger northwest from drought has been averted, most traders showed a pronounced disposition to await assurance the spring wheat belt as a whole has received a thorough drenching.

Federal Debt Seen Wiped Out By Pay Roll Tax

Eventual Huge Levy Will Retire Long-Term U. S. Obligations.

Montreal, June 5.—Dr. Donald M. Marvin, economist of the Royal Bank of Canada, says today in the bank's June letter that the social security act apparently will provide a buyer for long-term government obligations on a scale ultimately exceeding the total Federal debt. Dr. Marvin says:

"The member banks of the Federal Reserve system now hold Government securities to an amount of nearly $12,500,000,000; the holdings of the Reserve banks themselves amount to $2,500,000,000 and the total holdings of Government and Government-guaranteed securities by all banks, including the savings and the Reserve banks, exceed $18,000,000,000. From time to time as the Treasury has announced new issues, the question has been raised as to the ability of the market to absorb them and the effect on the price of such securities should the holders find it necessary or advisable to liquidate in volume.

"It is difficult to understand why there should have been any doubt on either score as long as the banks were holding huge surplus reserves. More recently a clearer realization of the actual situation has been evident, and, notwithstanding their negligible yield, Government offerings have been largely oversubscribed.

"A new factor, however, has recently been introduced which will apparently provide a buyer for long-term securities on a scale ultimately exceeding the total Federal debt. We refer to the social security act.

3 Billions in 1949.

"Under the authority of the social security act the Government must begin to use the proceeds of new and heavy pay-roll taxes for the purchase of Government securities. These taxes are now in effect. The interest on the sinking funds established under this act is expected to provide about 40 per cent of the cost of the plan. In 1936, 1937 and 1938 the proceeds of pay-roll taxes are expected to amount to about $327,000,000, $1,288,000,000 and $1,550,000,000, respectively nder the law, these annual levies will continue to increase until they exceed $3,000,000 in 1949. Since the payments to be made from the resulting funds are negligible in the years prior to 1942 and are not expected to bulk large in relation to collections in the years prior to 1950, the overwhelming bulk of these collections should be available for savings up to that year.

"Ultimately, collections will amount to 9.3 per cent of the national pay roll in all industries affected by the tax. The tax rate is graduated. It begins with 1.1 and 3.2 per cent of the pay roll to be paid by the employer in 1936 and 1937, respectively, and increases to 6.3 per cent of the pay ro lin 1949. For the employe it begins with 1 per cent in 1937 and increases to 4 per cent in 1949.

Law Subject to Change.

"There are a number of considerations which may lead to material changes in the law concerning the amount to be collected, but it is not generally considered probable that there will be such a widespread change of public opinion as to result in the rescission of this act. Whether or not the taxes under the act will be declared unconstitutional is another matter. With the possibility of changes in the law in mind, it seems futile to calculate the ultimate size of the sinking funds thus established. Under the present law, however, it has been estimated that the proceeds will amount to $8,000,000,000 or more by the end of 1942, the year in which the first payments are to be made.

"While we can venture no opinion as to the possible deficits which may be incurred by the Federal Government in that interval, it is conceivable that Government debt in the hands of the public will have begun to shrink before 1942. It is the problem then of the effect of this new increment of demand upon prices for Government securities to which attention should be directed."

Eggs, Butter, Potatoes Sell at New Highs

Chicago, June 5 (AP).—New potatoes today sold at $5 a hundred pounds in carlots, the highest price in 5 years, a sharp gain over yesterday's level. Butter and egg futures sold at new highs for the season and in the case of November butter futures the close of 29¼ cents a pound was the highest for June in 6 years.

Drought conditions in the Southern producing area and spring frosts in the Northern section were largely responsible for the advances.

Drought Relief Study Started By Government

Congressional Delegation From Southeast Stresses Aid Need to Wallace.

A survey looking to possible aid for farmers in the drought-stricken Southeast was started yesterday by Agriculture Department experts.

The study was ordered by Secretary Henry A. Wallace after a conference with Congressional delegations from Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia who told him a serious situation existed in Alabama, Florida and North Carolina as well as their own States.

Members of the delegation said a study would be made of various proposals, among them one to increase the acreage to be taken out of cotton and tobacco production under the soil-conservation act. That policy would increase Federal payments to farmers for turning a portion of their land away from soil-depleting crops.

Those in the delegation said the Secretary was "highly sympathetic" and added they were prepared to push through any necessary legislation at this session.

Senator Russell, of Georgia, insisted it would be necessary to increase from 25 to 50 per cent the limit on each farmer's land to be taken out of tobacco and cotton production. Some had suggested an increase to 35 per cent.

Even a doubling of the quota, Russell said, would not be a solution in extreme cases. He proposed that the Resettlement Administration be called upon for aid.

The delegation apparently was agreed that withdrawal of additional acreage should be on an individual or local basis and in proportion to damage suffered.

Representative Paul Brown, of Elberton, Ga., said farmers in the far South had not lost this season's planting of cotton completely because their crop had reached considerable size before the drought's onset.

In northern Georgia and South Carolina, however, some seeds did not sprout, he said.

Representative Hampton P. Fulmer, of Orangeburg, S. C., who arranged the conference, said additional funds could be provided if it developed the Agriculture Department did not have enough for a relief program.

Representative Thomas G. Burch, of Virginia, said he told Secretary Wallace his State was suffering "the worst drought since 1930, with planting at least 33 per cent off."

The delegation said there probably would be a definite announcement from the Secretary on the relief program in two or three days.

Police Seek Killer Of Radio Singer

Dayton, Ohio, June 5 (AP).—Police here conducted an intensive search tonight for a man who shot and killed Loy Bodine, 30, radio singer, today.

The man, whose identity is known to police, laughed as he slowly walked away from the scene of the killing according to the eyewitness account given to Inspector of Detecitves B. E. Yendes, by Mrs. Elizabeth Putcheket.

Mrs. Putcheket said that when she saw Bodine fall from three bullets in his head and body, she called to the assailant, "Did you shoot that man?"

He turned to her with a smile and answered, "Why, yes I did," she said. Then he slowly waiked away.

Yendes said he learned that Bodine had been threatened by the man several times and they were engaged in an argument about a woman when the killing took place on the street here.

Bodine and Howard Keese, of Bristol, Va., had formed the radio team of Nip and Tuck, and had been heard over a number of stations in this part of the country. They recently completed an engagement over Station WWVA at Wheeling, W. Va.

Samuel Feldman Funeral Conducted

Funeral services were held at Danzansky's chapel yesterday for Samuel Feldman, 65, who died Thursday at his home, 800 Twenty-sixth street northwest. Burial was in Adas Israel Congregation Cemetery.

Mr. Feldman had lived most of his life in Washington, coming here from Russia, his birthplace, when a boy. He retired about six years ago from the shoe repair business. Surviving are two sons, Herman and Isadore Feldman, both of this city; a daughter, Mrs. Samuel Porter, of Philadelphia, and four grandchildren. He also leaves a brother, Henry Feldman, of New York City; another brother who lives in South Africa and a sister living in Montreal.

2 Die as Rain, Winds And Hail Hit Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, June 6 (AP).—Wind, rain hail and flood visited Oklahoma tonight, bringing the death toll to two and disrupting traffic.

iVrtually the entire western half of the State was affected by storms and high water.

Randall Bush, 36, an invalid, was killed near Snyder when a twister destroyed a house. Four other persons were injured and at least five other rural homes demolished.

Buddy Cleever was killed by lightning at Minco.

Wind and rainstorms damaged southern Kansas. Henry C. Harden, 45, a farmer, was killed by lightning near Eldorado, Kans.

Commissioners Rename 3 Welfare Officials

Three members of the Board of Public Welfare were re-appointed by the District Commissioners yesterday for six-year terms. Their re-appointment was recommended by Commissioner George E. Allen. Those named for the new terms were Mrs. Spencer Gordon, W. W. Spaid and Dr. Frederic W. Perkins.

4 Who Defeated NRA Lose Brooklyn Home

New York, June 5 (AP).—A bank foreclosed today on the home of the four Schechter brothers, the Brooklyn chicken dealers, whose suit before the United States Supreme Court invalidated NRA—and now they are renting at $30 a month.

The brothers—Alex, Aaron, Martin and Joseph—lacked $6,000 to pay the mortgage, and the bank would wait no longer.

Months before they won their case before the court, they lost their wholesale stores. Their brother Sam, who did not figure in the NRA action, still has a small retail store and sometimes of late he has employed Alex and Aaron at $5 a day two or three times a week.

Police Question Three in Iowa 'Extortion Plot'

Publisher, Once Object of Kidnap Attempt, Got Telephone 'Threats.'

By the Associated Press.

Davenport, Iowa, June 5.—Authorities continued their questioning tonight of a man and two women in connection with what E. P. Adler, Davenport publisher, said he was convinced was "an extortion plot against me."

A 16-year-old girl, Marie Dumond, meanwhile was taken to the local detention home where, Police Chief Sam Kelly said, officers will talk to her further tonight.

Miss Dumond, Rosemary Sankers, 18-year-old housemaid; William Trevor, 45, and Mrs. Evelyn Caffee were detained last night by police after Adler reported receiving a series of "mysterious" telephone calls.

Is Private Detective.

Trevor is a private detective in the Iowa Detective Agency operated by Mrs. Caffee's husband, A. F. Caffee. Miss Sankers is a maid in the home of Marie Dumond's father, C. M. Dumond.

The calls, Adler said, were traced to the Dumond residence. Miss Sankers admitted making the calls, Chief Kelly said.

'She said she had made calls at the request of Marie Dumond," Adler said, "and stated in her story to police that Marie told her she had something on me and was going to demand money from me."

The publisher, head of the Lee Syndicate, said no actual demand was made for money and that none was paid. He said he was convinced a "plot was concocted, but they apparently didn't go through with it."

Denied by Dumond Girl.

The Dumond girl, Adler said, denied Miss Sankers' statement "and says she had nothing to do with it and did not tell the maid to call me and knew nothing about it."

Adler two years ago escaped a kidnaping attempt in a Chicago hotel. One man hanged himself and two others received prison terms when they failed in a plot to abduct the 63-year-old publisher from his hotel room in a trunk.

Adler said yesterday's series of calls began in the afternoon with one to his office about 3:10 p. m. A woman who did not give her identity called at that time and asked him to meet her in front of a theater at 8 p. m.

"I said 'Who is calling?'" Adler explained. "She hung up. I paid no further attention to it until later in the day, when I found my housekeeper also had received telephone calls inquiring if I was home."

Warns of Disaster.

One call to the housekeeper, Adler said, instructed her to "remind Mr. Adler to keep his appointment with me at the theater this evening or it will end disastrously for him."

Adler said another call came for him at 6:15 p. m. and the same voice said:

"Don't hang up on me. Meet me at the Capital Theater at 8 o'clock. I will have on a green dress. If you don't, the same thing will happen to you that happened in Chicago."

Adler then called police, who went to the theater at the designated time, leaving Adler's car neanby. Trevor was picked up by the police at that time near the theater.

Adler said Trevor reported that while he was at dinner that evening he was called to the phone and told to have a detective at the theater at 8 p. m.

Operators of Taxicabs Get License Extension

Taxicab operators were given 15 additional days of grace to get their licenses yesterday. The taxicab license fee is $25 a year for each cab and new licenses are required on July 1. There are more than 4,000 cabs now licensed. Each must be inspected before a new yearly license is granted.

The Commissioners ordered that no arrests for failure to have the required new license should be made prior to July 15.

Green Cancels A. F. L. Support Of Lewis' Plan

Federation to Watch Drive for Unionization of Steel Industry's Workers.

By the United Press.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, yesterday withdrew his organization's active suport of a drive to unionize the Nation's steel industry.

He said the A. F. of L. will stay on the sidelines and watch what success John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization will have organizing all laborers connected with steel production into one big industrial union.

Green's statement was lacking in the "ultimatum" qualities with which he has heretofore referred to Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and chairman of the C. I. O.—now composed of ten powerful unions opposed to the craft union set-up.

The statement conceded that Lewis' courtship of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers had been successful.

"For obvious reasons," Green said, "it will now be impossible to unite and concentrate the full and complete economic, finnacial and organizing force of the American Federation of Labor in an immediate steel organizing campaign drive."

He declared that organized labor's effort for unity and solidarity had ben "thwarted" by Thursday night's agreement between Lewis and steel union heads, which placed the burly miners' leader in a dominatnig position as spokensman for labor in the Nation's coal and steel industries.

Green, in effect, challenged Lewis to "produce."

"It has been quite evident for a long time," said the A. F. of L. chief, "that those in charge of administration of the affairs of the C. I. O. were determined to experiment in the application of their one form of organization which they had so definitely espoused.

"All interested will have an opportunity to learn of the virtue, validity and success of said plan. All will await with interest the final outcome of this new organization drive in the steel manufacturing industry."

Lewis said the drive will begin "very soon." His group has pledged up to $500,000 to back the campaign.

Referring to Green's rival bargaining with the steel group, Lewis remarked, "It was like Alice in Wonderland. She could always have cake yesterday and tomorrow, never today."

Shannon Dies; Retired Army Transport Aid

He Supervised Pilgrimage of Gold-Star Mothers to France.

Lieut. Col. Robert E. Shannon, 64, retired, for many years stationed in the quartermaster's office here and supervisor of the Gold Star Mothers pilgrimage to France, died yesterday at San Antonio, Tex.

His son, Walter G. Shannon, of 3100 Connecticut avenue, left for San Antonio last night. The body is to be brought back to this city for burial in Arlington Cemetery, probably on Tuesday.

A former railroad man, Col. Shannon was in charge of the Army transport service in New York City during the war. His last Army duty in this city was in charge of the cemetarial section of the Army and transportation of all CCC camp workers.

Learn to Play the ACCORDION

On Our Rental Plan

● An easy way to learn this ever popular and fascinating instrument at a very nominal cost . . . here's how simple it is . . . you come into our store, choose an instrument, pay the $1.50 weekly rental fee, and as long as you keep the accordion we give you lessons without additional cost under the supervision of one of our staff of capable instructors. And here's the best part of the offer—if at the end of say six weeks you decide you've learned to play well enough to consider buying an accordion we'll allow you every penny you've paid in rental toward the purchase price. All you have to do is pay the $1.50 weekly rental fee (no deposit) and we teach you to play free. This extraordinary offer is open for a limited time only—so if interested come in quickly.

NED BRANT—A Story of College Athletics — By Bob Zuppke, Famous Football Coach

WELL, WE'RE ABOUT READY, IN CASE ANY OF THEM COMES YOUR DESCRIPTION OF THE FLOOD DANGER PROBABLY SCARED THEM OUT, NED
WE'VE GOT A HOUSEBOAT ON HAND BIG ENOUGH TO HAUL THEM IF THE RIVER SURROUNDS US HERE
MAYBE THE PARENTS OF THOSE YOUNGSTERS DON'T THINK WE'RE SUCH GOOD MOTHERS
HEY! HERE THEY COME—A WHOLE BUS LOAD!
THEY MUST HAVE MORE CONFIDENCE IN YOU THAN A SUSPENDER HAS IN A BUTTON, NED!
LOOKS AS THOUGH THE BOYS' CAMP WOULD BE IN OPERATION AFTER ALL, EH?

APPLE MARY — By Martha Orr

I'M SO EXCITED OVER THE WONDERFUL SUCCESS OF SALLY'S PLAN. JUST THINK, MY PICTURE'S IN HUNDREDS OF PAPERS TONIGHT.
6-6
THE GIRL WHO TOOK THE MISSING PICTURE MAY BE TRYING TO REACH ME, THIS VERY MINUTE. I'LL NEVER GET TO SLEEP TONIGHT, WONDERING AND HOPING—POOR GRAN'MA, TOO TIRED TO SLEEP, SHE SAID, BUT THE SAND-MAN GOT HER BEFORE SHE COULD EVEN GET READY FOR BED.
MARTHA ORR
I'LL NOT WAKE HER. THIS IS MY TIME TO TUCK HER IN, AND KISS HER GOODNIGHT, LIKE SHE'S ALWAYS DONE FOR ME.

Troops Ready To Stop Mobs In Farm Strike

Arkansas Tension Grows; One Jailed for Safety, Second Flees.

By the United Press.

Forrest City, Ark., June 5.—National guardsmen stood ready for instant mobilization tonight as tension rose to a new high in the trouble zone of the East Arkansas sharecropper strike.

Mob violence was threatened twice today as Sheriff J. M. Campbell jailed one man for safe keeping and State rangers escorted another past angry planters and spirited him safely out of the area to Memphis.

M. V. Moody, attorney for the Southern Tenant Farmers Union, fled to Memphis shortly after he had defended Dave M. Benson, member of the United Workers Alliance of America. Benson was convicted in justice court on charges of interfering with labor, rioting, and driving without an Arkansas license tag and without a driver's license.

Benson's conviction was appealed immediately after the trial. He still was held in jail tonight with total fines of $1,060 against him.

H. Clay East, a former president of the union, was the man jailed. Later he was turned over to State rangers who took him to Memphis.

The violence was threatened at Benson's trial. One man was reported to have struck Moody as he left the courthouse, and reportedly the assailant tried to inflame feelings of other bystanders.

Sheriff Campbell told the United Press he did not fear further violence, however, and felt that "level heads" would prevail as soon as the excitement of the trial was over. Other officials, however, were fearful violence would develop during the night.

Campbell admitted he had heard threats by several planters against "agitators and outsiders."

Benson was sent into the rich East Arkansas farm area several days ago at the request of H. L. Mitchell, secretary of the union, to aid union members who are striking for higher wages, shorter hours and collective bargaining in the cotton fields.

He was arrested as he led a group of 75 pickets in a march in St. Francis County three days ago.

Meantime, Sam E. Whitaker, special Federal investigator for Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, was expected here tonight to investigate charges of "peonage, wholesale kidnaping and violation of Federal laws" throughout the strike area.

Seek Peace.

Birmingham, Ala., June 5 (U.P.).—Violence flared sporadically in the Birmingham mine field today as 2,000 striking workers prepared to submit a peace proposal to the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

Two nonunion colored miners were the objects of the violence, first to develop since eight men were shot in guerrilla sniping during the first two days of the strike.

Lee A. Webb was beaten severely by unidentified miners. Rafe McGowan, another nonunion miner, reported four shotgun blasts were fired through his door.

Conciliators, working to end the strike which began Sunday night, were hopeful the union's compromise proposal would form a basis for peace. The iron miners struck at 6 p. m. Sunday, charging a new wage scale at that hour constituted a "stretchout" and would result in 500 men losing their jobs.

Terms of the compromise proposal were not made public.

2 Alumni Re-elected As G. W. Trustees

George Edgar Fleming, vice president and assistant trust officer of the Union Trust Co., and Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, former District Commissioner, have been re-elected alumni trustees of the George Washington University, following their nomination by vote of alumni throughout the country. Announcement of their election was made by President Cloyd H. Marvin, following the annual meeting of the board yesterday.

A third alumni trustee, Howard W. Hodgkins, of Chicago, was elected to fill the unexpired term of the late John Joy Edson. Hodgkins is a member of the law firm of Wilkinson, Huxley, Byron & Knight, of Chicago. He is the son of the late Dean Howard Lincoln Hodgkins, who for many years was a member of the university faculty.

Six members of the university's board of trustees are alumni trustees, two being named each year for three-year terms. Alumni trustees now on the board, in addition to those just elected, are Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri; Chief Justice Alfred Adams Wheat, of the Supreme Court of the District, and J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Division of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

Birth-Rate Decline Is Alarming Britons

Chicago, June 5 (A).—The English people are threatened with extinction by a "continual fall" in the nation's birth rate, the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association reported today.

The population will be reduced anywhere from one-half to one-tenth of its present size in the next 100 years if the prevailing trend continues, the correspondent said, and complete disappearance is "only a matter of time."

Schools are already being closed, he added, because there are no children to attend them.

The decline in the birth rate—steady for the last 60 years—is rapidly making Britain a nation of old people, the correspondent explained, because "improved sanitation has prolonged life" meanwhile.

U.S. Transfers $50,000,000 In Bonus Bonds

Treasury Guards, Secret Service Deliver Issue to Postoffice.

Approximately $50,000,000 in veterans' bonus bonds changed hands yesterday, passing from the Treasury to the Postoffice Department on their way to the ex-soldiers who will receive them on and after June 15.

While postal guards and Secret Service men scrutinized onlookers and kept ready fingers near their gun holsters, the first trucks were loaded at the Internal Revenue building whence they proceeded cautiously to the city postoffice.

In the first consignment were 100,000 envelopes packed in steel tanks. Each envelope was filled with one or more of the $50 bonus bonds, plus a check for amounts due which are less than $50. That is, if the veteran is entitled to $765, he will receive 15 bonds and a check for $15.

The city postoffice, which is now responsible for the fortune in its hands, will give extraordinary protection to the valuable paper not only in transit but also while it is stored here preparatory to shipment.

Arrangements for the transfer, which began yesterday and which will continue daily, were made at a conference between Postmaster Vincent C. Burke, Edwin F. Kilby, assistant commissioner of the Public Debt Service, and Marvin Wesley, chief of the division of loans and currency, Treasury Department.

Artificial Radium Discovery Is Told

London, June 5 (A).—Discovery of a form of artificial radium which may help the fight against cancer was described tonight by Mme. Irene Joliot-Curie, Nobel prize winner, in a lecture at the international clinic of the medical association.

Mme. Joliot-Curie, undersecretary for scientific research in the new French cabinet of Leon Blum, is a daughter of the late Mme. Marie Curie, co-discoverer of radium, used extensively for cancer. She won the Nobel prize in chemistry last year with her husband.

She explained how, by atom-splitting methods, a vast range of chemicals could be given some active properties of radium, and claimed it would be possible to apply these radio-active substances by injection.

Although they cannot yet be produced in sufficient quantities to compete with natural radium for external use, these substances soon will be available in amounts large enough to be administered internally, Mme. Joliot-Curie said.

a week. There was wide speculation over possibility of early devaluation of the franc.

After a two-hour meeting, the cabinet announced that "the government has decided to do its utmost to conclude a rapid and happy solution of the strikes."

The cabinet approved Blum's ministerial declaration, which he will read to the chamber tomorrow.

Minister of Interior Roger Salengro summoned Leon Jouhaux, leader of the Confederation of Labor, to a conference, at which Jouhaux said he was unable to halt the strikes. Salengro brought pressure on large factory owners to resume negotiations with the "folded arms army."

Mines Shut Down.

The Anzin and Denain coal mines, largest in France, were forced to suspend operation.

Officials urged owners of flour mills and oil companies to "attempt an immediate termination of the strikes" in order to assure Paris of ample supplies.

Department stores joined the strike at noon, locking the doors and holding all girl clerks inside. Customers, attempting to make last minute purchases, were pushed out by sturdy floor walkers.

Seven hundred workers at the Aeronautical Construction Works at Bordeaux joined the strike. Five hundred remained in the plant.

Housewives, fearing a food shortage, swamped grocery stores and meat markets, preparing for a "siege."

The central markets functioned normally under heavy police protection. A police platoon, stationed at the city gate, prevented strikers from obstructing incoming carts loaded with fruit and vegetables. Seven hundred Paris butchers struck. With cleavers in hand, they stood guard around the slaughter houses. The Paris meat supply was cut in half.

One hundred tourists were marooned in the Majestic Hotel when porters, cooks, bell hops, elevator operators and maids struck, obliging the guests to make their own beds, get their own ice water, climb numerous flights of stairs, etc. The guests included Chilean Ambassador Rivas Vicuna and Uruguayan Minister Manex and their families.

All film printing firms except Paramount's closed, preventing duplication of practically all American films.

The syndicate of Paris newspaper publishers asked Salengro for authorization to publish tomorrow. Most newspapers have not appeared for two days. The semi-official Le Temps published four copies today to keep its files complete.

Miss Keady Elected By Chest Council

Miss Anna J. Keady, head resident of the Christ Child Settlement, was elected president of the Community Chest Executives' Council at a meeting yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. Maj. Campbell C. Johnson was elected treasurer and A. Boyd Hinds, assistant director of the Chest, secretary.

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, new superintendent of the National Training School for Girls, spoke of the objectives of that institution. She told of the splendid co-operative spirit shown by social workers here and expressed the hope of eventually formulating a constructive and helpful vocational program for the girls of the school.

Elwood Street, director of the Board of Public Welfare, talked on co-operation between private and public social work agencies, declaring that the two are merely branches of a community program which both must aid in carrying out.

Ray H. Everett presided.

Blast at Home Of Official Laid To Black Legion

Plot to Kill President of Detroit Suburb Is Told by Suspect.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 5.—An attempt by the Black Legion to enforce its political demands with a bomb plot against the life of a suburban village president was charged today as rumors of two other death conspiracies met prompt denials.

Political implications of the secret society are being considered by State officials directing grand jury inquiries into several floggings, unexplained deaths and arson cases, and by advocates of a Congressional investigation of the night-riding band.

Frederick A. Gulley, one of nine men charged with kidnaping and flogging Robert Penlan for non-attendance at Black Legion meetings, told detectives legion members planned at an open-air meeting to kill William Voisine, president of Ecorse, whom they opposed on religious grounds.

A bomb exploded at Voisine's home the night of August 7, 1935, but the official, his wife and their son, in the house, were not injured.

Rumors the Black Legion was responsible for a black powder bomb that caused slight damage at the home of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Royal Oak, Mich., priest, three years ago, were derisively denied by Dayton Dean, confessed "executioner" of the terrorists, who has said he will plead guilty to the kidnaping and murder of Charles A. Poole May 12. It was Poole's death which led to the unmasking of widespread Black Legion activity.

Emphatic denial that Louis Sherry, Ford Motor Co. employe who died after eating a poisoned sandwich April 1, 1935, might have been a Black Legion victim, came from Harry H. Bennett, company personnel director. He said there was no reason whatever for such belief and that a satisfactory solution was discovered at the time of his death.

Whether any action will be taken against David C. Pence, prosecutor of Oakland County (Pontiac), who announced he had attended meetings of a club found to be affiliated with the Black Legion, will be determinated early next week, Attorney General David H. Crowley said today. He planned to confer with Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald, who said at Lansing:

"If Pence took part in Black Legion activities in Oakland County, and it were proven before me in a hearing, I would remove him from office."

A grand jury inquiry of Black Legion activity in Oakland County, where a citizens' committee has charged several officials were involved with the secret terrorists, will open next Wednesday.

Bank Bandits Use Grenades, Take $10,000

Gang Forces Cashier at Little Ferry, N. J., to Open Vault.

By the Associated Press.

Little Ferry, N. J., June 5.—An intensive police manhunt ranged through Bergen County tonight for a bandit gang which robbed the Little Ferry National Bank, using hand grenades as part of their holdup equipment. The loot was placed at more than $10,000.

A concentration of more than 200 policemen, all heavily armed and ready to shoot it out, hunted systematically through the Moonachie-Wood Ridge area, a few miles from here, where the bandits were reported seen a few hours after the holdup.

The robbery was executed with precision and dispatch. No customers were in the bank when the band entered, led by a man wearing a handkerchief over the lower part of his face. One bandit carried a sub-machine gun, the others revolvers and hand grenades.

"We're not fooling," the leader shouted to the four bank employes on duty when he announced it was a holdup.

Herding the employes ahead of them, the bandits went from cage to cage gathering up cash. Then they forced the cashier, Peter A. Wiseman, to open the vault. It was Wiseman who reported seeing the hand grenades.

The getaway was made in an automobile. Bank employes said four participated in the robbery, while a fifth waited at the wheel of the car outside.

It was the sixth daring major holdup in this area, home of many New York commuters, in the last several months. Five were banks, and the sixth the robbery of a commuter-thronged Erie Railroad train.
